CURRICULUM EXPERT VISITS CAMPUS
Dr. John W. Voigt interviewed by The Parthenon editor

Illinois dean on campus

Curriculum is viewed

By TOMMIE DENNY
Editor-in-chief

"The main concern of educators today ought to be to try to take the subject matter out into the world rather than bringing the world into the subject."

These are the words of Dr. John W. Voigt, dean of general studies at Southern Illinois University who is completing a two-day visit to Marshall today.

He has been meeting with the administration concerning a revision in the College of Arts and Sciences curriculum. Discussions are being conducted with the Ad Hoc Advisory Committee on Curricular Revision of the College of Arts and Sciences, according to Dr. N. Bayard Green, professor of zoology and chairman of the committee.

Dr. Voigt said that a school should "meet the needs of a particular area and its students." He viewed Marshall's basic requirements in the College of Arts and Sciences as being "somewhat rigid."

"After studying Marshall's catalog, I find that the courses required are too specified. There are not too many alternatives. Take for example literature courses. One is probably just as valuable as the other, so the students should have a choice of what they want to take.

"Education today needs more flexibility. We have not yet adequately taken into consideration such things as the student's background, ability or aspiration," he said.

Dr. Voigt also said that as a state university it is good to have the open-door policy where all may come and at least try. "But," he continued, "we fall short when we do not offer different courses to accommodate different students."

The flexibility Dr. Voigt calls for should be "stimulating - keeping the student from repeating what he already knows."

After working on the curriculum changes in various schools of higher education, he finds there are many ways general education may be improved. A lot depends on the skill and nature of the professor.

"A course cannot serve two masters, for one thing. A non-specialist in a certain field needs simply comprehension, not mastery. This is what I mean about bringing the world into the classroom. A skillful professor is needed. Educators need to equip students to live in the world that exists," said the curriculum consultant.

For this reason, Dr. Voigt feels that most courses should be problem-centered with issues facing today's world. He says too many classes are strictly factual mainly because exams are easily prepared.

Dr. Voigt, whose Wednesday schedule included meetings with President Roland H. Nelson Jr., Dr. Edward M. Collins Jr., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and Dr. Green, will be available today from 9 to 11:30 a.m. for conferences with faculty members and students interested in curricular studies. He also will meet with the Ad Hoc Advisory Committee 1:45 to 4 p.m. today.

Plans shelved for MU land

By JOE TAYLOR
Staff reporter

There were big hopes for the University Heights property when it was transferred to MU in 1961 by a legislative act, now there are no immediate plans for further development.

In an interview with Vice President of Business Joseph Soto, it was learned there are no definite plans now for development of the property. He stated that, "all plans now center around the main campus."

"When the property was first obtained by Marshall, we started renovating the two existing buildings for use as married students apartments," said Dr. Stewart H. Smith, former MU president.

The two major buildings on the property when it was acquired had previously housed the West Virginia Home for Aged and Infirm People. Before July, 6 1956, the same property was used for a West Virginia Childrens Home and the West Virginia Industrial Home for Girls. The property was farmed at the time to help offset food costs for the institutions.

It was by a legislative act in 1961 that the property was transferred to Marshall. The bill, introduced by Del. Ivor F. Boiarsky, D-Kanawha, transferred all of the real property to the West Virginia Board of Education for use by MU.

According to Dr. Smith, planning began then for the development of the property. The Athletic Department had plans for practice fields, the Department of Geology wanted a place for field trips and the Department of Biology wanted an arboretum.

The State Board of Education contracted the landscape architects Boggs & Rehm to develop a master land development plan for University Heights, the new name of the MU east campus.

The master plan called for development of student and faculty housing on a three-priority basis.

The first priority was to consist of 25 two-bedroom apartments and 10 three-bedroom apartments. The second priority was to have been 20 'motel-style' flats for unmarried faculty and graduate students. The third priority was planned as the first priority with the addition of one block of one bedroom apartments.

The plan called for a football stadium to be nestled in a large valley near the eastern property line, and a baseball field and stadium south of the existing brick building on Norway Avenue. Six tennis courts were proposed to be built adjacent to the baseball field.

Included in the plans was an arboretum in the valleys and on the hilltop immediately south of the interstate highway. The construction of a lake in the base of the valley south of the highway was also proposed.

Finally a picnic and play area was proposed on the ridges adjacent to the proposed housing.

This was how the plan stood in 1967 when Boggs & Rehm completed it.

Today Marshall has in use the two original buildings on the property and the new married students apartments which consist of 14 two-bedroom apartments and 28 one bedroom apartments.

Of the original 185 acres, the interstate highway split the property and took 15 acres. The state police received one and one-half acres to build a barracks. The Department of Mental Health also received an acre and a half. With the exception of the new housing and the renovation of the two original buildings, no other improvements have been made on the property to benefit MU since it was acquired.

New appeal considered by Johnson

Ellis, Johnson's attorney, Sam Smith, said he and the former Marshall basketball coach plan to meet and discuss possible further avenues of appeal since he and assistant football coach Pete Kondos' appeals were denied by the Board of Regents on Tuesday.

Smith said there are several possible appeals that could be made, including the State Supreme Court. Kondos has appealed his case to that court.

Kondos was dismissed from his coaching position and Johnson was relieved of his duties as head basketball coach and given a position as a full-time physical education instructor.

Following the alleged recruiting irregularities and the Mid-American Conference's charge of lack of adequate facilities, Marshall was suspended from the conference.

"I think the public and students should know about the screen put up by the Marshall administration when they said his (Johnson's) violations aided in the dismissal of Marshall from the conference. We don't understand it," Smith said.

Johnson wrote a letter in January to Arthur J. Bergstrom, secretary of the National Collegiate Athletic Association committee on infractions in Kansas City, Mo., according to Smith.

Executive Vice President, Dr. Donald Dedmon, said concerning the appeal being turned down, "His status here remains the same. He is still reassigned but may reapply for the coaching job along with anyone else."

Regents adopt resolution

Single fund is favored

The State Board of Regents Tuesday adopted a resolution favoring proposed legislation for creation of a single improvement fund for all state colleges and universities.

Tuition and registration fees would be deposited in the fund under control of the legislature and the regents.

Presently there are two funds-one for West Virginia University (West Virginia Special Capital Improvement Fund) and another for Marshall University and the remaining eight colleges (West Virginia Board of Regents Special Capital Improvement Fund).

Students pay $50 into the improvement fund which is used for building purposes on the respective campuses.

A bill to incorporate the funds has been introduced to the legislature.

If passed, student fees from all over the state would be combined, giving the Board of Regents more bonding power so more buildings could be constructed at state colleges and universities.

Speech 103 using closed circuit TV

Closed circuit television will be used four days a week for Speech 103 classes this semester, according to Dr. Stephen D. Buell, director of educational radio and television.

"We are scheduling about 12 sessions with Dr. C. A. Kellner, Dorothy Johnson and B. R. Smith, who will use television for beginning radio and television classes," Buell said.

Each Friday will be reserved for special productions and other classes wishing to record a session.

Closed circuit television will also be used by student teachers at Oley Junior High School from February 17 to March 6.

According to Dr. Buell, each student teacher may instruct five pupils while being recorded on television. After his teaching session, the student teacher will go into another room where he can view and evaluate himself with his professor.

Last semester the television was used by approximately 1,500 students in 40 sections of Speech 103. Thirty five students used it for student teaching at Oley Junior High.

Dr. Phillip Suiter also used the television to play tapes to student teachers in the music auditorium.

Dr. Buell said, "This is a special function to serve Marshall University, and its budget is separate from WMUL."

Winter Weekend festivities continue with concert today

ACE CHANGES MEETINGS

The Association for Childhood Education meetings for second semester have been changed from the first to the second Wednesday of every month.

Job interviews

Interested in a part-time job? Are you graduating in May and would like to talk to firms in your field? Reginald Spencer, director, Office of Career Planning and Placement, reminds students to register with the office as soon as possible.

According to Spencer, many firms in the business field and teaching areas will be visiting the Marshall campus in February. Many of these interviews are already filled, so it is urgent that students act at once.

Hoof Beats

By TIM BUCEY
Sports Editor

Barry Driscoll, a 6-7, 220-pound center from Turtle Creek, Pa., has transferred to Marshall from the University of Detroit and could give the Herd some help at a center or forward position when he becomes eligible.

Driscoll was one of eight scholarship players at Detroit who quit the team because of differences with the head coach.

He spent only one semester at Detroit having attended McCook Junior College previously where he averaged 18.1 points per game for the McCook team which won the Nebraska Conference Championship.

Driscoll, who won't be eligible until second semester of next year, was persuaded to come to Marshall by football player Tim Bentley, who along with running back Kevin Gilmore, all attended McCook Junior College together.

Assistant football coach "Red" Dawson recently underwent surgery necessitated by injuries sustained as a player. Dawson is up and around now and back on the job aided by a cast and a cane.

Mike D'Antoni is not only outstanding on the basketball court but also in the classroom. The pre-med major came out with a 3.5 academic average in his first semester.

Bob DePathy's shooting ability has gone relatively unnoticed this year but the Hollywood, Fla., native has one of the best field goal percentage any Herd player has had in recent years.

DePathy hit a remarkable 11 for 14 from the field against Toledo last Saturday and scored 24 points, his high in a Marshall uniform, before being relieved in the final two minutes.

He also hit 24 of his last 26 free throws.

The Herd's field goal percentage record may never be broken though. A man named Hal Greer made 60 per cent of his shots from the field in the '55-56 season. Depathy has a 49.6 mark going into last night's game with Miami.

Marshall will be seeking readmission to the Mid-American Conference next weekend when the Mid-American Conference Council of Presidents meets.

The MAC has announced that one topic which will be discussed at this meeting is expansion, preferably by adding two teams. The six member MAC is the smallest major conference in the nation, along with the Pacific Eight, each of which have only six members.

The conference has said they may add two teams neither of which can be from the state of Ohio. They will be looking, if this expansion is approved by the Council of Presidents, to add a team located in a state west of Ohio and one east of Ohio. The MAC definitely needs some 'foreign' schools since only one is from outside the state of Ohio.

New assistant cage coach appointed at Logan Branch

Danny George, a Holden senior, has been appointed assistant basketball coach at the University's Logan Branch.

Head Coach John Goff, in announcing the appointment said, "I am pleased to have Danny as my assistant. He is the type of man who will make a good coach. He stays cool during a game and this is a necessity for a coach."

George played two years of basketball at the Logan Branch before transferring to main campus where he plays intramural ball. He was one of the leading scorers and rebounders at Logan and his intramural team, the Ozarks, is currently 3-0.

George, a 21 year old social studies major, will do his student teaching this semester at Chapmansville High School in addition to coaching.

Hughes transfers to W. Va. State

Albert Hughes, MU baseball prospect, has transferred to West Virginia State College, according to Jack Cook, head baseball coach.

Hughes, who had just completed his third semester at Marshall, attended Woodrow Wilson High School in Beckley where he established himself as a promising pitcher.

Hughes has been attending Marshall on a partial scholarship, but did not participate in baseball at MU last year.

Eight games played in intramural action

Eight games were played in intramural basketball action Tuesday night in Gullickson Hall.

Action in the National League western division saw the Sigma Phi Epsilon two team defeat the "Team" 46-32, the Sigma Phi Epsilon ones win by forfeit over the Krip Kicker Five, and the Dirty Dozen stomp the SAE threes 59-26. In eastern division action the Trojans ran roughshod over the Alpha

Second 'Infinity' to appear soon

The second issue of "Infinity", a literary magazine will be published the last of February or the first of March, according to Editor James Pack, South Point, Ohio, senior.

The issue will contain essays; poems by Jesse Stuart; the first installment of a novel by Scott Nunley, instructor of English; a column -- the first in a series by Duncan Williams, professor of English; and another column -- the second in a series by John Teel, professor of English.

"The next issue of 'Infinity' will be sent to the American Literary Anthropology in New York.

Sigma Phi threes 66-37.

In the American League, one game was played in the central division and three in the western division. Western division action included the South Hall two's winning by forfeit over Flour Power.

TKE three's defeated the Lambda Chi Alpha four's 31-23, and the Alpha Sigma Phi two's beat Iota Chi Theta Upsilon Sigma by a 37-27 score.

The lone game in the central division saw the Lambda Chi Alpha one's win over the TKE one's by a narrow 47-44 margin.

No games were played Wednesday night due to the Marshall-Miami game, but will resume again Thursday night.

Grappler optimistic

JEFFREY NATHAN
Sports Writer

If all the wrestlers on Marshall's team are as optimistic and enthusiastic as Greg Archer, it looks like the Herd grapplers can count on some excellent teams in the future.

Archer, Toledo, Ohio, freshman, feels that, "We're going to have a pretty good team this year. We'll win our share of matches," he says, "and I'm looking forward to some great teams in years to come. Coach Cyrus has a great coaching and recruiting program. We have a lot of freshmen this year and they will all get better with the needed experience."

"We play a tough schedule," he continued. "Quite often the smaller school is better than the bigger school, because they can afford to concentrate a lot of funds on their wrestling program that they couldn't afford in sports such as football and basketball."

MU's 150 - pound wrestler posted an impressive record of 27-5 in high school. A graduate of Roy C. Start High School, he won in his class in the Start Invitational, the Bowling Green Invitational, was second in the district and sectional tournaments, and third in the Ohio State Championships.

He also competed in the freestyle Junior Olympics, was a member of the Ohio West All-Star Team, and attended the final U.S. Olympic training camp where he was forced to quit because of a dislocated finger.

Coach Bill Cyrus calls him, "very dedicated and a real hard worker. He has a promising future in college wrestling if he matures as he should," he says. "He's wrestled some pretty tough matches. He lost by only one point to a boy who was second in the conference last year, but he had a bad match against Bowling Green and lost worse. If he keeps working the way he has he'll be alright."

Archer received 15 scholarship offers when he graduated, and says he chose Marshall because, "I like the friendliness of the people."

JUDY SMITH, St. Albans senior, at loom learning the "ins and outs" of weaving

Weaving class added

Students learn ancient craft in Art Department

By MARILYN MAUCK
Something new is being done in the Department of Art. Weaving is not a new thing but the weavings coming off the looms now are.

There is a special excitement when students take their new weavings off the looms. You only have to be there to see the sparkle in the eyes and the nervous shake of the hands as the special unwinding process takes place.

Weaving, unlike some pieces of art, is done a little at a time and slowly wrapped around the long rollers of the loom. Students can not see exactly how their work will look until the whole piece is done.

The process of weaving is one of the oldest crafts in existence. Realizing the opportunity to learn, the art students are taking advantage of learning to weave.

There is no class offered in this art in the catalogue but last year as a special treat to Kappa Pi Art Honorary, Michael Cornfeld, instructor of art, at the request of the art honorary, began to teach some of the members the art of weaving.

Cornfeld's wife, Melissa, is well known for her wall hangings and the work she does. She too has helped the students with their weavings. Even though she is expecting their first child soon, she has taken the time to invite students to their home and show them her work and explain patterns and designs.

Although only one student is receiving credit for learning to weave, there are six students going through this slow process of moving threads back and forth across the fine material.

All students have completed one piece of work and are now finishing their second. "This may not sound like much, said Darlene Adkins", Huntington freshman, but it really is something to be proud of."

They have worked many hours with the yarns of red, orange, blue, brown and various other colors. One weaving by Judy Smith, St. Albans senior, is done in blues, yellows and greens. Her wall hanging is being done in three sections, so that when it is finished it will

WVU paper proposal hit

West Virginia University's student newspaper's editorial staff has editorialized against a proposal by the university's school of journalism faculty that the newspaper be run as an independent corporation separate from the School of Journalism

The editorial staff of The Daily Athenaeum blasted the recommendation in a front page editorial, calling the change "a threat to the voice of a free student press."

The journalism faculty made a recommendation to James G. Harlow, WVU president, that the newspaper be set up as an independent corporation.

Harlow's office was not expected to comment on the recommendation for several weeks. Such a change would require major budgetary alterations since funds would be needed to provide a laboratory-type newspaper operation to replace The Athenaeum, now under the aegis of the School of Journalism.

hang loose and separate.

Miss Smith is working on the largest loom and her wall hanging is over a yard wide. The width of the other pieces vary according to the size of the looms. Some of the girls built their own hand looms. Hand looms are easy to make, said one of the coeds, but it takes longer to complete a piece on them.

Along with Miss Adkins, Charlotte Byrd, Huntington freshman, and Alice Bowen, Huntington freshman are now working on a type of weaving called "macrame." This is done by knotting and looping rope or heavy twine. The complicated design is worked by the women themselves which gives each piece its own personality. The threads are rough and hard to handle. Miss Byrd wears gloves as she moves the twine about.

An unusual smell stings your nose when the women are working with one-type of rope.

A large ball of bailing twine was brought in by one student; it is used on the farm for tying hay. The twine is treated with chemical to prevent rotting. This gives a mystical quality to the hangings, said one student.

According to Miss Adkins, people do not realize the work put into weaving. She said she rushes home each day to tell her parents how well she is doing on her weaving but her father says, "that's fine did you show it to your math teacher?" She says her father wishes she would spend more time studying her math.

According to Cornfeld a lot of interest has been created by his weaving students.

To be creative is not new for the art students, but the weavings they unroll from the looms are. It is their new thing.

Recital to be French songs

Dr. Jane Schleicher, soprano and associate professor of music, will present a program of French songs at her first faculty recital at 8:15 p.m. today in Smith Music Hall.

The program includes: "A Chloris," "Quand je fus au Pavillon," "Infidelite," "Les Cygnes," "Printemps" by Hahn; "Serenade," "Les Papillons," "Le Temps des Lilas" by Chausson; "Soupir," "Elegie" by Duparc; five Greek songs by Ravel; "Fleur des Bles," "Dans le Jardin," "L'Ombre des Arbres," "Colloque Sentimental," Lia's recitative and aria from "L'Enfant Prodigue" by Debussy.

Mary Shep Mann will accompany Professor Schleicher at the piano.

Dr. Schleicher joined the faculty in September.

Receiving her bachelors and masters degree in music at the New England Conservatory, Professor Schleicher was awarded her doctorate of musical arts from the University of Illinois.

Constitution is introduced. This controversial issue has been of concern to Senate since Student Court abolished the present constituencies in December.

Miss Slaughter said a new Constitution may possibly be introduced next week and election details will be discussed then.

President Slaughter also announced the resignations of Julia Worrell, Panhellenic representative; Kathy Keller, sophomore class president; and Tom Hensley, a loyal opposition senator. Miss Worrell is leaving to do her student teaching.

Miss Slaughter also announced that Danie J. Stewart, graduate president, and William Shoub, transient senator, have been dropped from Senate due to excessive absences.

Macel Wheeler, Ravenswood sophomore, and Tom Zerbe, Akron, Ohio, graduate student, are now presidents of their respective classes and will announce their vice presidents. New senators for the other vacancies are expected to be announced soon.
