Fall Term enrollment reaches record 12,350

Sparked by an 8 percent increase in full-time students, Marshall University has enrolled a record 12,350 for the Fall Term, according to preliminary figures released by MU President Dale F. Nitzschke.

"The surge in full-time students, from 7,608 last fall to 8,226 this year, is a dramatic, encouraging development and bodes well for the future progress of Marshall," Nitzschke said.

Registrar Robert H. Eddins said the total of 12,350 students this fall represents an increase of about 3 percent over last year's record 12,030 students. He said enrollment of part-time students declined slightly, from 4,430 to 4,124.

Nitzschke said he believed crowded conditions had discouraged many potential students, both full-time and part-time, from attending Marshall this fall.

"At one point during the summer, advance registration was running 22 percent ahead of the same date the previous year," he noted. "Residence halls were filled early and we simply ran out of classes people wanted - and faculty to teach them. As it is, we're literally bulging at the seams and I don't know how we could accommodate more students without additional financial resources."

Eddins said a breakdown on enrollments by class and college will be available as figures are refined during the next two weeks. Official enrollment figures will be reported by the West Virginia Board of Regents next month.

Recommendations from Publications Committee:

1. That the budget for the Chief Justice be approved.
2. Whereas, the Chief Justice is the single item produced by the university that most accurately and concisely portrays the activities of students, faculty and staff over the longest span of time, thereby providing historical continuity in an otherwise temporary society;

Whereas, the Publications Committee supports the continued publication of the Chief Justice without sacrificing its quality or size; and

Whereas, the Chief Justice has received an increase in allocation from student fees totaling 55 cents since 1958 while student activity fees have increased from $17.50 to $148 in the same period of time;

Resolved, that the Publications Committee recommends that the Chief Justice be allowed to apply for another increase in allocation from student fees in the fall semester, 1988, in order to maintain its present size and content.
