GENERAL CHARLES E. "CHUCK" YEAGER

Brigadier General Charles E. (Chuck) Yeager is the Director of Aerospace Safety for the Air Force Inspection and Safety Center, a separate operating agency located at Norton Air Force Base, San Bernardino, California. The Center is a function of the Air Force Inspector General's office in the Pentagon.

General Yeager became the Director on June 1, 1973 after having reported to the Center on March 16, 1973 from Islamabad, Pakistan where he had been the United States Defense Representative to the Pakistani government.

The general has worldwide supervisory responsibility for the development and implementation of policies, standards, and procedures for Air Force flight, ground, missile, space, explosives, and system safety engineering programs.

His directorate's mission is to help conserve the nation's aerospace resources by preventing and reducing accidents through global programs of safety education, accident investigation and analysis, human factors research, and safety inspections.

He was born February 13, 1923 in Myra, W. Va., and is a graduate of Hamlin, W. Va., High School. He enlisted in the Army Air Corps in September 1941, was accepted for pilot training under the flying sergeant program in July 1942, and received his pilot wings and appointment as a flight officer in March 1943 at Luke Field, Ariz.

During World War II, General Yeager distinguished himself in aerial combat over France and Germany during the years 1943-1945 by shooting down 13 enemy aircraft, five on one mission, including one of Germany's first jet fighters. On March 5, 1944 he was shot down over German-occupied France but escaped capture when elements of the French Maquis helped him to reach the safety of the Spanish border.

He returned to the United States in February 1945 to attend the instructor pilot course after which he served as an instructor pilot. In July 1945 he went to Wright Field, Ohio where he received his first taste of experimental flight test work. His assignment there led to his selection as pilot of the nation's first research rocket aircraft, the Bell X-1 at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where he served from 1949 to General Yeager made world history on October 14, 1947, when he became the first man to fly faster than the speed of sound. During his nine-year assignment as the nation's leading test pilot, he also became the first man to fly more than twice the speed of sound, flying the Bell X-1A on December 12, 1953. During 1952 he attended the Air Command and Staff School.

He returned to Europe in October 1954 and became Commander of the 417th Fighter Squadron at Hahn Air Base, Germany in May 1955. He remained in that position when his squadron was reassigned to Toul-Rosieres Air Base, France in April 1956.

Upon his return to the United States in September 1957, he was assigned to the 413th Fighter Wing at George Air Force Base, Calif., and in April 1958 became Commander of the 1st Fighter Squadron. In April 1958 he went with the 1st Tactical Fighter Squadron to Moron Air Base, Spain, where he remained until November 1958. He returned to George Air Force Base with the same unit which was later redesignated the 306th Tactical Fighter Squadron.

General Yeager was graduated from the Air War College, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., in June 1961 and became Commandant of the Aerospace Research Pilot School, where all military astronauts are trained, in July 1962.

In July 1966 he assumed command of the 405th Fighter Wing at Clark Air Base Republic of the Philippines. While Commander of the 405th Fighter Wing he flew 127 missions in South Vietnam.

In 1971-73 he was posted as an advisor to the Pakistan Air Force at the behest of Ambassador Joe Farland.

In March of 1973 as USAF Director of Aerospace Safety at Norton AFB, CA.

On 25 February 1975, he returned to Edwards AFB for his last official active duty flight in an F-4C Phantom II. He retired 28 Feb 1975 as a Brigadier General.
