SGA STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT, VP CANDIDATES TO SQUARE OFF IN DEBATE

By JARED CASTO

Candidates for student body president and vice president will debate Tuesday at 9 p.m. in Smith Hall room 154.

Matt Jarvis, Nate Micklas and Leif Olson are vying for the student body president position, while Emily Kinner, Amos Parlock and Collin Stipetich are competing for their respective vice president.

The debate will be moderated by Student Government Association advisors Matthew James and Michelle Barbour. James said the debate will primarily be focused on the teams introducing themselves and their ideas to the student body.

"We’re going to try to focus this first debate on what these teams identify and maybe a few areas of improvement for student government," James said. "James said the pivotal changes in both the university administration and student government will yield essential questions for the candidates in this debate and the following debate next week.

"We want to kind of get past the general questions that we've talked about in the past," James said. "We want to get right down to business and talk about who really has the ideas that are going to work the best with our new administrators on behalf of the students." James said the rules of the debate are relatively standard. The candidates’ names will be drawn from a hat to decide who is asked the first question. From that point, candidates will have two minutes to respond to questions and one minute for rebuttal. The debate will conclude with a 10 minute student question and answer session.

In the past, three debates were held, one for student body president candidates, another for vice presidential candidates and a third joint debate. James said the intention of two joint debates this year is to emphasize the collaboration that must exist between student body president and vice president.

MAYOR NAMED TO NATIONAL OPIOID ABUSE TASK FORCE

By CLARA MAYNARD

Huntington Mayor Steve Williams was named to a joint task force created by the National League of Cities (NLC) and National Association of Counties (NACo) to address the nation’s heroin abuse epidemic.

According to a press release from the city, the City-County Task Force Addressing Heroin and Opioid Abuse aims to enhance awareness, facilitate peer exchange and identify sound policy and partnership solutions. The task force is comprised of city and county leaders from across the country.

"I’m pleased that the efforts of our community to collaboratively and aggressively address the problem of opiate addiction are being acknowledged nationally," Williams said in the release. "I am looking forward to sharing our story with other mayors and county leaders across the nation and learning from their experiences to bolster what we already have in place in Huntington.

The NLC and NACo elected leaders will explore practices for community prevention and overdose response, effective treatment options and public safety enforcement and supply reduction.

In 2015, there were 944 overdoses in Cabell County, 70 of which were fatal. Fifty-eight of those fatal overdoses occurred within Huntington city limits.

Williams focused on the opioid epidemic and efforts within the city to change the dialogue about addiction during the State of the City address Feb. 16.

"These efforts include a partnership with the Cabell-Huntington Health Department for West Virginia’s first syringe exchange program, which launched September 2015.

According to the release, the Mayor’s Office of Drug Control Policy was created November 2014 and has partnered with approximately 50 partner agencies to acquire and supply Naloxone, which is being supplied to family members of drug addicts, first responders and addicts, first responders and addicts.

President Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were named the winners of the 1985 Dance Marathon at Marshall University. The Marshall University Campus Activities Board is holding a fundraiser at Chipotle in Barboursville Wednesday night from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. to raise money for the Thunder Dance Fundraiser.

The boorish spectacle of the candidates and the political establishment has lasted for years. In recent days, the Republican presidential candidates have been increasingly focused on the party that supported the 2016 presidential primary for Donald Trump.

Nancy Reagan inspired "absurd third-grade theatrics." And Trump has "Phony Manafort" to outline proposals. It's hard for me to see how candidates come to be. It's a rule I followed ... and I hear the degrading dialogue," said the candidate.

In his autobiography, "An American Life," Reagan wrote of his campaign for governor: "It's a rule I followed ... and I have ever since." Reagan recognized that the Southern Baptist Convention should not be the driving force behind political campaigns. "It seems like a bad dream and I want to wake up," said one song continuously until the party is over.

"It benefits the kids and there's no better way to be able to go there and see the country at least four years. The United States is then the largest tax in Congress. A 1964 Franklin D. Roosevelt submitted a one-year amnesty program for people who entered the U.S. illegally and had been in the country at least four years.

In recent days, the Republican presidential candidates have been increasingly focused on the party that supported the 2016 presidential primary for Donald Trump.

Despite the pain their children have ever since." It was 'Call Me Maybe,'" Palmer said. "This is something new that has happened in this election," said member and former Republican National Committee chairman, Gaylord Nelson. "It seems like a bad dream and I want to wake up," said one.

Herd baseball completes weekend sweep

The Marshall University baseball team swept Wagner College over the weekend to improve its record to 4-5 for the season.

The second game of the three-game sweep gave Herd head coach Jeff Waggoner his 200th win with the program. The Herd won game one of the series Saturday when it 9-3, as the only other member of the team in the tournament.

Marshall University women’s basketball cleared out the regular season 7-6, 6-game winning streak to go with 21 points in a row in the third quarter thanks to its success from the 3-point arc, where it tied 108-106 with just a step back. Women’s basketball earns consecutive road wins, sixth seed in tournament

The Marshall University women’s basketball program has swept the entire Conference USA regular season with a 3-2 victory over the University of Southern Mississippi Saturday to complete Marshall’s seventh straight season of regular season play.

Marshall’s offense couldn’t keep pace with the Pirates as the first half of action at the 3-point scans were not falling. Marshall went just 1-7 from the floor in the first half, but just before the half the readied itself back up to 17 points.

Spring may be days away according to the calendar, but as far as the West Virginia Division of Forestry is concerned, spring has sprung — the spring forest fire season, anyway. Limits on outdoor burning are in effect, with burning limited to brush, leaves, lumber and other vegetative material between the hours of 5 p.m. and 7 a.m. And, there must be a safety strip or ring at least 10 feet wide to keep fires from spreading to nearby woods.

According to the U.S. Fire Administration, only 5.2 percent of outdoor fires are caused by nature — usually lightning strikes — that means the rest are caused by humans. Certainly there are some intentionally set fires, but often the cause is something as simple as an unattended campfire, careless burning of debris or even a carelessly discarded cigarette. Smoke Bear is not kidding when he says "Only you can prevent wildfires!"

Free college tuition would decrease the worth of a degree

In an interview with CNN Sunday, Bernie Sanders said, "This is not fantasy — this is reality" about his offer to make college tuition free. Some think free tuition would be the answer to every student's financial problems. The reality, however, is free tuition would only create more problems and would not help students work toward getting good grades or help them stay in school.

Sanders said it is unfair for students not to attend college because they cannot afford to pay for it. "Now is it starting at college that hundreds of thousands of bright young people are unable to go to college because they can't afford it?"

Students do not want to attend college because they cannot afford to pay for it. "Now is it starting at college that hundreds of thousands of bright young people are unable to go to college because they can't afford it?"

Having free college tuition would decrease the work hard work it takes to go to college. Students work for scholarships to pay for their post-secondary education. Some save from their part-time jobs in order to save for college. Without this hard work, going to college would not be an important part of a person's career path, but the work required to attend would be replaced by attending high school. Those who cannot afford college should have more access to a scholarship rather than a general college tuition.

Additionally, a college degree would be the equivalent to a high school degree — someone can receive an associate degree without studying in college. Is that a real job? Whether he be through studying to keep good grades for scholarships or through part-time jobs, people need to pay for college. Those are the experiences students don't always receive in high school.

According to a Charleston Gazette-Mail article, West Virginia has a 26 percent college completion rate for a four-year degree. West Virginia also ranked eighth lowest in college completion rates. If students did not have to pay for tuition, they would be more likely to stay in college. In high school, students are required to stay until they are 16 and then they may decide to leave if they cannot afford college. With free college tuition, students would have no incentive to commit to college because they cannot afford to pay for it. All a student would need were the required textbooks and housing. If they were not a consumer, a student would still have to pay for college, but it would not be as expensive. But the motivation to commit to college would decrease because there would be less money spent and less incentive to stop.

The recipient of the nation’s first uterus transplant said Monday that she signed up for the procedure because it would give her the freedom to have children without sacrificing her family’s privacy, as she was told she wouldn’t be able to have children because they were born with no uterus or lost it to disease.

Doctors at the Cleveland Clinic transplanted a healthy uterus from a deceased woman into Lindsey, a 34-year-old Utah woman who was told she could not have her own children. The recipient’s uterus will be removed after she has had one or two babies, but it might be used for future transplants.

The transplanted uterus will be removed after the woman has had one or two babies so that she won’t need those drugs for the rest of her life.

Polygamous towns discriminated against nonbelievers

The towns deny the allegations and say the government is persecuting town officials because it disapproves of their religious beliefs.

“Today’s verdict reaffirms that America guarantees all people equal protection and fair treatment, regardless of their religious beliefs,” said Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General Yami Ganta, head of the Justice Department’s Civil Rights Division.

“When communities deny their residents critical services simply because of their beliefs, the government should do everything in its power to stop them,” said Jared Casto, a former John Paul the Great Catholic University law student who represented Hildale and Colorado City.

“Today, we have the number one priority, which is doing the bidding of the church leaders about whom the government disapproves of,” Casto said.

The move comes amid a continuing national debate over protections for gay and transgender people. Last year, Houston voters defeated an ordinance in the fall that would have approved a law requiring transgender students to use bathrooms or restrooms consistent with their gender identity. A bill currently pending before the city council would require publicly available, single性别 identifying restrooms or rooms consistent with a person’s gender identity.
