Abstract: Huntington, West Virginia, family. Includes material related to business interests of Thomas Harvey, correspondence, school papers, teaching materials of Marshall College English professor Helen Brandebury Harvey, and photographs, as well as extensive letters to their daughter Ida during WWII.

Scope and Content

The Harvey Family was prominent during the early years of Huntington, West Virginia. Patriarch Col. Robert Thomas Harvey arrived in Huntington in the 1870's with sons Clayte, Harry .C., and William Hope "Coin" Harvey. Harry would open a large grocery in 1887 and in 1895 was first president of Huntington Chamber of Commerce. Along with William's brother, Judge Thomas H. Harvey, the family was instrumental in establishing the First National Bank of Huntington. Thomas Harvey Sr. was an attorney and candidate for mayor. In 1915, Thomas married Helen Brandebury, heir to the Brandebury Estate of Lawrence County, and the Brandebury Dairy company in Huntington. Helen (Mrs. Thomas W. Harvey) was politically active during World War II in the League of Nations, the Y.M.C.A., the Newspapers International Association, and was a member of the University Women's Association. She was a business woman who managed the Harvey-Brandebury They had three children: Thomas, Jr., who would join the military and later serve as Prosecuting Attorney for Huntington; Helen B. Harvey who aspired to become a playwright and follows the Hollywood connection of the family, Richard Halliday, husband of Mary Martin and becomes a prestigious agent for Jean Arthur, Neil Simon, Gene Hackman, and more; and Ida Halliday Harvey's artifacts give us a glimpse into the life of a politically aware college student during the buildup and duration of World War II.

The bulk of the collection contain correspondences and personal and professional documents/artifacts of Helen B. Harvey (Mrs. Thomas W. Harvey, Sr.), including items from her tenure as a professor of English at Marshall College; Helen B. Harvey's artifacts include plays she wrote; Thomas Jr. leaves a few documents relating to education; Ida's collection captures a snapshot of courtship rituals with dance-cards, calling cards, and poetry from young men of the time. Her artifacts also paint a charming portrait of college antics, pranks, and social etiquette of the time period. The collection includes an expansive amount of published works chronicling the Nazi buildup, Roosevelt's response, and the public's perception of the times.

This collection was a gift from Helen Brandenburg Harvey.

Abstract: Huntington, West Virginia, family. Includes material related to business interests of Thomas Harvey, correspondence, school papers, teaching materials of Marshall College English professor Helen Brandebury Harvey, and photographs, as well as extensive letters to their daughter Ida during WWII.

SCOPE, CONTENT, AND BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE COLLECTION

Thomas W. Harvey Sr., born to Anna Halliday and William Hope (Coin) Harvey October 27, 1881, and Helen Brandebury, heir to the Brandebury Estate in Lawrence County and the Brandebury Dairy Company in Huntington, were married in 1915. "Coin" Harvey was a vocal advocate of the free silver movement and a leading populist in the 1890s. A lawyer, rancher, and former prospector, Coin Harvey was the author of the influential pamphlet Coin's Financial School (1894), which sold hundreds of thousands of copies. The treatise argued for monetary inflation through increased coinage of silver. Free silver was Harvey's panacea for the economic problems of 1893, and it was adopted by the Populist Party. In 1900 Coin Harvey moved to Silver Springs, AR, and turned his large property into a pleasure and health resort named Monte Ne.

Thomas Harvey was bound for success at a very young age. He was an enterprising young man who helped erect the theater building at Monte Ne in July 1901; by 1904 he owned and edited the Monte Ne Herald with Tony LeBlanc, a railroad purchasing agent. In 1907 he was given the railway in the city by his uncle, young Tom acted as railroad engineer, fireman, brakeman, and conductor. During his years in Arkansas, he was good friends with the legendary Will Rogers. Tom eventually became a lawyer and moved to Huntington to be near his mother, who was separated from his father. After a brief law practice he turned to real estate dealings and served as a trustee of his Uncle Judge Thomas Harvey's $2,000,000 estate with his cousin Harry H. Harvey, who killed himself in two years before Tom did the same. During his lifetime Thomas was a husband, a father of three (Helen, Thomas Jr., and Ida), an attorney, real estate mogul, and a candidate for mayor and sheriff. He took his life in 1941. This collection contains many of the personal and business files of Thomas Harvey in its original order.

Dr. Henry Andrew Brandebury (1856-?) and IdaBelle Haning (1860-1904) gave birth to Helen Gertrude Brandebury (1893-1998). Helen later assumed the name Helen B. Harvey, changing her middle initial from her given middle name to one representing her maiden name. Later, Helen and her husband, Thomas W. Harvey named their eldest child, Helen Brandebury Harvey, thus potentially creating an element of confusion for the researcher. Dr. H.A. Brandebury, was a long time physician who operated a medical practice in Huntington during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. He was also served as the mayor of Huntington, W.Va., and possessed a dairy farm in Lawrence County, Ohio. This collection contains ledgers from Dr. Brandebury's medical practice dating from 1897 to the early 1920s.

Helen B. Harvey, a.k.a. Mrs. Thomas W. Harvey, was an alumnus and a member of the Marshall University (College) Faculty. She completed her master's thesis on the topic of England's Lady Falkland. She later earned her Ph.D. and worked in the English Department, until she retired in 1959. This collection is a segment of her family papers. During WWII, she was politically active in the League of Nations, Y.M.C.A., the Newspapers International Association, and was a member of the University Women's Association.

A large segment of the collection consists of the personal correspondence addressed to Ida Harvey (1924-1987), the youngest of the three Harvey children. More than 300 hundred letters, the bulk being postmarked between 1940-43, were addressed to Ida while she was in attendance at Oberlin College. While some were from family members and female friends, the vast majority was from young suitors. Some of these were from young men serving in the military. Proportionally, (five folders worth) the greatest number of letters was from Bob Wright, an Ohio State track athlete. Though he signed his letters "With All My Love," it was a contentious relationship. The collection also contains course materials and notebooks from her time at Oberlin College and Marshall College.

To a minor degree, papers and correspondences from siblings Thomas W. Harvey, Jr. and Helen B. Harvey (II) are also included.
