The area was mitigated very recently as "semi-normal levels," he said, and "conditioned back to "semi-normal levels." The incident area is a heavily wooded area, not at work. Police Department.

A house is seen destroyed in the mud on Highway 530 next to mile marker 37 Sunday, the day after a giant landslide occurred near mile marker 37 near Oso. At least six homes were burned, with as many reported downed or at fault at 10:10 p.m. Evacuating Stillaguamish has been done down by 15 to 20 feet of debris as a result, creating more flooding concerns, according to King County’s civil and county’s civil and阅读自然。
Mike Hamrick said he will give no hints in who will be the next head coach, Tom Herrion resigned March 14 after ending the 2013-2014 season with a 13-22 record and the team fell in Old Dominion in the second round of the Conference USA tournament.

Mike Hamrick said he accepted Herrion’s resignation after a long talk Friday morning after the team returned from the conference tournament.

“I accepted his resignation and thanked him for everything he’s done at Marshall and to Marshall,” he said. “He took over a program that had issues that many people were not aware of such as some others such as at wide receiver, where the question is who will Cato have to throw to besides Tommy Holliday said. “He did a great job with protection of shielding his nose up in the up and blocking backers and protecting. Those other guys are talented backs but they have to become good all around backs like Taliferro did.”

On the defensive side of the ball, redshirt (junior) DL Hunter will be moving back to linebacker at least for spring practice. Holliday said the move allows for the defensive assistant to be versatile.

“We might not be as quite as much sick as we were because of some issues,” Holliday said. “I can go out there and even though he’s a strong side linebacker it’s no different than the nickel position and play some of that. Holliday said, “That allows us to put Corey [TATERIALTO] at corner. Holliday will probably see a lot of corner this spring just to get him out there because he can always come back and play nickel.”

Marshall will have 15 practices this spring to work on those position battles as well as some others such as at wide receiver, where the question is who will Cato have to throw to besides Tommy Shuler, and place kicker. During spring practice, Holliday said the Thundering Herd has the most position battles as well as some others such as at wide receiver, where the question is who will Cato have to throw to besides Tommy Shuler, and place kicker. During spring practice, Holliday said the Thundering Herd has the most question marks surrounding the team.

Phelps' death is no reason to celebrate

Fred Phelps, founder and pastor of Kansas-based Westboro Baptist Church, died Thursday. His shocking and offensive com- ments from both critics and supporters. Phelps was best known for his_wounding homo- phobic beliefs, and that natural disasters and horrors such as the deaths of soldiers were God’s punishment for a thresh- old acceptance of homosexuality. Many reacted in the past with disgust, condemning him to an eternity of suf-fering in hell, as one ONC.com commenter paraphrased, “My mother said to only say nice things about the dead. He’s dead. Fine now.” This particular kind of comment can not be tolerated, especially by those who(birth of Tim Berners-Lee’s World Wide Web, the integrity of the Internet is threat-ened and serving as unofficial governor of the Inter-net for decades). California’s Jon Postel, died in 1998 after serving as an administrator of the Intern- et for decades. Valley Island Van Gouw said that the Per-son’s legacy: “He was our rock. He was the foundation on which our web was built. He was the one who formulated the Inter- net’s core philosophy. His philosophy is known as Postel’s law, and it is that any implementation should be conservative in its sending behavior, and liberal in its receiving behavior.” Postel died just as the current Inter- net administrator, the Los Angeles-based ICANN, (The Internet Corporation for Na- med Names and Numbers, was being formed. ICANN contracts with the Com- mercial Department to keep the system running. Critics of releasing control once, inclu- ding Republican Newt Gingrich, fear that foreign governments will seize it and stifle its democratic principles. It’s a legiti-mate fear, given that in 2012, the World Conference on International Telecommu-nications considered handing control of Internet operations to the United Nations, a frightening thought. Commerce Department officials have issued guiding principles for the next governing body that emphasize the im-portance of a stable, open Internet. They maintain they will not turn over control to a government-led organization of any form. That’s a relief. An ICANN’s stakeholder meeting begin- ning Friday in Singapore is supposed to clarify the transition. The Obama adminis-tration should insist on an international nonprofit with established Internet prin-ciples to assume leadership.

Unfortunately, the United States has lost some of its moral authority in this choice because its own spying narratives have been exposed. It’s one more reason the president needs to restore Internet integrity, starting with its own use of the system.

“Those are bad times as deep as the Grand Canyon over the harm that he has unleashed in our country, a sadness that we can’t quantify,” said Jim Smith, an associate director of LGBT Legal Advocacy Organization. Diversity USA, to CNN. “But not to know he will still doesn’t mean I’ll light in his death.” Phelps, though logically and disturbingly homophbic, had a great impact on soci-ety, as he spread hate and appeased equality, to condemn Phelps to eternal punish-ment. To celebrate death or eternal damnation of any human, no matter the harm or (TUESDAY, MARCH 25, 2014)

What was the happiest moment of your life?
It would probably be making the audition for the percussion ensemble that I’m in. I mean, I worked really hard for it, and finally getting called back and accepted was really exciting.

If you could give one piece of advice to a large group of people, what would it be?
Do what makes you happy, and don’t apologize for it.

Bateman sheds put-upon guy image in ‘Bad Words’

By ROGER MOORE
MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE (MCT)

All those years of packing his resume with “long suffering”ensible guys forced to do the slow burn when confronted by irrational family, bosses or identity thieves must have gotten to Jason Bateman. He unloads that past with his directing debut, a film about an uncensored, unfiltered, eternally angry 40-year-old who is more “no burn” than slow burn. In “Bad Words” he is a “Bad Santa” on his own quixotic “Little Miss Sunshine” quest, a man with issues who refuses to explain those issues to those he insults every step of the way.

Guy Trilby proof-reads product warranties for a living. But he’s taken time off for a shot at winning The Golden Quill National Spelling Bee and its $50,000 first prize.

Yeah, it’s a contest for kids. But he’s found a loophole. And no amount of abuse from contest organizers or the mercenary parents of his fellow spellers can dissuade him. Every meeting with such folks becomes a debate, then a shouting match. You don’t want to insult him. Because not only is Guy an orthographic whiz, he is seriously misanthropic. He gets personal in a flash, a rude and crude man operating with a short, profane fuse. He won’t discuss his reasons for pursuing this embarrassing fool’s errand, not even with the journalist (Kathryn Hahn, hilarious) whose website is sponsoring his entry.

And then this adorable Indian-American boy of ten (Rohan Chand) forces his way into Trilby’s field of view.

Bateman, working from an Andrew Dodge script, fills this short, corrosive comedy with “Oh no he didn’t” moments. Guy is poker-faced as he plays evil mind-games with the poor kids unlucky enough to sit next to him on the spelling bee stage. Guy is shameless, even as he seems to warm just a little to the boy who insists on being his friend — taking him for reckless rental-car rides, teaching him to cuss, to drink, when to tip or not tip a hooker.

Allison Janney is the Queen Bee who vows to stop Trilby from ruining this hallowed event, and Philip Baker Hall is well-cast as the elderly wordsmith who long ruled the roost at the Golden Quill, now a spelling bee PBS commentator.

The best moments let Bateman and veteran funnywoman Hahn (TV’s “Parks & Recreation”) go toe to toe and blow for blow in scenes that take their relationship from testy co-dependency to sexual, without missing a malevolent beat.

The film is full of sharp observations about academic contests today, with Tiger Moms and tough-love Dads browbeating the kids from the wings. The ending is kind of a tap-out, but Bateman keeps this clipping along, maintaining the mean streak and potty mouth that make “Bad Words” the dirtiest and funniest comedy of the new year.
