FRESHMEN-TO-BE TOUR MARSHALL

Standing on the back steps of Old Main, Marshall University's oldest building, a group of campus newcomers receives directions to one of the newer buildings during a recent tour of the campus. The tours are just one facet of Marshall's New Student Information Program (NSIP), a series of two-day orientation sessions for transfer students, freshmen-to-be and their parents. Nearly 1,400 new students registered for Marshall's fall term during the first seven NSIP sessions this summer, compared with 1,275 last summer. Another session will begin Sunday, Aug. 28, the day before regular registration for the fall term, Aug. 29-30.

Old Main first floor offices re-numbered

The offices on the first floor of Old Main were re-numbered earlier this week, so that the numbers run in sequence, with the even numbers on the north side of the hallway and the odds on the south side.

"Although there may be a little confusion at first, this numbering system should make it easier to direct people around the first floor office complex," said Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president for administrative services.

The new numbers are:

--Registrar's Office	104
--University Relations	112
--Institutional Planning	114
--Regents BA Program	116
--Graduate School	118
--Housing	120
--Student Affairs	122
--Financial Aid	126
--MU Theater Box Office	107
--Development	109
--Dean, College of Arts & Sciences	111
--College of Arts & Sciences	113
--College of Science	115
--Administrative Services	115
--Work-Study	121
--Admissions	125

Feaganes to head Big Green Foundation

Joe Feaganes, Marshall University golf coach and former Mid-American Conference champion, has been named executive director of the Big Green Scholarship Foundation, according to Joe McMullen, athletics director.

Feaganes, 33, becomes the first full-time director of the Big Green. His appointment was termed a "significant move in Marshall's total athletic program and its drive for excellence." He assumed his new role Aug. 1.

Women's open house scheduled for August 26

"Bigger and better" is how Marshall University Admissions Director James W. Harless describes Marshall's third annual Open House for Women, scheduled Friday, Aug. 26, at 1:30 p.m., in the Alumni Lounge of Memorial Student Center.

The program is designed as an aid to women who have been out of school for several years and who are considering returning to the classroom, Harless said.

"It is geared to all age groups and types--the young housewife, the career woman and the grandmother--who think they might like to take a few courses or work toward a degree," he added.

"Our past programs have been very successful, but this year we thought we'd try a different approach," Harless said. We are going to have several women who've successfully re-entered the education process give first hand accounts of how they rearranged their normal routines to take classes," Harless said.

"These women can explain just how it feels to return to campus, how they coped with registration and how they related to the younger students. And for the first time, we will offer the husband's side of the story. We will have a husband discuss how he coped with his wife's added role as a student," Harless said.

Dorm residents parking

A special reserved parking lot will be available this fall for residence hall students who bring their cars to campus but who use them infrequently during the week, according to Dr. Richard G. Fisher, vice president for student affairs.

"The lot will hold 250 cars and will be located near Third Avenue and 18th Street," Fisher said. "It is intended for the dormitory residents who want to leave their cars in a secure area for a relatively long period of time."

The procedure for applications will be announced to residence hall students at the beginning of the fall term, Fisher said. There will be a $3 per semester fee to cover the cost of parking lot decals and processing.
