Biographical Sketch:

The Herald Dispatch was a non-daily newspaper for the city of Huntington, West Virginia starting in 1909 when two competing newspapers merged "The Herald" and "The Dispatch." During this early period, it was published as a weekly newspaper with editions coming out on the weekends. This remained after its purchase by Joseph Harvey Long of the Huntington Publishing Company in 1927. The Huntington Publishing Company had run its own daily newspaper in Huntington, the Huntington Advertiser since as early as the 1880s. The newspaper was dubbed, the Herald Advertiser, and became the weekend edition of the Advertiser after its purchase.

The Long family ran both newspapers until 1971 when it sold its ownership to the Honolulu Star Bulletin and then ten months later to the Gannett Company. By 1979, the Advertiser would cease publication and the rebranded Herald Dispatch would become the daily newspaper for the Huntington and Tri-State area of Kentucky / Ohio / West Virginia.

The newspaper would be sold to Gatehouse Media on May 8, 2007, and then to Champion Industries the following month on June 29th. From there the newspaper would be sold to the local politician, Douglas Reynolds in 2013. After this time, the parent company of the Herald Dispatch would be created, HD Media, and began purchasing several other newspapers in the local vicinity including the Wayne County News (in 2014), the Logan Banner, the Williamson Daily News, the Coal Valley News, and the Pineville Independent Herald (all in 2017 and from Civitas Media). In March of 2018, HD Media was the winning bid at auction for the bankrupt Charleston Gazette-Mail. As of its current status, the newspaper still publishes physical editions Tuesday-Saturday (with the Saturday edition being declared the "Weekend Edition"), and on Monday updates the online news stories with no physical print edition.

Scope and Content:

The collection consists of 4 “groupings” of materials that were donated by the Huntington Herald Dispatch when it moved from former offices in Huntington to its newer one in 2021. These groupings include the Herald Dispatch Subject Files, the Name Files, the Photograph Index Files, and the Office Materials (materials boxed up from individual offices in the Herald Dispatch). The first grouping of Subject Files came to the archive in 23 cabinets with 4 drawers each and contains approximately 16,000 folders of subject headings spanning the 1950s to the 2000s. The second grouping of Name Files is in 7 large horizontal filing cabinets with 3 drawers that contain approximately 8,700 files for individuals named in the Herald Dispatch from the same time range as the Subject Files. Both groupings have a folder level index provided below for ease of access.

The third grouping in this collection, the Photograph Index Files, contains over a dozen individual plastic boxes and several metal filing cabinets worth of photo negatives taken by Herald Dispatch staff. This part of the selection is not inventoried and is unfortunately not organized into any pattern for locating materials. As such, this portion of the collection is at present not open to the public, but materials can be viewed if advanced notice is given so that archival staff can locate the photographs.

The last section consists of all Office Materials found in the process of Special Collections staff gathering materials onsite after the initial collection pickup. These materials do not easily fit into the other classification sections, and are located separately from the rest of the materials. This section of materials includes a variety of sports memorabilia, photographs, sports programs, sports files, WV state documents, Cabell County Board of Education materials, materials relating to the University System of West Virginia, materials on Marshall University, Herald Dispatch administration files, loose articles and designs, VHSs, books, magazines, and other miscellaneous materials.

Processing Notes:

These items were gathered from the downtown Huntington location of the Herald-Dispatch offices. The items listed in the subjects and name files sections were taken out of file cabinets and placed into 277 boxes by the Special Collections team. Items were then rehoused into filing cabinets that were also part of HD’s office space. Other items were collected in a separate visit a week or so after initial collection pickup.
