this institution has not been limited to dollars, but he has steadily promoted the value of the university to other businessmen and area residents," Queen said.

Thornburg, now 87 years old, has had a long association with Marshall. Riding a horse and buggy to campus, he attended Marshall from the fourth grade through a two-year advanced course and graduated with the class of 1916. Last spring, the Alumni Association presented him with its Distinguished Service Award which is given for loyal and unselfish service to Marshall.

More than 60 applicants for College of Education position

More than 60 applications have been received from educators interested in the dean's post for the College of Education, according to Dr. Robert F. Maddox, Graduate School dean and chairman of the search and screening committee.

The post was advertised nationally and an Oct. 21 deadline was set for applying, Maddox said. "The committee hopes to have three recommendations for the new president to select from by mid-December," he said.

Members of the committee are Dr. Robert Babb, professor of computer and information science; Dr. William McDowell, professor of counseling and rehabilitation; Dr. Kathryn Wright, professor of curriculum and foundations; Dr. Zane McCoy, professor of educational administration;

Eleanor Terry, assistant professor of educational media; Dr. Howard Adkins, professor of geography; Dr. Grace Bennett, professor of home economics; Dr. Wayne Taylor, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation; Dr. Charles Jones, professor of occupational, adult and safety education; Dr. William Coffey, professor of social studies, and Myra Taylor, student representative.

Among the members of the MU English Department attending the West Virginia Association of College English Teachers fall meeting at Jackson's Mill Oct. 21-22 were DR. JACK R. BROWN, professor emeritus; DR. BARBARA R. BROWN, DR. ROBERT GERKE, and DR. WARREN W. WOODEN, professors, and LOUISE BAILEY and DR. JAMES RIEMER, assistant professors. Wooden, who served as secretary-treasurer of the association this past year, was elected vice president.

EUGENE CRAWFORD, public safety officer, was elected president of the West Virginia Society for Autistic Children (WVSAC) at its state conference Oct. 14-15 at Jackson's Mill. His one-year term begins Jan. 1. He is the father of an eight-year-old autistic son.

DR. JOSEPH LaCASCIA, Economics Department chairman, was invited to speak at the annual franchise planning conference of the Franchise Division of Norrell Services which was held Oct. 20-22 at Stouffer's Pine Isle near Atlanta. His topic was "The U.S. Economy and Business Opportunities in the Years 1984-87."

PATRICIA SUTTON, instructor of management, conducted two workshops at the Huntington Mall for Mall employees responsible for hiring, evaluation and termination. Among the topics for the sessions, held Oct. 14 and Oct. 24, were Employee Selection, The Interview, Performance Evaluation, Job Specifications, the Application, Disciplinary Action and Documentation and Termination.

DR. DAVID R. WOODWARD, professor of history, has a review essay appearing in the May issue of Der Angriff. The essay's title is "The American Expeditionary Force: Published Sources for the Study of Military Operations, 1917-1918."

DR. WARREN W. WOODEN, professor of English, was one of four American scholars elected to membership last month in the International Research Society for Children's Literature its biennial meeting held in Bordeaux, France.

Thornburg carillon dedication Saturday

Marshall University's C.I. and Marie Thornburg Carillon will be dedicated at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 29.

The ceremony, which is open to the public, will be conducted outdoors on the campus side of the James E. Morrow Library, where a commemorative bell recognizing the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Thornburg has been hung.

The carillon's 16 bronze bells are housed in the cupola atop the Morrow Library. Cast by the Paccard Fonderie de Cloches in Annecy, France, the bells range in weight from nearly half a ton to 71 pounds.

The carillon was installed during the summer and has been programmed and tested during recent weeks, according to Dr. Bernard Queen, MU Foundation executive director. The cost of the project – including installation – was approximately $100,000, Queen said.

Among the speakers for the dedication will be Mr. Thornburg, president of University Terrace, Inc. and CITCO Water and Sewage Company, and MU Acting President Sam Clagg. Dr. Howard Mills, member of the MU Physical Facilities and Planning Committee, will officially accept the Thornburgs' gift on behalf of the university.

The program also will include Dr. Paul Balshaw, MU School of Fine Arts director, playing selections on the carillon.

The carillon, which sounds on the hour and the half hour, can be played manually or automatically by electronic impulses programmed on tape, Queen said. "The sound produced is actually from the bells as their clappers are activated electronically," he explained.

"In presenting this gift to the university, Mr. and Mrs. Thornburg have made a contribution which will be part of Marshall's future traditions," Queen said. "A symbol for the ear rather than the eye, the Thornburg Carillon – in time – will join the Beech Tree, Old Main and its towers and Memorial Fountain as part of our campus heritage," he said.

Mr. Thornburg credits Dr. Robert B. Hayes, the former Marshall president, with the idea of making the gift of a carillon to the campus. "It was one of his dreams to have the bells pealing across the campus, and last year my wife and I decided to make it a reality," Thornburg said.

The Thornburgs have been major contributors to the Marshall Foundation and were among the first members of the John Marshall Society. "However, C.I.'s support of

MU medical school may be direction of the future

Keeping medical schools as dispersed and as varied as possible is preferable to consolidation, an American Medical Association vice president said at a Medical Teaching Symposium at Marshall last week.

Dr. Leonard Fenninger said he thinks pushes nationwide to consolidate are unfortunate. "If you take that course, there would be a serious loss of available medical care," he said in response to a question. "It is much more economical to maintain medical education and medical research as close to the community as possible."

In his prepared remarks, Fenninger said knowledge and technology are going to have to be viewed different-

Lunchbag seminar topics are announced

"Living Alone and Liking It," a discussion of societal attitudes and opportunities for personal growth for the single person, will be presented by Chris DeVos, Student Development counselor, at a Lunchbag Seminar noon Wednesday, Nov. 2, in Prichard Hall 101.

Sponsored by the Women's Center, the weekly seminar sessions are open to all interested persons, according to Patricia Matters, Women's Center director. The center will provide coffee and tea, she said.

Other topics for discussion during November are:

Nov. 9, Sex Discrimination and the Law: An overview of sex discrimination laws in employment and education and procedures to follow if subject to discrimination with Cheryl Connelly, assistant professor of finance and business law and attorney.

Nov. 16, International Women: Information sharing by women from other countries with Judy Assad, International Students Program coordinator, as moderator.

Nov. 30, Fat as a Feminist Issue: Cultural conditioning and psychological attitudes women have about their bodies, with Bonnie Trisler, Student Health Programs coordinator.

Student activities office to sponsor January ski trip

The Student Activities Office is sponsoring a ski trip to Mount Snow, Vt., Jan. 8-13, according to Phil Silberstein, coordinator for Student Activities and Recognized Student Organizations.

Interested faculty and staff members as well as students may sign up for the trip. "However, with a limit of 40 people we will have to reserve seats on a first-come, first-served basis," Silberstein said.

Cost of the trip, which will be made by motor coach, is $305 and includes transportation, lift tickets, meals and accommodations. The deadline for signing up is Nov. 18.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Silberstein, extension 6770.

ly than they have been in recent years, which brought increasing separation of practicing physicians and institutional physicians.

"Now in the face of adversity we have some major opportunities for experimenting with different ways of learning, teaching and serving," he said.

He said the Marshall School of Medicine, which has "by design and necessity" relied on physicians who work in the community, may represent the direction of the future.

Dr. James Young, Board of Regents vice chancellor for health affairs, said Marshall is using its unique setting to try to develop curriculum and pathways to provide care where it is needed most desperately.

"To my knowledge, Marshall is the only allopathic school dedicated to researching these kinds of issues," he said.

He said special attention must be paid to not only the number of physicians but also to specialty and geographical distribution.

Report from auditor holds no surprises

All recommendations in the Legislative Auditor's report on the Marshall University Athletic Department either have been or are in the process of being implemented, according to MU Acting President Sam Clagg.

The audit, covering the period from July 1, 1982, through June 30, 1983, was conducted at the request of the West Virginia Board of Regents following reports of a deficit in the Athletic Department operations. The audit showed a deficit of $88,430.95 as of June 30.

"The auditor's report contained no surprises and we were pleased with it for a number of reasons," Clagg said. "First and foremost, there is no indication of irregularities. There were questions about some procedures and these are being changed. Equally important, the audit shows substantial progress being made in removing the deficit. We are especially grateful to members of the Big Green Scholarship Foundation for their efforts in helping to achieve this," he added.

"Actually," Clagg said, "the results of this audit were fairly routine when compared with previous audits. There's basically nothing wrong with the Marshall athletic budget that can't be cured through improved monitoring of the accounts and stimulation of ticket sales.

"The Athletic Department was caught short when the economic situation worsened," Clagg said. "There are still problems with the budget, but we believe now that we are well along the road to turning things around and removing the deficit entirely by next June 30."

CHRISTMAS SALE

The Marshall University Bookstore will begin its annual Christmas sale at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 1. Faculty and staff will receive a 40 percent discount on boxed cards, bows, ribbon, paper and ornaments. Merchandise will be displayed on the Bookstore's lower level. Cash, checks, Visa and MasterCard will be accepted.

CAMPUS ANNOUNCEMENTS. . .

The Marshall Artists Series' Student Division will present the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble, considered one of America's most exciting young dance companies, in an 8 p.m. performance Wednesday, Nov. 2, at the Keith-Albee Theatre.

Tickets are available from the Artists Series Office, located on the first floor of Memorial Student Center. Reserved seats are available at $8 each for orchestra and loge and $5 for balcony. Youth age 17 and under may purchase tickets in any section for half-price. Tickets for Marshall students with ID and Activity cards are free. Part-time students may purchase tickets at half-price.

The appearance of the Ailey Repertory Ensemble has been made possible by a grant from the Mid-Atlantic Arts Consortium in partnership with Arts and Humanities Division, West Virginia Department of Culture and History, and is supported by the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.
