COS holding open house

Several entertaining and educational demonstrations for children and adults will be held during an open house at Marshall University's College of Science Saturday, Nov. 4, from 9 to 11 a.m. in the Science Building.

Faculty members and students from the university's chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma professional fraternity will conduct the programs, according to Dr. Thomas A. Storch, dean of the College of Science.

Activities in the Chemistry Department will include chemical and cryogenic demonstrations—levitating magnets, pouring three colors out of a single bottle, driving rubber nails into a board with a banana and other interesting stunts.

Members of the Physics Department will present laser shows to introduce people to some of the unique properties of lasers. The shows will include demonstrations and illustrative slides. Select laser applications will be discussed including the use of lasers in communications, music CDs, medicine, holography and lasers as environmental tools.

Faculty members from several departments will be available to demonstrate the application of computers in teaching introductory science and mathematics courses at Marshall.

Storch said the open house will serve as the kickoff for National Chemistry Week activities in the Tri-State. National Chemistry Week is an outreach program sponsored by the American Chemical Society to enhance the public's awareness of the contributions that chemistry makes to society and our everyday lives.

In conjunction with the open house, the College of Science will sponsor a Homecoming continental breakfast for science alumni from 9 to 11 a.m. in the Science Building. Alumni are invited to visit with faculty members as well as attend the open house demonstrations.

The demonstrations are open to the public free of charge. To obtain further details contact the Marshall University College of Science, 304-696-2372.

Lunchbag seminar slated

A lunchbag seminar titled "Chilly Classroom Climate--Glass Ceilings in the Classroom" will be presented Wednesday, Nov. 1, at noon in Prichard Hall Room 143.

The seminar is open to the public free of charge. To obtain further details contact the Office of Women's and Returning Student Programs, 696-3112.

Alumnus returns to speak

Dr. John Wesley Shellcroft II, a self-employed private practice internist in Victorville, Calif., will make a presentation in conjunction with the African American Students' Program Alumni Lecture Series at Marshall University Wednesday, Nov. 1, at 6:30 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center Alumni Lounge.

A native of Charleston, Shellcroft received his bachelor's degree in chemistry from Marshall in 1971. He received his M.D. degree from the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine in 1975.

He served as a major in the United States Air Force and was assistant chief of internal medicine at Chanute Air Force Base in Illinois and chief of internal medicine at George Air Force Base in California. Prior to opening his private practice in 1984, Shellcroft worked in a group practice with three general internists in Apple Valley, Calif.

Kenneth E. Blue, associate vice president for multicultural affairs at Marshall, said Shellcroft will discuss his experiences as a student at Marshall and how today's students need to prepare themselves for the 21st century.

Shellcroft also will visit some Marshall classes and area elementary schools.

The presentation will be open to all students and the general public free of charge.

To obtain further details contact Blue at Marshall University, 696-5430.
Dr. Chuck G. Bailey, associate professor of broadcasting at Marshall University's W. Page Pitt School of Journalism and Mass Communications and faculty manager of Marshall's public radio station, WMUL-FM, has been named winner of the College Media Advisers (CMA) Distinguished Four-Year Broadcast Adviser Award for 1995.

The award, the highest honor in its division, recognizes Bailey's work as adviser to WMUL-FM. A native of Man in Logan County, Bailey received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Marshall and his doctoral degree in educational administration from West Virginia University.

He joined the Marshall faculty in 1985. During his tenure as WMUL-FM faculty manager, the station has won numerous awards from the Associated Press, the Society of Professional Journalists, Alpha Epsilon Rho and other broadcasting organizations. In 1993 WMUL-FM was named the Outstanding College Radio Station in the Marconi College Radio Awards national competition.

Bailey is a member of the CMA, the West Virginia Broadcasters Association and Alpha Epsilon Rho national broadcasting honorary. He served as president of the West Virginia Associated Press Broadcasters Association in 1992-93.

He was a finalist in 1993 and 1994 for the Faculty/Staff Adviser of the Year Award presented by the National Association of College Broadcasters during its National College Awards Competition and has been selected as a finalist for the award this year.

The CMA is a national organization of more than 650 members who advise student newspapers, magazines, yearbooks and broadcast media at more than 300 colleges and universities in the United States. It was founded in 1955 as the National Council of College Publications Advisers and adopted its current name in 1983.

Bailey is only the third person in the history of the CMA to receive the Distinguished Four-Year Broadcast Adviser Award.

"Chuck Bailey is a person who readily pays complete attention to detail, an essential ingredient for anyone who must manage a college-media outlet," said Dr. Keith Spears, interim dean of adult and extended education at Marshall. "He is proficient in placing the students into an award-winning program, allowing them to receive public applause and providing an efficient professional operation in which to learn."

Bailey will be honored at the 71st annual Fall National College Media Convention, the nation's largest assembly of collegiate journalists and advisers, Nov. 2-5 in Washington, D.C.

Guitarist will perform

March University's Guitar Department will sponsor a free concert by Adam Holzman, an international performing and recording artist, Friday, Nov. 3, at 8 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall.

Holzman is founder and director of the guitar program at the University of Texas at Austin where he also heads a thriving guitar studio.

He has won major guitar competitions and was twice chosen to perform in the prestigious master classes of Andres Segovia that were filmed for broadcast by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Holzman has appeared in concert throughout the United States in such prestigious venues as New York's Kaufman, Merkin and Carnegie halls and performed in Holland, Italy, Canada, Mexico, Costa Rica and Panama. From 1992 to 1994 Holzman was named "Maestro Extraordinario" by the Universidad Autonoma de Nuevo Leon in Monterrey, Mexico, where he served as an artist-in-residence.

Leo Welch, assistant professor of guitar in Marshall's Department of Music, said Holzman's performance will be a "don't miss" program.

The concert will be open to the public free of charge. To obtain further details contact Welch at Marshall University's Department of Music, 304-696-6459.

Class focuses on river

A course on "Ohio River History" is being presented by the Continuing Education Division in Marshall University's Community and Technical College.

The six-session course will be held on Tuesdays from Oct. 31 through Dec. 5 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in Smith Hall Room 113.

The class will cover the development of river transportation, navigational improvements and the history of the river in the Huntington area.

There will be a $48 registration fee for the class. To register or obtain further details call 696-3223.

MAS hosting jazz artist

The Rusty Sabella Consort, an acclaimed jazz ensemble, will present two concerts for the Marshall Artists Series Monday, Oct. 30.

Concerts will be held at 10 a.m. at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, 1304 6th Ave., and 1 p.m. in Marshall's Smith Recital Hall.

Artist Series patrons who have tickets to this Hindsley Series event may attend either performance.

Sabella is known for his ingenious blend of styles called "Renaissance Jazz" that combines original jazz compositions, lively Irish reels and an evocative synthesis of music spanning six centuries.

Best known for his improvisational jazz guitar, mandolin and mandocello, Sabella has shared the stage with such acts as the Beach Boys, Sonny and Cher, Bonnie Raitt, the Kinks and the Philadelphia String Quartet.

The Sabella Consort tours with an ever-changing roster of musical colleagues.

To obtain tickets or further details contact the Marshall Artists Series Office, 696-6656.

University chapter of Sigma Xi is established

A new chapter of Sigma Xi, The Scientific Research Society, has been established at Marshall University with the signing of a charter by university and Tri-State area scientists.

Dr. Bryan Larsen of Marshall's School of Medicine, current president of the chapter, said the university has had a Sigma Xi organization for many years but its status was that of a club. As a club, it was not allowed to elect members—a privilege only accorded to groups with chapter status.

Sigma Xi is an international honor society for scientists and engineers. For more than a century, the organization has promoted scientific research and pursued the promise of science and technology.

Larsen said members of the Marshall chapter are in the company of thousands of notable scientists from industry and academia who belong to Sigma Xi. He said the organization counts many Nobel laureates among its current and past membership.

He said with the chartering of the new chapter, Marshall joins the ranks of other major universities in the region that have Sigma Xi chapters such as Ohio State University and the University of Kentucky.

The Marshall chapter will sponsor several public meetings this year that will address topics of current scientific interest.

Bookstore seminars set

The Marshall University Bookstore will present a free educational seminar on custom publishing and copyright law Wednesday, Nov. 1, in Memorial Student Center Room 2E11, according to Joe Vance, bookstore merchandise manager.

The hour-long seminar, presented in conjunction with Custom Academic Publishing Company, will be held at 11 a.m., noon and 2 p.m.

Vance said the program will focus on the application of copyright law to the preparation and production of custom course material.

Refreshments will be served and a drawing will be held at the end of the day for a $100 bookstore gift certificate.

To obtain further details contact the Marshall University Bookstore.
