Summer enrollment is up 7 pct.

A total of 3,789 students are enrolled for the first summer term at Marshall University, an increase of almost 7 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Figures released by Registrar Robert H. Eddins again reflect the university's continued growth pattern with a 31.7 per cent increase in total freshman enrollment and an even greater 50 per cent increase in part-time freshman enrollment.

Last year's first summer term enrollment totaled 3,543. The overall percentage of increase for the current term is 6.9 per cent.

Enrollment gains for the term are posted in all areas except the College of Education which declined an overall 17.9 per cent (195 students less), Eddins reported. However, he pointed out that such declines have been experienced nationwide for the past few years due to a surplus of teachers.

The College of Arts and Sciences gained 246 students over last year for an increase of 35.1 per cent; the College of Business and Applied Science gained 109 students for a 20.4 per cent increase, and the Graduate School gained 86 students for a 7.0 per cent boost.

Eddins attributed the overall increase to several factors including the university's new emphasis on opportunities for part-time students, the availability of many new programs and the "tight" job market.
