Fort Monroe with bridge over moat to the main gate or Sallyport.

of military men. Cornelius was a Roman centurion (captain) stationed in Palestine who was converted by Peter. His story is related in the 10th chapter of Acts where he is described as "a centurion of the band (company) called the Italian band." The lighting of the chapel's interior is greatly subdued by the deep colors of the stained glass memorial windows dedicated to artillery and engineer officers of the last century. Standing out boldly over the altar is a lighter colored stained glass window with a life-size representation of Cornelius the Centurion. The altar is bathed by the golden light filtering through the image of St. Cornelius. The beautiful green altar frontal was a gift of the St. Hilda Guild, New York City. Hanging from the walls of the chancel and nave are the flags and colors of old regiments of the United States Army. These are interestingly described in a free booklet prepared by the Post Chaplain, Major W. Hubert Bierck.

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON was especially fond of worshipping in the CHAPEL OF THE CENTURION when he and Mrs. Wilson would come down to Old Point Comfort on the Presidential yacht, the Mayflower.

Not far from the Chamberlin Hotel are the twin spires of ST. MARY'S STAR OF THE SEA, which is often mistaken for the post chapel. It is, however, a civilian church which grew up on Old Point Comfort in pre-Civil War days to minister to the spiritual needs of Catholic workmen engaged in work on the fort. Its corner stone was laid in 1860 by Bishop John McGill. During the Civil War the Sisters of Charity did heroic work in taking care of the sick at Fork Monroe. The church draws its parishioners from the civilians of Phoebus, Hampton and Newport News, but due to its early establishment on Old Point Comfort the United States Government has permitted it to continue standing on the grounds of the fort. St. Mary's Star of the Sea is named after the patron saint of the Portuguese navigators who charted much of the New World.

In front of the Chamberlin Hotel is the boat dock where the arrival and departure of the Baltimore and Washington steamers provide a colorful spectacle, especially if an army band happens to be giving a concert in the nearby bandstand. Mid-channel on the ferry course between Old Point Comfort and Willoughby Spit is the fortified island of Rip Raps which was created by piling rocks on top of a submerged shoal. The garrison of this satellite fort which is officially known as Fort Wool must lead a lonely life. During World War I defense nets were spread from its foundation to trap submarines.

The approach to the gate of Fort Monroe is through the town of PHOEBUS named after Harrison Phoebus, a famous Old Point Comfort hotelier of the post-Civil War days. This polished and energetic businessman established the tradition of elegance and comfort which the present Chamberlin maintains today. Roseland Manor, the magnificent estate of Harrison Phoebus is open to visitors annually.

HAMPTON is the next town west of Phoebus. It is the OLDEST CONTINUOUS ENGLISH-SPEAKING SETTLEMENT IN AMERICA, having been settled in 1610. (Although Jamestown was settled three years earlier, it was abandoned after 1699.) Hampton had the first free school in the Colonies which was established by Dr. Thomas Eaton, a physician, in 1634. The town was originally called Kecoughtan after a tribe of Indians which the first Englishmen found there in 1607. White settlers drove away the Indians and later changed the name of the settlement to Hampton after the Earl of Southampton. This nobleman was one of the principal stockholders in the London Company, which owned the Virginia Colony before it was taken over by the English government. Although Hampton dates from 1610 its architecture does not reflect its history for it has been burned two times, once by the British in 1812 and once again during the Civil War by the Confederate General Magruder as a sort of "scorched earth" measure. No building of any consequence survived the last fire and all of the town's valuable archives perished.

The most historic and also the most charming structure is old ST. JOHN'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH whose tightly packed graveyard shaded by giant trees is a refreshing retreat from the busy main street. Established in 1610 St. John's is the oldest Protestant parish in continuous existence in America. There were three earlier church buildings. The present structure was built in 1727 and has survived three wars, undergoing bombardment in the Revolution, pillage in the War of 1812 and the final disaster of fire in the Civil War. However, the "old walls honestly built" by Colonial workmen stood firm and the church was restored in 1869. The graveyard is still in use as a burial ground, many of the headstones being so old that they are illegible. The grave of Hannah Nicholson Tunnell, "the Confederate female Paul Revere" is marked by a large rough hewn granite block near the west door. On June 10, 1861, Hannah Tunnell warned the Confederates of the approach of the enemy at Bethel. Also, buried in the churchyard is Hugh Smith Cumming Surgeon General of the United States, who was a native of Hampton.

St. John's Church is built in the form of a cross. Its interior is characterized by a simple beauty. The pure white marble of the altar, baptismal font, lectern and pulpit are in effective contrast to the dark oak beams of the ceiling. The stained glass windows are outstanding in workmanship and design. Especially interesting is a window dedicated to the 21 Colonial rectors of St. John's which shows a clergyman with an open Bible standing in the prow of a boat approaching a shore where savages are capering. Another window depicting St. Luke, the physician, is dedicated to George William Semple, 34th President of the Medical Society of Virginia. The presence of a stained glass window representing the baptism of Pocahontas, may lead the tourist to suspect that St. John's Parish had some link with Pocahontas. This is not so, for the window dates back to the 1880's when Sioux Indians from the Dakotas, who were attending Hampton Institute, used to worship at St. John's. (A large portion of the Sioux nation were converts to the Episcopalian denomination.) These Indians from the Far West were intensely interested in the story of Pocahontas and they donated the Pocahontas window to St. John's. A large number of these young Indians unfortunately died of tuberculosis during their stay in Hampton and they are buried in the old cemetery on the campus of Hampton Institute.

Five generations of the Jones family worshipped in St. John's from 1781 to 1919, according to a plaque over a pew near the south door. Solomon Fosque, a devoted Negro sexton, is commemorated by a plaque in the west vestibule. A complete list of all the rectors of St. John's from 1610 to the present day, 45 in all, hangs in the South vestibule. The present rector, Carter H. Harrison, is a direct descendant of Benjamin Harrison, who settled in Jamestown in 1635. He is also a descendant of Pocahontas. The church possesses a silver communion service which was brought from London in 1619.

Hampton may be called a city of seafood and institutions. Fishing, crabbing, oyster-farming and seafood packing are the native industries. Every September Hampton celebrates its annual SEAFOOD FESTIVAL with the crowning of a Seafood Queen, a grand parade and street dancing. Also contributing heavily to the town's economy are the government institutions such as the aeronautical research laboratories (National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics), the Veterans Administration, the military establishments; also, the faculty and students of Hampton Institute. The core of the town's population is soundly Southern but since Hampton is located at the tip of the Peninsula the currents of commerce and war have brought to it people from all points of the compass. For instance, there is a small group of prominent families whose founders came from New England and other Northern places soon after the Civil War. Energetic and enterprising they made fortunes in the seafood industry later branching into vaster realms such as real estate developments and street railways. Still prominent in the business and professional life of the town are a number of families whose residence in Hampton dates back to the days of the Royal Colony, such as the Bookers, Seldens, Joneses, Tabbs, Chismans, Hopes, Holts and Lees, to mention but a few. Another distinct native group in the town's population is formed by the "Poquosonites" and the "Fox Hillians," who are derived from a cluster of fishing villages some miles north of Hampton. In early days these people lived in virtual isolation because of the lack of communication, consequently they are so intermarried that the same family names occur over and over. Accustomed for several centuries to wresting a living from the sea and the soil with their own hands, they turned their energies to business with great profit when after the dawn of the automobile age they began to settle in Hampton. Today "Poquosonites" and "Fox Hillians" are very important in the business life of Hampton.

Hampton's population has been greatly increased in recent years by aeronautical research workers who have come from all over the country, South, North, and West to work at the Langley Field Air Base. Many of the workers in the Newport News Shipyard have made their homes in the Hampton area. A familiar figure in Hampton is the retired army officer, a major, a colonel or even a general, who fell in love with the town during a tour of duty at Fort Monroe or Langley Field, many years ago. In some cases he bought his home long in advance of his retirement and rented it out while he was serving out his time in humdrum posts elsewhere in the United States and in the tropical heat and squalor of foreign assignments. Once back in Hampton in his dream house with time on his hands, he fishes, gardens, boats, dabbles in civic affairs or may even take an executive job in business.

Hampton is cut up by the jagged arms of Hampton Creek. Along its waterfront are giant mounds of oyster shells and the commingled odors of fish and crabs. Housewives go to the wharves to buy seafood fresh from the briny deep. The town is knit together by a number of graceful bridges from which one obtains a beautiful view of the snug little harbor with its fishing fleet and the Yacht Club. The HAMPTON YACHT CLUB is a rendezvous for yachts bound to and from Florida and is the scene of annual regattas. In front of the Yacht Club entrance stands THE BRADDOCK CANNON which marks the spot where General Braddock landed in 1755 with two regiments of British regulars to open the campaign to drive the French away from what is now Pittsburgh. Unaccustomed to wilderness fighting Braddock's forces were ambushed by French and Indians in the wilds of Pennsylvania. Braddock was killed after four horses had been shot from under him and the young Washington who had accompanied him as an aide-de-camp barely escaped with his life. The Braddock Cannon points to a tongue of land at the mouth of the harbor known as BLACKBEARD'S POINT after the famous pirate, Captain Edward Teach. Exasperated by the pirates' attack on Hampton shipping, Captain Henry Maynard of Hampton led an expedition against their lair in North Carolina in 1718. Defeating Blackbeard, he severed the bloodthirsty rascal's head from his body and placed it on a pole at the entrance of Hampton Harbor to warn any mariner contemplating piracy as a career.

The Braddock Cannon, Hampton, with Blackbeard's Point in background.

Across the harbor opposite the Yacht Club one sees the towers and gables of HAMPTON INSTITUTE, one of the greatest centers of Negro education in the world. This school had its beginning in a group of illiterate, runaway slaves who sat under the trees at the feet of missionaries and shouted out the letters of the alphabet. Today Hampton Institute has grown to an aggregate of 139 buildings occupying 75 acres of land with an enrollment of over 1,500 young men and women. Students are trained in hand as well as mind and taught primarily to make a living in accordance with the ideal of the founder, General Samuel Chapman Armstrong (1839-1893). The trade school teaches everything from brick-laying to tailoring while the collegiate schools teach agriculture, arts and sciences, business, education, home economics, library science and nursing. OGDEN HALL seats 2,000 people and the yearly concert season which features internationally famed artists, symphony orchestras, ballets and opera companys, is patronized by the entire population of the Peninsula. On Sunday evenings the students assemble in Ogden Hall to sing spirituals and other typical Negro music.

In 1878 INDIAN PRISONERS OF WAR from Florida were sent to Hampton Institute to be educated and Indians from all over the country continued to be enrolled until 1923. A large number of Sioux Indians from the Dakotas are buried in the OLD CEMETERY at the southeast corner of the campus. A trip to this cemetery is worth while to read the picturesque Indian names on the tombstones, examples of which are Daniel Fire-Cloud, Virginia Medicine-Bull, Benjamin Bear-Bird, Lora Bowed-Headsnow, Mary Red-Bird, John Blue-Pipe, George Sharp-Horn, and Walter Little-Eagle. This cemetery also contains the ivy covered tomb of the founder GENERAL ARMSTRONG who was born in Hawaii of American missionary parents, was a general in the Union Army during the Civil War, and later made Negro education his life work.

General Armstrong persuaded the American Missionary Society to buy the land on which the institute stands and formal instruction was begun in 1868 in a converted Union hospital with himself as principal, two teachers to assist him, and 15 ex-slaves as pupils. Funds granted by the Federal Government at the outset were soon exhausted and the continuance of the work has since depended on contributions from friends of the Institute and what the school could earn for itself. One building was Chapel, Hampton Institute.

Partly constructed by students in trade school.

“sung up,” for General Armstrong took the Hampton Institute Singers on a tour of the United States and Canada where they gave 500 concerts. They brought back $20,000 for the construction of Virginia Hall. The HUNTINGTON MEMORIAL LIBRARY was donated by Collis P. Huntington, the railway magnate who built the Newport News shipyard. This library is one of the finest in the South, containing 77,674 volumes, including a special collection dealing with the Negro. Among Hampton Institute’s famous graduates are Booker T. Washington who walked all the way from West Virginia to enroll in the school and Dorothy Maynor, the well-known concert singer.

Directly behind the campus is a CIVIL WAR CEMETERY belonging to the Kecoughtan Veterans Administration. It is beautifully laid out and contains several interesting monuments and cast iron plaques. It was started at the close of the Civil War with the bodies of soldiers who had died in fighting between Hampton and Richmond. Over 400 of the bodies were those of unknown soldiers. Later burials have been those of inmates of the National Soldiers’ Home now known as the Veterans Administration. The VETERANS ADMINISTRATION lies between Hampton and Old Point Comfort on the approximate site of the old Indian village of Kecoughtan. This is why the name Kecoughtan was revived as a post office address for the institution by Col. Keith Ryan, former head of the local Veterans Administration. The National Soldiers’ Home was established in 1871 in the building formerly occupied by the Chesapeake Female Seminary. Continued as the Veterans Administration it has long imparted a specific flavor to Hampton life. The older veterans amble along the streets, stand on the street corners, or lounge contentedly on the wharves. Some hawk knickknacks of their own making such as canes, leather belts, or metal ware. The KECOUGHTAN HOSPITAL, a magnificent 600 bed hospital fronting on Hampton Roads, surrounded by beautiful grounds, ministers to sick veterans of all United States Wars. The last Civil War veteran expired several years ago and the Spanish-American War veterans have taken over the ancient status formerly occupied by the Civil War veterans.

Several miles to the north of Hampton is the LANGLEY FIELD AIR BASE. It is not only an important Army Air Force post, but it is the home of the NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS (N. A. C. A.) where scientists toil night and day in the giant wind-tunnels to unlock the secrets of the air. Founded in 1917 with about a dozen employees, its personnel has grown to 3,300. Its payroll is over $1,000,000 per month and the plant is valued at $50,000,000. The organization’s aim is to assure American leadership in aeronautics. At present tourists are allowed to drive through the Langley Field Air Base. Northeast of Hampton is BUCKROE BEACH which is located on Chesapeake Bay. It is a summer resort for salt water bathing, fishing and dancing and also has a large amusement park. In 1620 the London Company sent Frenchmen to Buckroe to teach the colonists silkworm culture. Because the early navigators had confidently expected to find India instead of America when they sailed due west, the London business men could not rid themselves of the idea that the New World must have the same possibilities as India and other Oriental countries. Silkworm culture at Buckroe soon failed and the colonists turned to tobacco raising which was to be the Peninsula’s main industry for several centuries.

NEWPORT NEWS is a thriving seaport and shipbuilding center located on the western shore of the Peninsula at the mouth of the James River. “The World’s Greatest Harbor” is the city’s proud boast. Although settled in 1619 it remained an unimportant fishing village until 1880 when it was chosen as the Atlantic deepwater, coal-shipping terminal for the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway system. Today it is the world’s largest coal-shipping terminal. In 1889 Collis P. Huntington built the NEWPORT NEWS SHIPBUILDING AND DRY DOCK COMPANY and since then the growth of the city has been rapid. During World War II about 30,000 men were employed in the shipyard, many of whom remained in Newport News. The shipyard stretches a mile or so along the James River and covers 125 acres. Huntington's motto is inscribed on a monument inside the shipyard gate: "WE SHALL BUILD GOOD SHIPS HERE AT A PROFIT IF WE CAN, AT A LOSS IF WE MUST, BUT ALWAYS GOOD SHIPS." This shipyard is proud to have built the S. S. America, the largest passenger ship yet built in this country. Among the many famous fighting ships it has turned out are the Yorktown, the Hornet, the Midway and the Coral Sea. The keel for the $189,000,000 super-carrier, "The United States" was laid in the Newport News Yard. During both World Wars, Newport News was a major supply and embarkation port for the European theater of war. Under the Victory Arch at 25th Street and West Avenue there marched 441,146 homecoming World War I veterans in 1918 and 1919.

Newport News boasts three unique and outstanding museums on its outskirts. The MARINERS' MUSEUM is located in a park of more than 800 acres, and contains a vast collection of ship figureheads, prints and marine paintings, ship models, anchors, marine engines, deck and steering gear and navigation instruments. It also houses a library of over 32,000 books and manuscripts. THE WAR MEMORIAL MUSEUM OF VIRGINIA contains a collection of army guns, tanks and other military equipment of World Wars I and II. It is also the official museum of the N. A. C. A. and has working models of the great wind tunnels of Langley Field. THE JAMES RIVER GOLF MUSEUM is considered one of the finest of its kind outside of St. Andrews, Scotland. It was established by Archer M. Huntington. All these museums are free of charge.

The town of Newport News has all the flavor of a seaport. Its streets are enlivened by the uniforms of sailors from warships out in the harbor, soldiers from Langley Field and Fort Monroe, Military and Naval police assist the civilian police in keeping order on the town's main thoroughfare, Washington Avenue, which reminds the Mid-Westerner of a smaller edition of State Street in Chicago. Groups of swarthy, gesticulating foreign merchant seamen from the Mediterranean countries give an exotic touch. One even sees an occasional turbaned Lascar sailor from the Far East. Newport News has a festive air when the shipyard launches a new vessel with the ceremony presided over by visiting high dignitaries. The city is connected with the mainland by ferry and by the almost unbelievably long James River Bridge which stretches five miles from shore to shore. Viewed in the distance from the north end of the city it makes a sight that one does not soon forget.

Further up the Peninsula are the historic shrines of WILLIAMSBURG, JAMESTOWN, and YORKTOWN. The attractions of these places are too well known and too thoroughly catalogued to need space in this article.

The Mariners' Museum, Newport News.

The ramparts of Fort Monroe (right) with the moat and the famous old Water Battery (left) which has since been demolished.

Fort Monroe was formerly one of the mightiest forts in the world. Begun in 1819, it was designed by one of Napoleon's righthand men, General Simon Bernard. Bernard also designed the fortifications of Antwerp in Belgium for Napoleon, but Fort Monroe is his masterpiece.

Bernard was born in 1779. After graduating from the Ecole Polytechnique, he was commissioned in the French Army where his rise was rapid. He became an aide-de-camp to Napoleon and was one of the last to leave the Emperor's side at the battle of Waterloo in 1815.

Exiled to the United States, he was, through the influence of Lafayette, given a commission as brigadier general in the Engineers Corps of the U. S. Army. During this tour of duty he designed Fort Monroe. After the 1830 revolution in France he returned to his native land, where he was made Minister of War. Just before his death in 1839 he was created a baron.

Many people famous in history have crossed the bridge shown in this picture. They include Lafayette, Chief Black Hawk, Edgar Allen Poe, Robert E. Lee, Abraham Lincoln, General Grant and Jefferson Davis. Gun No. 40 in the Water Battery was a famous trysting place for sweethearts. It now stands on the lawn in front of Post Headquarters.
