Med School names librarian, Beckley leader

The Marshall University School of Medicine and Associated Health Professions has announced the appointments of the chief administrator for its Beckley, W. Va., campus, and of a director for its libraries.

Dr. Robert C. Parlett, dean of the medical school and vice president for health sciences at Marshall, made the announcement.

Dr. Guy C. Hollifield of Beckley has been appointed the first full time faculty member (professor of medicine) and associate dean for clinical affairs -- Beckley campus. He also will serve as chairman of the Dean's Committee for the two Veterans Administration hospitals (Beckley and Huntington) affiliated with the new medical school.

Miss Ann L. Howard, an Ashland, Ky., native, has been appointed director of health sciences libraries for the medical school. She is responsible for developing the main medical school library and for satellite library development in the medical school's affiliated locations. Hollifield, who earned his M.D. from the University of Virginia School of Medicine, recently has served as consultant to the Beckley Veterans Administration Hospital and as consulting physician to the Raleigh General Hospital in Beckley. He has been a member of the attending staff at Beckley Appalachian Regional Hospital since coming to Beckley in 1973 from a chairmanship in the Department of Medicine at Chicago Wesley Memorial Hospital.

He has held numerous teaching appointments, including that of director of medicine at Beckley Appalachian Regional Hospital; professor of medicine at Northwestern University School of Medicine from 1966 to 1973, and a series of increasing academic ranks from instructor to associate professor of medicine at the University of Virginia School of Medicine from 1954 to 1966.

His writings on research in metabolism and obesity have been published widely. His area of specialization is endocrinology and metabolism.

Miss Howard attended Marshall and received her B.S. degree from the University of Minnesota and her M.S.L.S. from Columbia University. She previously served as assistant science librarian at SIU at Carbondale, Ill., as supervisor of all institutional libraries for the Commonwealth of Kentucky, as chief librarian for the Veterans Administration Medical School at Lexington, Ky., and as research librarian for the Meade Corp. in Chillicothe, Ohio.

She currently is engaged in establishing the main medical school library at Huntington Hall on the grounds of the Huntington Veterans Administration Hospital. She will reside at Ceredo, W. Va.

Community College hours extended

Marshall University's new Community College is extending its office hours in an effort to better accommodate working people, Dr. Robert O. Hatton, vice president for the Community College, announced today.

The Community College now will be open from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Hatton said the change was made to help people interested in the Community College's programs find time to visit the campus. "Many of these people work from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and can't get here during their working hours," he said.

Women invited to special MU 'open house'

There can be more to life than cooking dinner, making beds, taking shorthand, pounding a typewriter or selling clothes.

That, essentially, is the message to be presented Monday, Aug. 18, at Marshall University during a special "open house" for women.

The event, scheduled for 1:30 p.m. in Marshall's Memorial Student Center, is being coordinated by Admissions Director James W. Harless. Invitations have been mailed to leaders of 93 area organizations to be passed on to members of the groups. However, all women are invited to attend, Harless stressed.

A reception will begin at 1:20 p.m. and refreshments will be served. Marshall President Robert B. Hayes will welcome the group at 1:45 p.m. The next hour will be devoted to brief discussions of admission to the university, academic programs, the School of Medicine, the new Community College, the Women's Studies program, the Student Development Center and the Advising Center.

The formal program will close with a question-and-answer period, to be followed by campus tours.

Since the open house is scheduled after the close of the summer term and before the beginning of the fall term, sufficient parking will be available for those attending, Harless said. Guests may park on any of the university's parking lots.
