ELIZABETH GIBSON DRINKO 1922-2010

The annual Honors Convocation is named for Elizabeth Gibson Drinko, a longstanding supporter of academic programs at Marshall University, including the activities of the Drinko Academy. A native of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, she graduated in 1940 from Crafton High School, where she was a member of the YMCA Leader Corps, the National Honor Society, the French, Spanish and Latin clubs, Girl Reserves, and a class officer in her junior and senior years. She earned a baccalaureate degree in psychology from Westminster College in New Wilmington, Pennsylvania, where she was a member of Beta Sigma Omicron (now Zeta Tau Alpha), the Panhellenic Council, the acrobatic swim team, the YWCA and May Court. She served an internship at the Neuropsychiatric Institute of Living in Hartford, Connecticut.

In 1946, Elizabeth married John Deaver Drinko, a Cleveland attorney and graduate of Marshall University. Together they had four children, eleven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Libby Drinko was an active volunteer who held offices in the United Presbyterian Women's Group, the Cleveland Council of Panhellenic, and participated for many years in the United Presbyterian Missionary Conference, the Cub Scouts, and Boy Scouts of America. Her service also included the boards of several foundations.

She was the recipient of honorary degrees from Marshall University, Westminster College, and Keystone College.

The Honors College is grateful to have had such an outstanding friend and patron as Elizabeth Gibson Drinko. We also appreciate the continued support of the Drinko Academy to make this evening the special event that it has been for over sixty years.

THE MISSION OF HONORS EDUCATION AT MARSHALL UNIVERSITY

The Honors College at Marshall University provides an environment for innovative teaching and learning within an interdisciplinary curriculum motivated by creative, critical inquiry and respect for a multiplicity of thoughts, experiences, and identities. The Honors College collaborates with university and public partners to foster inclusive academic excellence in a diverse and supportive community of scholars dedicated to becoming socially conscious, responsible leaders and lifelong learners engaged in the acquisition and application of knowledge for a greater good.

MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Near the end of the spring semester, shortly before the Marshall University Commencement, the Honors Convocation has long provided an inspiring, campus-wide celebration of exceptional undergraduate student achievement. Named in 1994 for an extraordinary friend of Marshall, Elizabeth Gibson Drinko, the evening ceremony and reception has always been a means to publicly recognize graduating students that complete a distinct curriculum of honors coursework in addition to their major programs. It is also a way to provide students from across the university—at all points in their course of study—special recognition and commendation for clearly and effectively demonstrated excellence in academic achievement, research, and service.

The event has given faculty from across the university a valued opportunity to formally and publicly share achievements made by outstanding undergraduate students they have chosen for an award in their departments. The university extends hearty congratulations to all honored students and those who have supported them at home and on campus. We are proud to recognize the intellectual curiosity, passion for learning, and dedication to critical thinking exhibited by students in this program. These students have sought to test themselves and their faculty with difficult questions while seeking solutions, and in so doing developed habits that should help prepare them for what are, no doubt, challenging times that we collectively face.

Facilitating the annual tradition of convocation as a college since its creation in 2009 and first incoming class in 2010, the Honors College has sought to demonstrate its service and commitment to the entire academic community of Marshall. We are able to do our work for the greater good of our university community and the many communities of which our faculty and students are a part through the support of colleges and academic programs that present these awards.

Like other universities, Marshall is a community in the physical sense, given that we have our own distinct land, roads, and buildings. Far more importantly, we are a community bound by much more than the shared landscape of the campus. We are knitted together by shared social practices that give a fundamental rhythm to life on campus through the timing of classes throughout each day and the many co-curricular and other events that bring punctuating anticipation and new opportunities each week of every semester. The annual Honors Convocation, coming a week before the Spring Commencement, plays an essential role in our community of scholarship and practice at Marshall University.

We welcome you to join us today in dedicating ourselves to providing for and drawing on our mission as a university to make purposeful decisions and take meaningful actions that advance our collective well-being.

Take care and be well,

GUEST SPEAKER

Dr. Zelideth María Rivas

Dr. Rivas began serving Marshall University in the critically important role of Assistant Provost for Global Education this year while continuing to serve students across the university as a Professor of Japanese in the Department of Modern Languages, which she joined in 2012. Dr. Rivas teaches courses in Japanese language, culture, and literature. She is a great friend of the Honors College who regularly teaches interdisciplinary humanities courses, including the very popular seminar “Asian Music Videos: Beyond Bollywood.” For her outstanding teaching, she was named the Hedrick Teaching Fellow at the Center for Teaching and Learning

She actively works with students to encourage study abroad with our partner universities and through our consortium with KIIS, Kentucky Institute for International Studies. She has refereed publications in many international journals, such as Comparative Literature Studies, Journal of Intercultural Studies, Journal of Asian American Studies, and Asian American Literary Review. She has co-organized and programmed national and international conferences and advised/curated a mixed-race initiative. Her research focuses on the conception of race through literature written by Asian immigrants in the Americas and the representation of race in Japan in post-World War II literature and film. Her research and expertise have contributed to two new fields that expand Japanese Studies beyond stereotypical representations of a closed, homogeneous society: Mixed Race Studies and Asians in the Americas. She has received fellowships and awards from the Ford Foundation, Fulbright-Hays, West Virginia Humanities Council, and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The Honors Oracle News is a product of student effort in the context of the HON 484 course offered each semester. As one of the college's student-led experiential and collaborative learning courses, it is not a traditional instructional course. Through collaborative peer mentorship, students in this course learn about journalistic writing, develop interpersonal skills through interviewing at least two sources per story and create publishable work that could be suitable for resumes and portfolios. We are grateful for the contributions of these outstanding members of the Marshall community.
