1-18-2012

The Parthenon, January 18, 2012

Crystal Myers
Parthenon@marshall.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://mds.marshall.edu/parthenon

Recommended Citation
http://mds.marshall.edu/parthenon/135

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives at Marshall Digital Scholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Parthenon by an authorized administrator of Marshall Digital Scholar. For more information, please contact zhangj@marshall.edu.
Tompkin discusses jobs, substance abuse, expansion

By Sarah Stiles

Earl Ray Tomblin, West Virginia’s governor, gave his State of the State Address in Charleston on Jan. 11.

Topics included in his speech were jobs, substance abuse and the expansion of opportunities in the state.

In response to the addresses, the University President Stephen J. Kopp, had very positive remarks toward the improvements made by Tomblin.

“He painted a very good picture of the state’s financial health and what separates West Virginia from the rest of the country in terms of the very prudent physical infrastructure management that has guided decision making both in terms of the guidelines and executive branch,” Kopp said.

According to Tomblin’s address, a key point that affects these education placements of employees, the Governor has recommended the West Virginia Office of Multicultural Affairs as part of the annual celebration of King’s birthday.

“I hope this inspires you to stand up and stand firm yourself in your neighborhoods,” Rev. Roy Terry, of the 16th Street Baptist Church, said of the play. The play was preceded by a march from the 16th Street Baptist Church to the Joan C. Edwards Performing Arts Center.

Before the play the Martin Luther King Jr. Male Chorus performed a musical selection. The chorus is based in Charleston and it is made up of choir students from throughout the Kanawha Valley. They have performed at many events throughout the state — most notably, the internally televised memorial service for the late United States Senator Robert C. Byrd.

The event was hosted by members of the Kan. Zeta Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. in honor of King and his widow and the Theta Omega Chapters of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc. in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. and his wife. Both women were instrumental to the civil rights movement and continued to work long after their husbands were assassinated.

The play takes place inside a Harlem hotel room in Feb. 1965 — just days before Malcolm X was assassinated.

The play uses a mixture of comedy, drama and arm wrestling to tell a story of the debates between King and Malcolm X on their methods and beliefs of being about equality for African Americans. The play showed how the men believed in very different means; but had great respect for one another. King’s main belief was that African Americans had to act aggressively to protect themselves and overcome aggression. Whereas, Malcolm X was more radical and inclined to act aggressively to protect African Americans and civil rights from those who meant harm to them.

To close the event, Rev. Terry led the audience in singing “Lift Ev’ry Voice” and “Sing” by James Weldon Johnson. The poets and music were written in 1909 and are regarded as the African American national americans. Travis Easter can be contacted at easter14@marshall.edu

---

Marvin Luther King, Jr. meets Malcolm X

By Travis Easter

The play was preceded by a march from the 16th Street Baptist Church to the Joan C. Edwards Performing Arts Center.

Before the play the Martin Luther King Jr. Male Chorus performed a musical selection. The chorus is based in Charleston and it is made up of choir students from throughout the Kanawha Valley. They have performed at many events throughout the state — most notably, the internally televised memorial service for the late United States Senator Robert C. Byrd.

The event was hosted by members of the Kan. Zeta Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc. in honor of King and his widow and the Theta Omega Chapters of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc. in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. and his wife. Both women were instrumental to the civil rights movement and continued to work long after their husbands were assassinated.

The play takes place inside a Harlem hotel room in Feb. 1965 — just days before Malcolm X was assassinated.

The play uses a mixture of comedy, drama and arm wrestling to tell a story of the debates between King and Malcolm X on their methods and beliefs of being about equality for African Americans. The play showed how the men believed in very different means; but had great respect for one another. King’s main belief was that African Americans had to act aggressively to protect themselves and overcome aggression. Whereas, Malcolm X was more radical and inclined to act aggressively to protect African Americans and civil rights from those who meant harm to them.

To close the event, Rev. Terry led the audience in singing “Lift Ev’ry Voice” and “Sing” by James Weldon Johnson. The poets and music were written in 1909 and are regarded as the African American national americans. Travis Easter can be contacted at easter14@mar

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.

---

Cardiology HealthCare Physicians, Inc. awarded the grant last Wednesday to help add a new treatment option for ex-smokers with alcohol issues. Opiate addiction is currently the most common high-risk problem found among pregnant women. Dr. Robert C. Neesham, interim dean at the School of Medicine said a study conducted by the West Virginia Department of Maternal and Child Health confirmed in a randomly sampled cohort, 19.2 percent of the births in West Virginia were positive for drugs or alcohol.

The opiate addiction clinic will be incorporated into the existing high-risk clinic within Cabell Huntington Hospital. It will not be a freestanding clinic or a free-standing facility. Inpatient services will be provided at Cabell Huntington Hospital just like they are for any other patient in the facility.

Dr. David Jaffe, professor and chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the School of Medicine, said the goal of the clinic is to provide a comprehensive prenatal and postpartum care for high-risk clinic.
Fans race to Big Sandy for annual Indoor Motocross Championship

By CHELIE SCHULIES

The 2012 West Virginia Independent School Association (WVISA) Indoor Motocross Championship brought more than 4,000 fans to the Big Sandy SuperSpects Arenas in downtown Huntington this past weekend.

Action Sports Indoor Motorcross sponsored the event with competitors as young as five-years-old to more experienced riders to race to the finish line. Racers are not required to be members of the American Motorcycle Association.

In order to build the race, 2,300 cubic yards of dirt had to be transported to the arena. Double, triple and sister, Garrett Hol-...
Mountaineers topple Herd in Capital Classic

BY JAYE EVANDER THE PARTHENON

Wednesday night, the Marshall Thundering Herd (13-4, 4-2) and the West Virginia Mountaineers (15-4, 2-0), will meet up at Charleston for the 40th meeting between the only two Division I schools in the state. Last season, Marshall eked out a 69-57 victory. The Mountain East Conference's leading scorer, Jarrod Clay can be contacted at clay1805@marshall.edu.

More demand means bigger atmosphere at Capital Classic

BY LAUREN WRIGHT | THE PARTHENON

The Marshall women's basketball team fell Tuesday to West Virginia in a tough contest that featured 52 combined fouls. The Marshall women's basketball team fell Tuesday to West Virginia in a tough contest that featured 52 combined fouls.
House fires pose a serious risk

TO THE EDITOR,

I bring this up because two years ago, on Christmas day, my wife got a phone call from her aunt, “Aunt Sylvia,” and her husband Dan had both perished in a house fire in their home in Virginia. It was a shock to the heart. We had just seen Sylvia and Dan at Thanksgiving giving the year prior. In 2010, Dan and Sylvia were to have celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Dan had been overcome by smoke in their home while Sylvia was found near the front door, but apparently she had been overcome as well and was not able to make it out of the house safely.

My group and I predict that there is a little-known fact that has to do with real problems, particularly in Appalachia and the southeastern United States. According to FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Administration), house fires are on the decline from 10,923,000 in 2010 to 832,000 in 2011. During that same period, the number of deaths related to house fires remained constant—averaging 2,350 per year. That does not sound all that troublesome, except that according to the CDC (Center for Disease Control and Prevention), “African Americans and Native Americans have the highest rate of fire-related deaths. The same report noted that men are less likely to survive a house fire than women and that it makes inhalation that causes death easier for fire, and not the fire itself.”

But, West Virginia has a very low African American and Native American population. Per capita, what does this mean? There are other indicators that would place West Virginia at the top of the list. Alcohol consumption, drug use, smoking, has been attributed to house fires. That leads to rural communities and lack of coordination in how this role in house fires starting and not death. A friend of mine, who was a Marshall student at the time, marathoned a house fire a couple of years ago, where there were other students and they knew how to do that to house fires. They did not know that, that could he doing it. The people in the house knew what could have been the responsibility of each of us to be mindful of their actions.

According to FEMA, smoking-related incidents are the leading cause of fire-related deaths.

TO THE EDITOR,

Marshall University’s student newspaper, is published by students Mondays through Fridays during the regular semesters, and weekly Thursdays during the summer. The Parthenon, Marshall University’s student newspaper, is lineberry2@marshall.edu.

TO THE EDITOR,

FEMA reports that African Americans and Native Americans have the highest rate of fire-related deaths. The same report noted that men are less likely to survive a house fire than women and that it makes inhalation that causes death easier for fire, and not the fire itself.

But, West Virginia has a very low African American and Native American population. Per capita, what does this mean? There are other indicators that would place West Virginia at the top of the list. Alcohol consumption, drug use, smoking, has been attributed to house fires. That leads to rural communities and lack of coordination in how this role in house fires starting and not death. A friend of mine, who was a Marshall student at the time, marathoned a house fire a couple of years ago, where there were other students and they knew how to do that to house fires. They did not know that, that could he doing it. The people in the house knew what could have been the responsibility of each of us to be mindful of their actions.

According to FEMA, smoking-related incidents are the leading cause of fire-related deaths.
"They receive their personal care that is directed by two high-risk pregnancy specialists, Dr. Chaffin and Dr. Stone," Jude said. "They have full-time addictions counselors here. We do it all internally compared to seeing multiple physicians. The grant from Carelink gives us the ability to cover the salary of our counselor and expenses of surplus and support staff."

Dr. Yolanda Campbell, Cabell Huntington Hospital Obstetrician and Gynecologist, said they are dealing with highly addictive medications that are hard for mothers to get off.

"We see a lot of women who seem to want to do the right thing but fail unfortunately because they are addicted. The biggest obstacles are those for programs like this are patients being able to follow through and stick to the program," Campbell said.

The Maroon Opium Addiction Clinic in already accepting patients and plans to increase the number of patients seen in the future.

"It was a wild game," Chadwick said. "I thought our players really fought hard all night long and tried to make some things happen down the stretch." The Thundering Herd picked up at least one point from behind the arc in the second half. The team did manage to outrebound the Mountaineers 44 to 33, including 18 offensive rebounds. Lauren Elliott led the Herd in scoring, grabbing 11 points. Twelve Marshall players scored at least once. Rebounds were spread across the board, as well as 13 members of the Herd picked up at least one steal.

The women’s basketball team now returns back to Conference USA play as they play at the University of Central Florida on Sunday at the Cam Henderson Center. The Knights (7-6, 3-0) are coming off the Henderson Center on just two days’ rest, after a home contest against Rice.

Jake Snyder can be contacted at synder100@marshall.edu.

---

STATE
Continued from Page 1

and there is no authorization to what an institution’s liability truly is," Kopp said. Any assumptions or predications may not be accurate as they overestimate real liability.

"Marshall uses five-year budget projections," Kopp said. "The State is reworking the issue so we can begin to look at what we are going to be responsible for and how we can plan for liabilities from a year to year basis as well as a five-year rolling basis."

As a higher education institution, Marshall is producing thousands of educated college graduates every year.

EARL Ray Tomblin’s plan to create several jobs that offer benefits in the state of West Virginia is a great way to keep the new graduates in state.

"We know we are producing college graduates," Kopp said. "We want them to stay in the state. We want them to use their intellectual horsepower to help our state grow and develop economically and socially."

A positive campaign to continue from the former Manchin administration in the goal to eliminate substance abuse throughout the state.

The emphasis given to this campaign correlates with the new, as well as the existing industries expanding in the state. Kopp said the single most important consideration is that we have an educated and drug-free workforce.

"Students need to recognize that they have a personal responsibility to not only prepare themselves intellectually for their chosen career path, but they have the responsibility to how they live their lives that is consistent with employability," Kopp said. Student Body President, Ray Harrell Jr., said in the issue of substance abuse that it should be tackled proactively rather than reactively.

"People need to be educated or they’re not going to know any better," Harrell said. "It is important for our present and future West Virginia workforce to know the dangers of drug abuse."

The state legislature resumed last Wednesday where more progress was jumpstarted on statements discussed throughout the State of the State address. Budgets and project timelines will be completed and many might be effective to higher education facilities such as Marshall.

In closing, Tomblin said, "Together, we can make West Virginia all it can be."
242062
NEBRASKA BOOK CO C/O REFUEL
THE HOLY CRAP SALE
6 x 21.5
3 / 3 / 3