Editor's Note: For the entire month of October, The Parthenon will change its masthead to incorporate pink and purple ribbons to raise awareness for those who have been affected by breast cancer and domestic violence.

T'Asia Rankin, Malak Khader, Caralee Casto and Suzann Al-Qawasmi showcase hijabs on the Memorial Student Center plaza during Behind the Veil, a cultural awareness event that took place on the Memorial Student Center plaza Monday.

The idea for the event came from T' Asia Rankin, senior athletic training major and the single member of Mu Sigma Upsilon Sorority, the only multicultural sorority on Marshall’s campus. “I think it’s important because people aren’t very educated about hijabs,” Rankin said. “They don’t understand the meaning behind them or why people choose to be modest. We try to bring multicultural awareness to campus.”

Malak Khader, vice president of the Muslim Student Association, said members of MLA have partnered with the Mu Sigma Upsilon Sorority for hijab events in the past. “Because they’re a multicultural sorority, they teach on different cultures and that’s when people see the good side of a Muslim woman,” Khader said. “A lot of people think it’s oppression, but it’s empowering to see it and having that decision is empowering.”

Scarves for the event were provided by members of MLA and allowed students to experience life from the point of view of a Muslim woman. “It challenges people to get to know you off of your intellectual personality instead of your appearance, even when you’re covered. I have my hair and my beauty that I reserve for only people I want to see it and knowing that decision is empowering,” Khader said.

“The idea was created as a way to focus on members of the Muslim community, Mu Sigma Upsilon Sorority has sponsored various events in the past, such as informational sessions about the sorority, a suicide prevention week with Sigma Tau Gamma, a back to school school, community service clean up with Alpha Phi Alpha, and participating in housing prevention week, in addition to suicide awareness events with “To Write Love on the Arms,” which Rankin said is an organization dedicated to mental illness and suicide prevention.

“I try to keep events to a minimum. I can do myself,” Rankin said. “It’s a lot of work trying to run an organization that usually has around 100 people by myself.”

While Rankin is currently the only member of her sorority, she said she still plans to have events. Future events include a bike ride, “a 36 pong” fundraiser to spread awareness for breast cancer in October, an open mic night and an oral evil drive for people to become bone marrow donors in November.

The next Mu Sigma Upsilon interest meeting will be Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center resource conference center. To Write Love on the Arms will be contacted at zarilla2@marshall.edu.

Behind the Veil: The Herd in hijabs

By OLIVIA ZARILLA

Marshall University students learned how to put on hijabs during Behind the Veil, a cultural awareness event that took place on the Memorial Student Center plaza Monday.

The idea for the event came from T’ Asia Rankin, senior athletic training major and the single member of Mu Sigma Upsilon Sorority, the only multicultural sorority on Marshall’s campus. “I think it’s important because people aren’t very educated about hijabs,” Rankin said. “They don’t understand the meaning behind them or why people choose to be modest. Leaders of the House Oversight Committee were very critical of the CEO of Mylan, the company that makes EpiPen, on Tuesday at a hearing. Mylan CEO Heather Bresch repeatedly told the panel last month that Mylan had made just $50 profit on every EpiPen it had sold, but the actual profit is actually $160 for a two-pack, factoring in the 37.5 percent U.S. tax rate on the $100 per pen profit, according to Elijah Cummings of Maryland, the panel’s senior Democrat.

"You know, your numbers don’t add up," Cummings told Bresch. "It’s extremely difficult for me to believe that you are making only $50 profit when you just increased the price by more than $100 per pack."

Defending the company’s business practices, Bresch said, "We have anticipated the magnitude and acceleration of the rising prices for some families."

In their letter, Cummings and Grassley asked Bresch to provide information and documents relating to Mylan’s taxes, including the actual rate paid to the IRS for the years 2015 through 2017, and a list of the company’s profits and losses for the years 2007 through 2016.

Mylan spokesperson Nick Diaz said Monday that company officials “remained committed to productive and continued cooperation with the committee, and we intend to respond to their requests for additional information. Mylan moved its corporate headquarters overseas to lower its tax burden but operates the business out of Greensburg, Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh.

Cooper said, “And then towards the end of the season we will open it up and publicize it.”

Upon entering the maze, a person gets a themed passport that has 10 questions on it and there are 14 decision points in the maze. Answering the questions correctly will take a person to the next decision point. If answered incorrectly, it will make a person go in circles and lead to dead ends. Different passport themes include: television, movies, music, or interactive one that involves playing games, the Bible, boy scouts, girl scouts, Halloween, sports, American history and 4-H.

The Field of Screams, or haunted maze, will be open Oct. 21, Oct. 22, Oct. 28 and Oct. 29. The haunted maze admission is $10 per person regardless of age and there are no reservations for the haunted maze.

Zip-lining is $20 for one ride and $35 for two. The course is made up of three towers and three zip runs with over 3,500 feet of flying. For a combo deal, it is $25 for a zip line ride and the maze and $35 for two rides on the zip line and the maze. There is not an age limit, however, the zip line’s weight limits are between 100 to 260 pounds. All riders must also fill out a waiver. Under the age of 18 must have a guardian signed waiver.

“We enjoy having groups or families or even individuals,” Cooper said. “We get people from Wheel- ing to Wytheville and from almost Columbus. We have a lot of couples that do it as a date night.”

Buying pumpkins and corn mazes with a few zip-its is also available. Tent rentals have a 2-hour limit and is $25. The pumpkin prices depend on the size of the pumpkins.

The Cooper Family Farm is located behind Milkman Pre- sident’s office, which is located at 1900 Route 60 Milton, West Vir- ginia. Parking is behind the school. From the parking lot, a tractor gives hayrides to the maze area.

Kristyn Holden can be contacted at holden16@marshall.edu.

The corn maze was carved out of different themed designs each year. This year’s feature is a dedication to the election in November.

Columns: Reasons voters need to watch the vice presidential debate

"After all, one of these guys will be our next vice president, which means that either of them could be in the Oval Office."

Column: xoxo, Michael Brown

The readers submitted some questions about life, love and everything in between. I answered them as honest as I knew possible. I can’t help but wish you were with me in the situation and to answer with no judgment because I don’t know you! I’m sometimes it’s just a lesson learned. Everyone makes mistakes, sometimes it’s just a lesson learned. Everyone makes mistakes.

What makes you think you should be answering questions and giving advice? I’m not claiming to be a qualified professional nor am I saying that you have to take my advice. I am simply giving my opinion, I am not your therapist. I am not a trained professional in this field. I have had the best advice, I am an abyss in the world of understanding... Why or why not? No, I would do anything the same in the life. I’m not saying I am perfect or that I’ve never done anything wrong. I just believe that if you have a better way of doing things I think you should do it. That’s why I wrote the way I wrote this column...

It was really the headline that did it, because I thought this could have happened to me. One of the main reasons I thought this could have happened to me is because I knew coach Pruett. He wanted to do something and asked me if I was 'that idiot that can run on this field, we can't do anything in front of this crowd'. He wanted to do something else, but he didn't let him past the gate. He just kept riding. He said, 'I know coach Pruett and I know the man behind the motorcycle. He's a great coach. He's a great guy.'
