The old expression “Put your money where your mouth is” may be thinking this week of the many money programs sponsored by Marshall University's Psychology Clinic.

Several behavioral approaches to altering poor eating habits, but an additional reinforcement—“billfold motivation”—will be used to stimulate the desired change, according to Dr. Hardin W. King, a clinician with the MU Psychology Department.

To the programs will enter into a weight loss contract with the clinic at a cost of $35 and then may earn that contract price back by losing a certain amount of weight each week. King explained that earning money involved may create the added incentive needed by some to lose that extra weight,” he added.

Group contracts will begin on Monday, July 7, and Monday, July 14, and will meet on subsequent Mondays for eight weeks. The sessions will be conducted at 7 p.m. in Harris Hall 450.

There will be a $10 registration fee. Anyone interested in the program may obtain further information by calling the MU Psychology Clinic at 696-6446.

‘Play It Again, Sam’ set for 8 p.m. July 10-12

Ed Heaberlin of Huntington heads the 11-member cast for Marshall University Theatre's production of the Woody Allen comedy. “Play It Again, Sam,” scheduled Thursday through Saturday, July 10-12 in Old Main Auditorium.

Performances will be at 8 p.m. daily, according to Dr. Elaine A. Novak, MU professor of speech and director for the show.

Heaberlin, a Huntington sophomore, will play the Woody Allen role of Allan Felix. The supporting roles of Linda Christie and Malissa Shuck will be played by Katona Manissero of Huntington and Robert Atkins of Charleston.

The theater box office is located in Old Main 107. Reserved seat tickets may be purchased at $2.50 each between noon and 4 p.m. weekdays by calling 696-2306. Tickets also will be sold at the door prior to performances.

Personal personalities...

DR. DARYL D. BAUER JR., associate professor of curricula and foundations, married Marilyn J. Reed June 11 in Proctorville, Ohio. Mrs. Bauer is a special education teacher with Cabell County Public Schools.

RICK HAYE, University Relations photographer, married Marilyn Testerman June 21 in Milton. The bride is employed by Variety Stores.

“Daddy, there is a new baby at your house. You are going to love him.”

Committee A recommends to the Sixtieth Annual Meeting that Marshall University be removed from the Association's list of Censured Administrations.

Hayes noted that the controversy, involving non-reappointment of Dr. Michael L. Bottino as a Geology Department faculty member nearly 20 years ago and that the Marshall administration has changed twice since then.

All elements of the campus community seem to be working together more closely than we were a few years ago,” Hayes said, “I hope the AAUP’s decision to remove censure, primarily because I believe it will permit all of us to work toward improving campus relations to an even greater degree.”

The American Association of University (AAUP), meeting in Washington, D.C., voted June 20 to remove Marshall University from its list of “censured administrations.”

MU President Robert B. Hayes said the AAUP's action followed more than five years of quiet efforts to find an equitable solution to the matter. He credited cooperative efforts of Marshall faculty members, MU AAUP Chapter President E. Coffey and AAUP Associate General Secretary Jordan E. Kurland with making it possible.

Here is the text of the recommendation of AAUP's Committee A which was submitted for vote at the annual meeting:

MARSHALL UNIVERSITY

News Letter

July 7, 1980

OFFICE OF UNIVERSITY RELATIONS • NEWS BUREAU • MARSHALL UNIVERSITY • HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA 25701

MU removed from ‘censured’ list

The American Association of University (AAUP), meeting in Washington, D.C., voted June 20 to remove Marshall University from its list of “censured administrations.”

MU President Robert B. Hayes said the AAUP’s action followed more than five years of quiet efforts to find an equitable solution to the matter. He credited cooperative efforts of Marshall faculty members, MU AAUP Chapter President E. Coffey and AAUP Associate General Secretary Jordan E. Kurland with making it possible.

New doctorate offered through cooperative venture

Applications are being accepted for the doctoral program in educational administration offered under a cooperative arrangement among West Virginia Universities—Marshall University and the West Virginia College of Graduate Studies.

One student already has been accepted into the program. He is an M.S. in education student, who is administrative coordinator for the program.

Betty Joan Jarrell, accounting program coordinator for Marshall's Community College, was the first student accepted by the program's admissions committee. Mrs. Jarrell earned her B.A. degree in business education cum laude and her M.B.A. degree from Marshall.

She has enrolled in the Higher Education Administration program. Designed for professional educators, the Ed.D program also offers a Public School administration option.

We have had more than 200 inquiries into the program, and many applications will start this fall, and have received applications from 40 prospective candidates for the program,” Dr. Meckley said. The admissions committee, which has two representatives from each participating institution, will meet again in August to review applications from 40 prospective candidates for the program.

The degree, Doctor of Education (Ed.D.) will be awarded by West Virginia University, but faculty members from Marshall and the College of Graduate Studies will participate in teaching, the admissions process and student evaluations. Courses are to be offered in Huntington and Charleston.

Professional educators in southern areas of the state have been hampered in their efforts to obtain a doctoral degree in their field in the past as the only Ed.D. degree programs available in West Virginia were offered in Morgantown according to MU College of Education Dean Philip J. Rusche.

“Marshall’s College of Education surveyed incoming students in a six-county area and received 407 responses, with 206 of these expressing immediate interest in applying to such a program,” Dr. Rusche said. “Approximately 80 percent indicated an interest in the Public School Administration option,” he noted.

Inquiries may be made to the College of Education, Andrew Hall, Huntington, West Virginia 25701.

Dr. Meckley, the program coordinator, has been assigned office space at COGS and Marshall. His schedule calls for him to be on Marshall’s campus on Wednesdays, at COGS on Tuesdays, and the remainder of the week at WVU.

MU News removed from censured list

The American Association of University (AAUP), meeting in Washington, D.C., voted June 20 to remove Marshall University from its list of “censured administrations.”

PU President Robert B. Hayes said the AAUP’s action followed more than five years of quiet efforts to find an equitable solution to the matter. He credited cooperative efforts of Marshall faculty members, MU AAUP Chapter President E. Coffey and AAUP Associate General Secretary Jordan E. Kurland with making it possible.

New regulations, adopted by the University and incorporated into the faculty handbook, substantially meet Association-supported standards. They are particularly noteworthy for the significant procedural changes.
Dr. Everett N. Roush, alumni affairs director at Marshall University since 1973, has submitted his resignation effective Aug. 31. MU Development Director Bernard Queen announced.

Roush, a dentist, said he plans to resume his dental career in Huntington on a full-time basis.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my seven years as alumni director at Marshall," Roush said. "However, a very attractive opportunity has arisen which will permit me to resume my career as a dentist while at the same time remaining close to Marshall and continuing a rewarding relationship with the institution."

Queen will head a search committee to solicit and review applications for the alumni affairs position. Other members of the committee are Alumni Association president Dr. James Fix of Greenville, N.C., associate professor of anatomy at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, and former MU Dean of Students Dr. Robert W. Coon. The new director will assume the post later this summer, Dr. Coon said.

The 49-year-old Roush earned his baccalaureate degree at the University of Virginia, his master’s degree at the Ph.D. degree at the University of Tubingen in Germany. He has also studied in Germany at the universities of Wien and Wurzburg.

McKernan appointed Writing Program director

Dr. John J. McKernan, a Marshall University associate professor of English, has been named director of the school’s Writing Program. McKernan succeeded Dr. Alan B. Gould, MU College of Liberal Arts dean.

McKernan, who joined the MU English Department Faculty following graduation with the appointment of Dr. Bruce Arddinger, MU associate professor of English, as the campus coordinator of the Regents Bachelor of Arts Program, is currently a visiting lecturer.

As Writing Program director, McKernan’s major responsibilities will be coordinating the freshman composition program and working on remedial writing skills programs for underprepared students, according to the dean.

A strong writing program today is more important than ever as we face the nationwide crisis in literacy," Gould said. "A published author himself, he says, "a teacher should assist a student to develop a writing project that will appear in national magazines and thus have an expository, active role in the transformation of his language skills."

Services held for Leslie Aldred

Services for Leslie King Aldred, 22, of Charleston and former student at Huntington, were held Wednesday, June 25, in Huntington.

She died Monday, June 23, after a brief illness. She was a tennis player and a member of the MU tennis team under the guidance of coach Tony Williams.

A business student at Marshall, she was employed at the State of West Virginia Ambulatory Care Facility prior to her graduation.

Newcomers

NEWCOMERS

New to the campus are:

Welcome to Marshall

MCU faculty and staff achievements, activities...

Dr. Howard S. Laatte, professor of philosophy and department chairman, and Dr. John C. Ploft and Dr. Frank Mininni, both associate professors of philosophy, attended the Spring Conference of the West Virginia Philosophical Society at the University of Charleston April 18-19. Dr. Theodore Drange of West Virginia University read a paper on Slatter’s latest book, “The Dogma of Immaculate Perception.” Also, student Michael Hardesty read a paper, “The Modular Pyramid of Values.”

Dr. William M. Schmitt, assistant professor of family practice, will be project director for a workshop offered in the Fall 1980 semester. The West Virginia Humanities Foundation has awarded $2,135 to the Marshall University Foundation for the workshop. “The Rural Appalachian Attitude: Customs, Behavior, and Values Contributing to Health Folklore.” He also received a German Academic Exchange Scholarship to study at Bonn University in Germany July 22-August 13, where he will conduct research into comparative analysis of health care delivery and systems between the United States and Germany.

Dr. James Fix to head Anatomy Department

Dr. James D. Fix of Greenville, N.C., associate professor of anatomy at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has succeeded Dr. Robert W. Coon, the former dean of the MU College of Medicine.

Fix, who will hold the rank of professor, succeeds Dr. James E. Moreland, who resigned at the end of the spring semester, according to MU School of Medicine Dean Dr. Bruce Ardinger, MU associate professor of anatomy. Dr. Moreland later said, “As a matter of fact, the Council for Support and Advancement of Education (CASE) has placed Marshall’s anatomy program among the top 17 percent in the nation.”

The position is a part of the new relationship with the University of Delaware and the Ph.D. degree at the University.

Dr. Fix, a native of North Carolina, received his undergraduate education at Berea College in Berea, Ky., where he majored in biology. He earned his Ph.D. degree at the University of Delaware in 1971.”

William Cook, associate professor of economics, and Dr. Robert Alexander, professor of management, chaired panels for the statewide meeting of the Industrial Relations Research Association April 24. Cook’s panel included William L. Corliss, assistant professor of labor relations at the University of Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania; Josephine Lamb, assistant professor of the West Virginia University Institute of Labor Economics; and C. Martin Medford III, manager of employee relations for the Union Carbide Corp. Alexander presented a panel which included John Schano, regional director of the American Arbitration Association; Henry Shaw, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, and J. Ross Hunter Jr., attorney and arbitrator.

Dr. Henry Staub, professor of pediatrics, attended the Pediatric Section of the United States and Canadian Association meetings in San Antonio, Texas, April 28-30. He also spoke on "Current Controversies in Infant Feeding," at the West Virginia Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics spring meeting in Charleston April 11, and was interviewed about nutrition on WOWK’s “Morning Magazine” on April 3.

Mary Ann Rossvurwm and Elizabeth Barker, both assistant professors of nursing, attended the West Virginia League for Nursing convention at Pocahontas State Park in April, where Mrs. Barker conducted a mini-workshop on "Issues for Political Action for Nurses." Mrs. Barker also recently completed a site visit to Alden Broadus School of Nursing as an accreditation visitor for the State Board of Examiners for Registered Nurses.

Dr. John Foster and Dr. Wayne Mordes, both assistant professors of physical education, were members of the National Meeting of the American Society for Microbiology May 11-16 in Miami, Fla. Foster presented a paper entitled "Nanocoagulation Cycle Metabolism in Salmonella Typhimurium" and attended a two-day workshop on "Recombinant DNA Techniques." Mordes attended a two-day workshop on "Antimicrobial Susceptibility Testing."

Dr. Virginia Plumeley, associate professor of educational technology, attended the 1980 Midwest Psychological Society Convention of the Pilot International Club May 2-4 in Cincinnati. She is president of the Huntington Pilot Club, a club which sponsors two scholarships. She also attended the National Women’s Conference May 28-30 at St. Louis, Mo. She was interviewed on WOWK’s "Morning Magazine," on May 3.

Huntington Alloys Aid Students

Huntington Alloys, Inc., recently presented to the Marshall University Student Government a check for $1,200 earmarked for use in the Chemistry Department’s summer research participation program for high school students from the Tri-state Region. Betty Flatt, college relations coordinator for Huntington Alloys, presented the gift.

With her was Dr. James E. Douglass, Chemistry Department chairman, and MU Foundation Executive Director Bernard Queen. The gift will enable the Chemistry Department to offer a high school senior to take part in a 10-week summer research project under supervision of Marshall faculty members. The program is designed to encourage promising students to pursue careers in science. (MU photo by Rick Haye)