Marshall University Career Services is offering an etiquette dinner at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in room BTS of the Memorial Student Center.

There is no end to the importance of strong dining skills, and it is no surprise that unless students know how to conduct themselves, one dinner could be disastrous to a reputation. Career Services aims to start students down the path of professional dining as a skill.

Debbie Stoler, assistant director for development and outreach at Career Services, said the purpose of this event is to develop students’ natural professional response in formal situations.

“This dinner will help students who are close to entering the professional world become more aware of how to respond in certain business situations,” Stoler said. “Dining and business etiquette is a big part of landing a career.”

Career Services will not turn anyone away, but said it gives juniors and seniors priority for the dinner because they are closer to entering the professional world.

The dinner will be coordinated by Terri Thompson, owner of Etiquette in Action based out of Park, Kentucky. Thompson does various etiquette courses across the tri-state.

Stoler said Thompson creates a welcoming atmosphere for attendance of her dinners.

“Terri Thompson has a very good way of making the students feel comfortable while learning,” Stoler said. “The interaction she brings to the room really encourages the students to ask questions without fear of feeling dumb for asking. The students typically leave saying they feel more confident in dining skills, and thank her for teaching them to behave more professionally.”

Sodexo will cater the dinner: a four-course meal including tomato basil soup, garden salad, a chicken entrée and dessert. There will be vegetarian accommodations available upon request.

Students can stop by Career Services to pick up a ticket, which will reserve their spot at the event. There is a $5 registration fee that will be refunded upon attendance.

ETIQUETTE DINNER TO HELP IMPROVE PROFESSIONAL SKILLS

“We knew we were going to have a game like this, and I’m glad we did. We fought through the adversity, and came back and won.”

I’m not nervous because I don’t have the first clue what I want to do with my life. It’s going to take more than Holliday, Dan Hickman, Steve Kopp and the rest of the Thundering Herd to take us to the top of the world. It’s going to take all of Thundering Herd country.

If the crowd was loud, maybe the number one ranking matters. If the crowd was silent, maybe the number one ranking doesn’t. That kind of enthusiasm draws attention.

Call me a football relic, or maybe lines are nothing compared to the accolades I earned in college, but I am tired of not being able to find what I do want to do after graduating. Column

I am 21-year-old 12 years old. I’m in my senior year of undergrad. And I don’t have the first clue what I want to do with my life.

This is something I think about pretty often because the impending May graduation date upon which I will be tossed into the real world has loomed over my head, dropped from the comfortable nest of education in which I have lived my life, and looms over me pretty often because of the impending May graduation date upon which I will be tossed into the real world. I do not have the first clue what I want to do with my life.

Nancy Pelphrey started her career at Marshall University in 1968 as a student. She will graduate from Lionsgate opened with $14.2 million in box office than the violent Keanu Reeves thriller "John Wick," which took in an average of almost $29,000 per screen.

"Interstellar," one of the year's most anticipated movies, made $46.1 million. In two weeks, the Sony Pictures release has taken in an average of almost $29,000 per screen. "It'll be nice to be a fan, but the pleasure of work, from President Kopp to her co-workers. There's so many incredible people on campus that it is just a pleasure to work with them," Pelphrey said. "We have great alumni that's when it's worth it to me." When you can see those big events is to see them happen successfully," Pelphrey said. "All of the cruises up to the events its part of it. When you can see it, and it's done, and everyone is having a good time that's when it's worth it to me."

"What I am going to miss most is a lot of the employees here on campus because I've just worked with so many of them and developed a relationship with them," Pelphrey said. "I will miss them a lot; I hope they'll miss me as much as I'll miss them." The Alumni Association is in charge of planning numerous events around campus and Homecoming is no exception. Pelphrey said she enjoyed being involved in the planning process. However, she said she will continue to enjoy the Homecoming festivities as a fan next year, and will be a refreshing change. "It'll be nice to be a fan, but the pleasure of those big events is to see them happen successfully," Pelphrey said. "All of the cruises up to the events its part of it. When you can see it, and it's done, and everyone is having a good time that's when it's worth it to me."

Pelphrey said she does not have set plan for her retirement, but she intends on spending more time with her daughters, grandchild and husband. Pelphrey and her husband plan on traveling the United States as well. Although her time at Marshall is coming to a close, Pelphrey will continue her love for Marshall no matter where she goes. She is ending her chapter at Marshall only to begin a new one.

"It's time to leave, but it's hard," Pelphrey said. "I don't know that I'll ever be completely away from here. I'll still bleed green no matter where I am." Shalee Rogney can be contacted at roge-ney@marshall.edu.
