De Blij, Queen to be honored May 11

An internationally-renowned geographer and a retired Huntington business leader will receive honorary degrees at Marshall University's Commencement exercises Saturday, May 11, according to MU Interim President Alan B. Gould.

Receiving the awards will be Dr. Harm J. de Blij, professor of geography at the University of Miami (Florida), and Glenn J. Queen of Huntington, former operator of the Tradewell group of supermarkets.

De Blij also will be the Commencement speaker, Gould said. The Commencement program, to be held in the Huntington Civic Center, will begin at 11 a.m.

Gould said Queen's service to Marshall spans 45 years,

Free speech forum scheduled April 30

A forum on "Free Speech and Hate Speech" will be held at Marshall University on Tuesday, April 30, at 7 p.m. in the W. Don Morris Room in Memorial Student Center, according to Dr. Betty J. Cleckley, vice president for multicultural affairs at Marshall.

Guest speakers will be Mary Anne Case, associate professor at the University of Virginia School of Law, and Jerome M. Culp, professor of law at the Duke University School of Law.

Ms. Case, whose presentation will be titled "The Sound of Silence," graduated from Yale University with honors in history, the arts and letters and English. She received her law degree from Harvard University and has studied at the University of London, the University of Paris-Sorbonne and Ludwig Maximilians Universitaet in Munich.

She has been associated with several prestigious law firms in New York and has had several articles concerning feminist jurisprudence published in journals.

Culp's presentation will be titled "Crying Nigger on a Crowded Campus: Property in the First Amendment."

He is a graduate of the University of Chicago and the Harvard University Law School. In 1987, he was the MacArthur Distinguished Scholar at the Joint Center for Political Studies.

Currently director of the John M. Olin Program in Law and Economics at Duke, Culp has held faculty appointments at the University of Michigan School of Law and served as a visiting professor at the Rutgers University Law School.

He has published numerous articles on civil rights issues, affirmative action and employment policies and highlighted by his 1986 contribution of $100,000 to the Society of Yeager Scholars project, helping to initiate the program. In 1988 he established an endowment to support Marshall faculty travel, research and other scholarly activities.

A Wayne County, W.Va., native, Queen was offered a basketball scholarship by Marshall Coach Cam Henderson, but instead entered the U.S. Marine Corps, serving in World War II. Following the war, he started his business career with a small grocery in Wayne, building it into the successful Tradewell group.

Queen has served as president of the National Retail Grocers Association, the West Virginia Retail Grocers Association and as a member of the Board of Directors of the Food Marketing Institute. He received the Sidney R. Rabb Award, considered the most prestigious award in the food industry, in 1988.

De Blij, considered one of the nation's foremost geographers, served as the occupant of Marshall's Drinko Distinguished Chair in Liberal Arts last fall.

In addition to his work at the University of Miami, he holds a professional appointment with the National Geographic Society and frequently appears on ABC TV's "Good Morning, America" program. He has written,

Honors director named

Dr. Marjorie L. McInerney, associate professor of management at Marshall University, has been named director of University Honors, according to Dr. Rainey Duke, acting associate provost.

Dr. McInerney received her bachelor's degree in business administration from the University of Akron in 1975, her master's degree in business administration from Marshall in 1977 and her doctorate in business administration from Ohio State University in 1983.

A member of the Marshall faculty since 1976, Dr. McInerney has written numerous papers for professional journals and publications and has served as a consultant on business issues in many areas of the country. She also has been the recipient of a number of grants and awards.

The director of University Honors is responsible for

Library Associates reprinting book

The Marshall University Library Associates organization is publishing a limited edition of "Personal Recollections of Private John Henry Cammack: A Soldier of the Confederacy, 1861-1865," which was first published in Huntington in 1920 by Paragon Printing.

Dr. Kenneth T. Slack, executive secretary of the organization and Confederate bibliographer for the Marshall University libraries, said the book was written by Cammack at the urging of his family and friends. He called practices and served as senior editor of the Harvard Civil Rights-Civil Liberties Law Review and Law and Contemporary Problems.

"This forum represents a small part of the university's efforts to examine the complex issues of free speech and hate speech," said Dr. Cleckley.

The forum will be open to the public free of charge. It is being sponsored by Marshall University's Office of Multicultural Affairs, Commission on Multiculturalism, Classified Staff Council, Faculty Senate, Student Government Association, Black United Students and Office of Student Affairs.

maintaining the program's budget, planning and administering an academic program, maintaining a student and scholarship database, advising John Marshall scholars, participating in freshman orientation and SCORES, recruiting high school seniors, coordinating and reporting to the Honors Council, planning and coordinating the Honors Convocation and generally maintaining a high profile for the Honors Program.

Dr. McInerney will succeed Dr. Donna J. Spindel, professor of history, who will complete a three-year tenure as Honors director in May.

co-authored or edited 32 books and more than 80 scholarly articles. He served as editor of the National Geographic Society's "National Geographic Research: A Scientific Journal."

De Blij was a central figure in the so-called "Miami Exposure" of geographic illiteracy in America which led to U.S. Senate hearings and a joint resolution of Congress establishing "Geography Awareness Week."

Marshall expects to award more than 1,800 degrees at the May 11 Commencement.

it an exciting account of a boy soldier facing the personal and national agony of the war between the states.

The original book is one of the rarest items in the confederate experience and is sought by collectors throughout the country, according to Slack. Approximately 50 copies of the book were printed in 1920.

When he was 17 years old, Cammack and his 23-year-old brother joined the Confederate army. Cammack's brother was killed approximately three months later.

"John Henry Cammack was very proud of his service," said Slack. "It wasn't a slavery issue with him. It was about states' rights and, as he saw the situation, about the same issues fought for in the Revolutionary War.

"Private Cammack understood, and articulated, the southern striving for state and individual rights and freedoms and his words carry conviction even to this day."

Slack said the MU Library Associates could not have found a more appropriate volume to be the organization's first keepsake edition.

"In it is revealed the spirit which drove Huntington's first families to tremendous civic and professional accomplishment," Slack said. "John Henry Cammack effectively communicated his community concerns to succeeding generations of his family.

"It really is a good book. He tells about one experience after another and there isn't one that doesn't just set you on the edge of your seat."

Cammack was the great-great-grandfather of William C. Campbell of Huntington, a former chairman of the MU Library Associates.

The Marshall University Library Associates was formed to provide support for Marshall's libraries, enhance the prestige and service of the institution and, in so doing, advance the cultural and economic status of the Tri-State region.

The pre-publication cost of the book will be $16. After publication the cost will be $20. To order copies or obtain further details contact Slack at Marshall University's James E. Morrow Library, 696-3097.

Faculty wives to meet

The Marshall University Faculty Wives Club will meet for a spring luncheon on Saturday, May 4, at noon in the Shawkey Room in Memorial Student Center.

The program, "Faculty Wives, Daughters and Grandchildren in High Style," will feature fashions from Penney's. The program will be coordinated by Avis Heger. Hostesses will be Jacqueline Alexander and Judy Deutsch.

Faculty invited to dinner

Dr. and Mrs. Alan B. Gould cordially invite all full-time faculty members to a dinner buffet for faculty on Saturday, May 11, from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Marshall University president's house, 1040 13th Ave.

Departments request space be reassigned

Marshall University's Physical Facilities and Planning Committee of the Faculty Senate has received several requests to return space that will be vacated next fall following the completion of the Science Building and the football stadium, according to Steven Mewaldt, committee chairman.

The requests are from the departments or colleges which formerly utilized the space and were displaced by the closing of the Science Building or expansion of the athletic ticket office.

The committee voted to grant the following requests pending their publication in the Marshall University Newsletter to allow for the possibility of competing claims.

If there are competing claims or requests for other space which will be vacated, please forward them to Steven Mewaldt.

Space to be returned includes: Health, Physical Education and Recreation--Gullickson Hall 1a-d, 109-112 and 115; Psychology Department--Harris Hall 129; College of Education--Harris Hall 116, Jenkins Hall B5-B7.

'Antigone' now playing

"Antigone," the final play of the Marshall University Theatre 1990-91 academic season, will be held April 25-27 at 8 p.m. in Old Main Theatre.

Dr. N.B. East, director of the play, said "Antigone" explores the conflicts arising between characters who do what is expected of them and those who do what they know is right.

Written during the Nazi occupation of France by Jean Anouilh and adapted by Lewis Galantieri, the play is based on the myths of ancient Greece. It has become recognized as one of the finest examples of 20th Century tragedy.

Tickets will be $4 and may be purchased at the Theatre Box Office, Old Main Room B23. Tickets also may be ordered by calling 696-ARTS.

Art exhibit planned

"Works in Fiber," a graduate art exhibition by Susan Carlson Scott, will open April 29 and continue through May 4 in Birke Art Gallery.

A candidate for the master of arts degree in fiber, Ms. Scott received a degree in teaching of art from Buffalo State College and a bachelor's degree in painting and sculpture from Fredonia State.

She is a graduate assistant in the MU Art Department where she teaches art education. She also teaches in the Art Awareness Program for third-graders at the Huntington Museum of Art and teaches in Marshall's Art Opportunity Program.

There will be a reception in Ms. Scott's honor on Saturday, May 4, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the gallery.

MARSHALL SUPPORTERS RECOGNIZED

Two couples who have made major contributions to Marshall University programs over many years were recognized at the university's annual Honors Convocation April 8. Receiving Distinguished Service awards were Glenn J. and Carol Booth Queen and John A. and Reba Light Goodno. Pictured, from left, are Mr. and Mrs. Queen, Mr. Goodno and MU Interim President Alan B. Gould, who presented the plaques. Mrs. Goodno was not able to attend the ceremony.

Utah woman makes contribution to MU

A Logan, Utah, woman has endowed a scholarship in The Marshall University Foundation, Inc., in memory of her mother, Dixie Dale Roach Franklin.

Dr. Edward G. "Ned" Boehm Jr., Marshall vice president for institutional advancement, said the daughter, Dixie L. Franklin, contributed $10,000 for a scholarship to be awarded to a College of Business student with financial need.

Ms. Franklin said her mother, who attended school through the ninth grade, was interested in education throughout her life. A Huntington native, Mrs. Franklin died in 1988 at age 77.

When she was 13, Mrs. Franklin, a student of piano and organ, played the piano during silent movies at a Huntington theater on Twentieth Street and Third Avenue. At the age of 14, she went to work in a dress factory. Mrs. Franklin later graduated from business and secretarial school and became a notary public and was a well-known antique dealer for 40 years.

Mrs. Franklin was the mother of five children, including one who graduated from Marshall, and grandmother of nine.

France honors Guttman

Dr. Jacqueline M. Guttman of Marshall University's Department of Modern Languages has been awarded the title of "Chevalier des Palmes Academiques" by the French Minister of Education for "services rendered to French culture."

A representative of the French Embassy in New York City presented the medal to Dr. Guttman during a reception Tuesday, April 23, at the Marshall University president's house.

Committee endorses recommendations

Library Committee meets

(The following report on the April 9 meeting of the Marshall University Library Committee was submitted by Sara B. Staats, secretary.)

The Library Committee met Tuesday, April 9, at 2 p.m. with James Douglass, chairman, presiding. Ten members were present and seven members were absent.

The main agenda item was the library's Mission Statement which was prepared by the librarians during the year. Josephine Fidler, director of libraries, presided over the discussion of the statement and its implications.

The Mission Statement is a stand-alone document to be used by the library as a foundation for its goals, objectives and programs.

Several suggestions were made by committee members and noted by Ms. Fidler for further consideration. Input also will be sought from the provost and the Faculty Senate.

Dr. Douglass will send a letter to department chairs requesting them to discuss with their faculties what their perception of the library is and what new directions they think the library should be taking.

These will be discussed at the next meeting of the committee, which will be held Tuesday, April 30, at 2 p.m. Election of officers will be held during the meeting.

Homecoming event scheduled

In anticipation of the 21st anniversary of the Marshall Catholic Community and the 10th anniversary of the Marshall Newman Center, an open house and mass are being planned in conjunction with Marshall University Homecoming activities next Nov. 2.

Father Bill Petro of the Newman Center is requesting that all Marshall alumni, current students and former Marshall Catholic Community members contact him at the Newman Center, 1609 Fifth Ave., or call 525-4618.

A mailing list is being compiled so those planning to attend can be mailed up-to-date information.

Dyer elected to board

Shirley S. Dyer, assistant director of printing services in the Marshall University Publications Office, was the winner of the April 23 Classified Staff election to determine the Classified Staff representative to the Marshall University Institutional Board of Advisors. Her term on the board will begin May 1, 1991.

additions and deletions were recommended for approval.

Dr. Edwina Pendarvis presented the report of the Standards Subcommittee. They discussed the discrepancy between the graduate and undergraduate policy on seniors' eligibility for enrollment in graduate courses.

The committee recommended for approval the adoption of the graduate college policy permitting seniors with a 3.0 or better grade point average to enroll in graduate courses.

The second issue was a request to consider a new policy requiring faculty members to submit their syllabi to be kept on file with the appropriate chairperson. Rationale: Such a procedure would avoid problems arising as a result if faculty members are not available when their syllabi are needed—for example during grade appeals or accreditation visits.

The committee endorses the recommendation that instructors must file a copy of their syllabi with the chairperson during the first two weeks of each semester class (three days of summer term).

Summer School Issue: Several faculty members had recommended to lengthen individual summer school classes by 26 minutes so as to reduce the summer school week to four days. The motion was defeated.

Withdrawal Policy: The policy was vetoed by the president. The committee discussed the concerns of the president relating to this policy. Some changes were made and the Withdrawal Policy will be resubmitted to the Faculty Senate for approval.

High school symposium slated

The Huntington Regional Chamber of Commerce will host a High School Business Symposium at Marshall University on Wednesday, May 1, from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the W. Don Morris Room in Memorial Student Center.

The purpose of the symposium is to acquaint area high school juniors and seniors with entrepreneurship and the free enterprise system, according to Elaine Hayslett, program director of Marshall's Small Business Development Center.

Students from 11 Tri-State high schools have been invited to participate in the program, which will include a series of computer simulation exercises designed to help participants understand the process of making business decisions.

Robert Carlson, publisher/president of the Huntington Herald-Dispatch and a former business owner, will deliver the keynote address during a luncheon at noon in Memorial Student Center.

The event is being co-sponsored by the Marshall University Small Business Development Center, The First Huntington National Bank, Guaranty National Bank, WKEE Radio and Subway.

To obtain further details contact the Marshall University Small Business Development Center, 696-6798.

Special provisions for handicapped persons may be made by contacting the center prior to the seminar.

Marshall faculty/staff achievements

DONNALEE COCKRILLE, coordinator of women's programs at Marshall University, made a presentation titled "Alcohol and Violence Against Women" for the West Virginia Collegiate Drug and Alcohol Consortium on March 19.

Dr. WILLIAM A. McDOWELL, counseling and rehabilitation professor, co-authored a paper titled "A Holistic Approach to Infection" which was published in the 1991 March/April issue of Advancing Clinical Care.

RONALD L. MARTINO, associate professor of geology, presented two papers at the Geological Society of America combined Northeast and Southeast regional meeting held March 14-15 in Baltimore. "Facies Analysis of Middle Pennsylvania Marine Units, Southern West Virginia" was an invited paper that was included in a symposium on "Pennsylvania Marine Zones of the Appalachian Basin." The second paper, "Cyclic Tidal Sedimentation in the Lower Breathitt Formation (Lower-Middle Pennsylvania) in Eastern Kentucky," was co-authored by DEWEY D. SANDERSON, professor of geology. MARTINO also has had an article titled "Limnopus trackways from the Glenshaw Formation (Late Pennsylvanian), Southern West Virginia" accepted for publication in The Journal of Paleontology this fall.

Dr. DAVE WALKER, associate professor of computer science, is the co-author of an invited paper titled "Coal Characterization by Programmed-Temperature Oxidation" which will be presented at the Electric Power Research Institute Second International Symposium on the Biological Processing of Coal being held May 1-3 in San Diego. Dr. Robert LaCount of ViRoLac Industries in Waynesburg, Pa., is the senior author.

ROBERT BICKEL and LINDA SPATIG of the Educational Foundations Department were co-chairs of a paper session titled "The Circumstances of Teaching in Appalachia" at the national meeting of the Comparative and International Education Society held March 14-17 in Pittsburgh. Other presenters were GEORGE ARTHUR and STEVE BANKS of Educational Foundations and Shay Sargent of Enslow Middle School. ARTHUR chaired a panel on "Education and Changing Social Realities in Africa" and presented a paper titled "The Political Economy of Educational Reforms in Ghana."

Dr. RICHARD J. BALTARO, assistant professor of pathology, recently co-authored two papers published in the American Review of Respiratory Diseases (the journal of the American Lung Association). The papers were titled "Immunoglobulin G Antineutrophil Cytoplasmic Antibodies Are Produced in the Respiratory Tract of Patients with Wegener's Granulomatosis" and "Bronchoalveolar Lavage Analysis in Wegener's Granulomatosis: A Method to Study Disease Pathogenesis."

Faculty members who attended the annual meeting of the Appalachian Section of the American Association of Physics Teachers held recently at West Virginia Institute of Technology were Drs. R. ELWYN BELLIS, WARREN L. DUMKE, NICOLA ORSINI and WESLEY SHAN-HOLTZER. BELLIS presented a paper titled "Aerodynamic Drag Causes and its Effect on Falling Objects." A highlight of the business meeting was the presentation of the 1990 Distinguished Service Award to Dr. THOMAS MANAKKIL, professor of physics and university radiation safety officer. MANAKKIL was cited for his long, dedicated service and many papers presented in the AAPT at the regional and national levels. MANAKKIL has served as the section representative to the National Council of AAPT for many years and has served as vice president and president of the Appalachian Section.

Dr. BETTY JOAN JARRELL, chair and associate professor in the Marshall University Community and Technical College Division of Business Technology, served as chair of the On-Site Accreditation Team visit for the Association of Collegiate Business Schools and Programs at Lima (Ohio) Technical College March 10-13. ACBSP is a national association that offers accreditation to two-year business technology programs.

Fouch receives honor

Robert L. Fouch of Petersburg, a senior journalism major at Marshall University, received a fourth place scholarship of $500 in the William Randolph Hearst Foundation's 31st annual Journalism Awards Program.

He received the prestigious award in the Sports Writing competition for an article he did on the 20th anniversary of the plane crash that took the lives of the 1970 Marshall University football team, its coaches, the flight crew and several MU officials and local supporters.

The Hearst Foundation will make a matching grant to Marshall in honor of Fouch's achievement.

The awards program is conducted under the auspices of accredited schools of the Association of Schools of Journalism and Mass Communications, and is fully funded and administered by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

It consists of six monthly writing contests, a photojournalism competition and a broadcast news competition, with championship finals in all three divisions.

Ninety accredited schools of undergraduate journalism in the United States currently participate in the program, which annually awards $218,600 in scholarships and grants.

Symphony concert set

Soloists Branita Holbrook and Laura Hodgkin will be featured during the Marshall University Symphony Orchestra Concert on Tuesday, April 30, at 8 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall.

Under the direction of Michael McArtor, the orchestra will perform works by Beethoven, Max Bruch, Mozart, Gounod, Dvorak and Alexander Borodin.

The concert will be open to the public free of charge. To obtain further details contact the Marshall University Department of Music, 696-3117.

Aulick research may help burn victims

A Marshall University School of Medicine researcher is on the trail of a molecule in the blood that may someday improve burn victims' chances of survival.

Dr. Louis H. Aulick, professor of physiology, is working under a $34,000 grant from the U.S. Army Medical Research and Development Command to locate and analyze a molecule believed responsible for suppressing the immune systems of burn victims. The immune systems of all burn patients fail to go into action, according to Aulick, and it is infection rather than burns that often leads to death.

By studying the blood of burned laboratory rats Aulick has already isolated what he believes is the inhibitor to interleukin-1, a powerful substance critically important in the body's response to injury and disease. "Interleukin-1 serves to actuate almost the entire immune system," Aulick said. "If anything blocks interleukin-1 the immune system is depressed."

The target of the pilot study is to determine what the inhibitor is and how it acts. Aulick plans to seek an additional Army grant this spring to accomplish the next step, which is to get the inhibitor in a pure enough state so that it can be synthesized in the laboratory.

His findings may have research implications beyond the burn response itself. An inhibitor with characteristics similar to the one under study in Aulick's lab is known to block interleukin-1 in AIDS patients, he said.

In addition, Aulick has found some of the inhibitor in the blood of control animals. "The inhibitor may be part of the normal control process of interleukin-1, and we may be seeing a normal control mechanism much accentuated in burns," he said. "We are at the frontier of knowledge at the molecular level."

Purification and synthesis of the inhibitor are crucial for the further study needed before any clinical applications of his work are possible.

"If we can produce pure inhibitor, we can then make an antibody to counteract it," Aulick explained. The next step would be to administer the antibody to burned rats, then watch for fever and other signs that the inhibitor was no longer suppressing the immune system. Clinical trials with humans would come later.

Aulick has experience working directly with human burn patients. He came to the Marshall University School of Medicine in 1984 following nearly ten years at the Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas where burn victims from all over the country are treated. He worked as a researcher in the center's burn unit. The Army has continued to support Aulick's research at Marshall, awarding him $123,000 in 1987 to study the metabolic rates of burn victims.

Aulick received a Ph.D. in physiology and biochemistry and an M.A. in physiology from Indiana University. He also has undergraduate degrees from William and Mary and the Medical College of Virginia.

Medical researchers honored

Three research projects by medical students, residents and faculty were singled out for honors at the Marshall University School of medicine's Fourth Annual Research Day.

The program, held April 9 at the Holiday Inn-Gateway in Barboursville, featured 52 presentations describing the work of 111 researchers. Project categories were basic science, clinical science, and clinical case studies. Prize winners received a plaque and cash award.

Thomas P. Salazar, a Ph.D. candidate in microbiology at Marshall, won the award for best basic science presentation. Her project, co-authored by Dr. Terry W. Fonger, associate professor of microbiology, was "Characterization of Genes Determining Herpes Simplex Virus Type-1 Ocular Disease Patterns."

Jaime Hernandez, M.D., a resident who holds a fellowship in infectious diseases, won the prize for best clinical case study. Hernandez's project was "Successful Treatment of Post-Traumatic Candida Myocarditis with Surgery and Amphotericin B followed by Long Term Suppression Therapy with Fluconazole." Co-authors were Dr. Haytham Jabi, assistant professor of medicine, and Dr. Lorenzo Gonzales-Lavin, professor of surgery. Glaxo, Inc., a pharmaceutical company, sponsored the clinical case study award.

Cynthia Gonzalez, M.D., a resident with a fellowship in pulmonary medicine, won the Lester R. Bryant, M.D., Research Award for Clinical Science. Her project was titled "An Evaluation of PImax and PEmax as Predictors of Postoperative Pulmonary Complications." Co-authors were Dr. Kuldeep Pandit, associate professor of medicine; Dr. Nancy Munn, associate professor of medicine; Dr. Manoj Majmudar, formerly at Marshall under a pulmonary medicine fellowship; and Henry K. Driscoll, assistant professor of medicine.

The clinical science award honors Bryant, the former medical school dean who instituted Research Day at Marshall.
