Eat and Drink for Pink at Fat Patty's

By KILEY UEVET

The 26th Annual Guyandotte Civil War Days and Cervical Cancer Screening Program Thursday was sponsored by the American Medical Women's Association. Fat Patty’s aims to raise money for women to receive free cervical cancer screenings and encourage women to seek preventative screenings for early cancer detection. The event’s president, President of AMWA, is the first-year medical student at Marshall University.

"We are doing the event to raise the money for the West Virginia Exemplar of Cervical Cancer Screening Program,” said Morgan Meadows. "That program allows women to come in for a free cervical cancer screening. Free of charge, give them information, teach them how to self-examine and to have a way for us to follow up on the women who have a negative test.

Last year’s event was able to raise close to $1,000. Meadows said, "The people who have had their health checked have said they want to come back next year.""Throughout the whole month of October you can go to Wal-Mart without buying anything pink.” Meadows said, "People have kind of lost how important women’s health is. We have a lot of different things, breast cancer is more prevalent in women, and if you catch it early it is curable and you can usually go into remission. If you catch it late, there is not a lot we can do. It’s kind of a little reminder of how important breast cancer, especially in younger women. The earlier you can catch it, they can keep their reproductive organs and go on to have families, whereas if you are not getting screened and not having these tests done they may have to have a hysterectomy and be not able to carry their own children. I think we lost sight of exactly what the cause is."

Fat Patty’s helped make the event possible by donating $70.00 for the guinea pig for the night.

"We try to help them every year” said Benjamin Johnson, manager at Fat Patty’s. "They basically know we have a donation set up by us and they can carry it on the event."" If you were one of the other businesses that helped raise money, you used the same costumes?" the cause.

The donations from each booth, the AMWA had a $10.00 raft for guests to enter and provide important information on both breast and cervical cancer. Kristen Livey can be contacted at livey37@marshall.edu.

Clocks fall back Sunday

By MACKENZI KYLE

Daylight savings time will end at 2 a.m. Sunday. Many accrue the idea of daylight savings time to Benjamin Franklin, who suggested shifting earlier in the morning and going to bed earlier in the evening would make better usage of daylight hours and save more fuel.

During World War I, President Woodrow Wilson signed a law instituting daylight savings time as a way to support the war effort. However, after the war, the law was repealed.

Many cities used daylight savings time following World War I, which meant at 2 a.m., clocks were one hour ahead of schedule. Most phones and electronic devices will automatically adjust.

The time will not change again until daylight savings time begins March 13, 2016.

Women’s Studies Masquerade Ball and Silent Auction

By KARIE JAMES

The women’s second annual Masquerade Ball and Silent Auction will be held at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Don Morris Room of the Memorial Student Center.

The event will feature steaks, non-alcoholic beverages, an open bar for 21 and up and a chance to win door prizes and bid in the silent auction.

"We want to raise money for local predatory women’s health care and awareness," said Laura Miecher DeSitter who said the event would like everyone to come.

"This is our second event ever,” DeSitter said. Tickets are $15 for students, $35 for non-students or two for $50. Those who cannot attend are encouraged to sponsor a student ticket.

"The Women's Studies is excited to get involved and attend the Masquerade Ball. "I’ve had my mouth picked out since forever now,” Smith said.

"It’s think it’s going to be a lot of fun." Tickets are $15 from the open bar, but she said she is ecstatic to see the other retrenchments the event will help support.

"I hope they have cool Halloween themed snacks,” Smith said. “I’m just excited to see what it all about."" Proceeds will benefit the women’s studies program and SAFE Inc., a domestic violence shelter based in Welch, West Virginia.

"They really like that they’re using this event as a way to actually help people,” Smith said.

The historic Madame Carrel house and barn can be toured from 6:30 until 5 p.m. Saturday.

Running back Hyleck Foster runs for a touchdown against the University of North Texas Oct. 24.

By ISHMAEL WITTEN THE PARTHENON

Heading into Saturday’s road contest, the Herd looks to remain on the winning track as it takes on the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Though Charlotte has yet to win a conference game, Marshall head coach Doc Holliday said it is a team with upset potential.

Holliday said Charlotte’s grittiness and effort in a reflection of head coach Brad Lambert.

“Real Lambert is a guy that I have great respect for,” Holliday said. “He’s done a great job with that football team and we’ve got to make sure we’re prepared to play.”

Coming into the contest, Charlotte ranks third in C-USA in total defense, rushing defense and third-down defense.

Aside from its defense, 49ers running back Kalif Phillips ranks second in the conference in rushing yards per game (110.6).

Phillips has been the consistent rusher for Charlotte throughout the season. Marshall moved slot receiver Steplock Foster to the position due to injuries to running backs Duren Johnson, Keni Watson and Tony Pettman.

Foster rushed for 105 yards on 17 carries last week in the team’s 30-13 victory against the University of North Texas.

“It’s easy to put the ball in his hands and let him run with it,” Holliday said. “Now he’s starting to get better at the pass protecting part of it.”

Marshall players will wear stickers with the No. 56 on their helmets to honor the late Phil Ratliff, the former Charlotte assistant coach who was a player and coach for the Herd before joining the 49ers staff.

Kickoff is set for 3:30 p.m. at Jerry Richardson Stadium in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Freekbass brings a Hoedown and Freektacular to Hauntington

The V-Club plays host to a Halloween weekend of events with musical styles from country, rock ’n’ roll, funk and even country funk.

“I’m not the biggest country fan, but I always did like the mid ’70s stuff because of that hint of funkiness to it,” said Brett Fuller, otherwise known as Charlie Brown Superstar, who will open country-rank tracks before, in between and after the Tyler Childers and FnB performances at Friday’s Halloween Hoedown.

Fudder’s former space in the basement will include songs that complement and go with the live bands on the bill.

“Usually just get a sense of what the band I’m playing with does, and I try to spin a set that will naturally flow into what they do,” Fuller said. “I’ve got my entire life listening and collecting music so I have a pretty big cache of songs to pull from. A lot of it has to do with just knowing the style of the band you’re playing with.”

Local band The Settlement will do some adapting of its own Saturday as it opens for Freektuars at the 10th annual Freektacular.

“We’re trying to gear our set around Freekbass,” guitarist Cotin Settle said. “As far as our original songs, we picked our funkier songs and we’re doing a couple of Halloween-themed songs. A lot of our music can get out, more jam and experimental, and that kind of thing, so we’re going to have that going on and keep the process moving, get the people ready for Freektuars.”

The Settlement has been recording at Groove U in Columbus, with plans to have an album released in January.

“Every year it gets bigger and bigger,” Freekbass said about the Freektacular. “We use to play the V-Club once or twice a year on whatever night and then the owner had the idea of a Halloween show. It ended up being a really cool night, so the next year it came and it became a little bit bigger. Every year it’s grown into this thing. The show gets better and the costumes get better. Some of the costumes are amazing. It’s a really special thing in Huntington, for sure.”

Freekbass and his band, The Bump Assembly, were recently signed to Rope-a-Dope Records, and have a new album titled “Cinder” coming out in early December.
