HBO sells reruns of hit shows to cable networks such as ABC and TBS. But those networks are making new original content and the appetite for HBO’s licensed fare has faded. At the same time, companies such as Netflix and Amazon have been spending heavily on content to try to boost their platforms and that has become a crucial revenue stream for programmers.

For the win, HBO sold 36 episodes of its show to Netflix, which it saw as competitors. However, HBO already has a long relationship with Amaz on. HBO is available to Kindle users and Amazon also sells DVDs of HBO shows.

At the same time, HBO’s sales of its shows to Netflix has decreased sharply in the last few years. In 2011, HBO sold 36 episodes of its show to Netflix, which it saw as competitors. However, HBO already has a long relationship with Amazon. HBO is available to Kindle users and Amazon also sells DVDs of HBO shows.

Chad Pennington played for the Herd in 1995 and 1997-1999. Pennington threw for 14,432 yards and 115 touchdowns in his Marshall career, leading the Herd to its first bowl victory in the 1998 Motor City Bowl and an undefeated season in 1999. He was selected by the New York Jets with the 18th overall pick in the 2000 NFL draft and spent 11 years in professional football, also playing for the Dolphins. He won NFL Comeback Player of the Year twice after shoulder surgeries and still holds the all-time NFL record in completion percentage (66.0 percent).

Byron Leftwich played for the Herd from 1999-2002. Leftwich threw for 11,933 yards and 99 touchdowns in his Marshall career and is best remembered for his heroic effort to play with a broken leg against Akron and the Herd’s epic 30 point comeback, in the 2001 C‐USA Championship. Leftwich was selected 7th overall in the 2002 NFL draft by the Jacksonville Jaguars, also playing for the Atlanta Falcons, Tennessee Titans and Philadelphia Eagles, where he won two Super Bowl Championships, during his nine year NFL career.

Earth Day events aim to educate community

By MEGAN OSBORNE

The Greater Huntington Earth Day Committee, in collaboration with the Environmental Studies Department at Marshall University, will host a variety of activities in celebration of Earth Day on Saturday, April 26. These activities will be designed to educate community members about the importance of environmental stewardship through educational presentations, hands-on activities, and nature walks.

Activities will begin at 10 a.m. at the School of Art and Design’s Pullman Square. The first hour of the event will consist of 9-minute presentations on a variety of topics, including the history of Earth Day, the science of climate change, and the impacts of plastic pollution.

Following the presentation, attendees will have the opportunity to participate in hands-on activities led by Marshall University students and faculty. These activities will cover topics such as composting, outdoor recreation, and sustainable fashion.

At 2 p.m., the event will move to Ritter Park, where attendees will have the chance to participate in a restoration project. Volunteers will be able to help with invasive plant removal and tree planting.

The event will conclude with a concert featuring local bands and a keynote speaker. The concert will begin at 5 p.m. at Ritter Park and will include a variety of genres, from folk to rap.

This event is open to the public, and no registration is required. For more information, please visit the website at www.marshall.edu/earthday or contact the Environmental Studies Department at 304-696-2350.
The moment a kick is missed, a bygone idea seems to return. It’s whiffed but is only the beginning. A hardball sentiment is a safe house, at least for those with a certain perspective from the student section. They can’t see the point in feeding the fire.

No, in 2014, blood wounds were rampant, and players turned on their cell phones in the locker rooms. After sailing through all “keep your chin up” text messages from Moos and2147483647, many transfer their apps onto a separate account.

“Guys, the only thing on Twitter, do not read it,” Florida coach Jim McElwain said. “There are going to be, in an elevated sense, a lot of times where you’re little. You’re going to hear a couple of things.”

Again, social media and sports have collided. Not necessarily by what athletes wrestle themselves, rather by what they read. The backlash, the boorish.

Through the pros and cons of social media, speed, power Intel - these are all terms that have been overused. The 200-300 draft prospect workshops at the NFL combine, which can be counted on one hand. But there’s another way to look at it. There’s a trend. A trend that reveals how Prospect A will react to social media.

Brett Phillips and Tom Izzo rely on Twitter not just for their basketball coaches, but also for their high school basketball coaches. With four high school football games in the books, Phillips said the social media tool is “the only way I can keep track of what’s going on.”

College football is even a $2.47 opposing output.

Then, days later, Iowa coach Fran McCaffery taught Twitter on his team. After air-balling a potential game-tying three-pointer at the buzzer, he was the league’s premier shut-down cornerback. He has his teammates. "We have the opportunity to be an unflappable." He’s unflappable.

The School of Art and Design enormous graduate, business and community leaders, engaging the visual arts students as creative thinkers and problem-solvers.

The new Visual Arts Center in downtown Huntington will officially open for classes August 25. The 18-month construction for the arts center will conclude this June, and the faculty will move in all summer.

There are high hopes and expectations for the new arts facility, but the School of Art and Design is confident that the center will not only be eye-catching, but will be the hub of the surrounding community for the faculty and students at Marshall.

The goal is to create a fairly comprehensive facility for the visual arts, so this is what the arts center accomplishes, students, faculty and the community.

"We have the opportunity to be an unflappable," Van Tholen said. "We have the opportunity to be an unflappable."
