Business, Industry Survey On Homecoming

Will Marshall have floats at Homecoming next year?

So many complaints have been aired by the fraternities and the Interfraternity Council (see Wednesday's Parthenon) that it is questionable. The most common problems seem to be money, materials and a place to build.

In a recent survey taken by students in feature writing (Journalism 308) many area businesses and organizations were asked if they would help in any material way.

John Hearne, president of the Central Ohio Valley Industrial Council, said that his organization would not enter into the problem. "Ours is just not that type of organization," he explained.

Mr. Hearne also added that although the Council as a whole could not help, that the industries in this area which are in the council may contribute.

When asked for his comments about whether United Fuel Gas Co. would be interested in contributing in some way to help with the construction of Homecoming floats, District Manager John E. Thorn replied that he did not wish to be quoted on the subject.

"We will do everything we did this year to support Homecoming in the future," said Larry Glick, president of the Downtown Improvement Group.

He said that this year's program of support included a float in the Homecoming parade, a window display contest, letters inviting alumni to come back and support Homecoming, and an alumni breakfast.

Concerning the alumni breakfast, Mr. Glick said that arrangements were made for 60 alumni to attend the breakfast, but only nine persons actually attended. He said that more support will be needed next year if the breakfast is to be sponsored again by DIG.

"If the University has suggestions for additional support by DIG, we will be happy to discuss the problem," said Mr. Glick. "But we cannot contribute to a float fund because the downtown merchants already contribute to the building of the Downtown Improvement Group float."

Mr. Glick said that the downtown merchants have been supporting Homecoming by participating in the projects initiated by DIG. In his opinion, additional support should be given by the industries which have not contributed to Homecoming in the past, along with the continued support of DIG and other groups which have helped before.

The Huntington Chamber of Commerce is definitely willing to help with Marshall's homecoming.

"The Greater Huntington area Chamber of Commerce can think of no one day's event which does more good for the city than Marshall University's Homecoming Day," said Charles R. Neighborgall Jr., President of the Huntington Chamber of Commerce.

Neighborgall added that the Chamber of Commerce is willing to do all it can to help with Homecoming. "While we can initiate no action on our own, we will seriously consider any suggestions advanced by the University," he said.

Swingle Singers To Perform

THE SWINGLE SINGERS will appear on the Student Artist Series Nov. 28. Their specialty is the music of Bach. They recorded their first album in 1963 and were invited to perform at the White House by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964. Tickets will be available Monday and Tuesday.

Swingle Singers On Artist Series; Tickets Available Monday, Tuesday

By SHERRY ALLEN
Staff Reporter

Tickets will be available Monday and Tuesday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Old Main Auditorium for the Student Artists Series Nov. 28 which will feature the world-famous Swingle Singers.

The Swingle Singers are known mostly for their transposing instrumental music to vocal music, and their specialty is the music of Bach. Their music always remains true to the original score, and it was comparatively recently that the group added bass and percussion instruments to their music.

Although the "Swingle Singers" sounds very English, all members of the group are French citizens, with the exception of Ward Swingle after whom the group was named.

The singers decided to record their first album in 1963. This album practically made them famous overnight.

They were invited to perform at the White House by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964, and afterwards the President wrote them the following note: "I am deeply grateful for the time and talent you gave toward making the Gala a success. Mrs. Johnson and I thoroughly enjoyed your performance, and we just wanted you to know how appreciative we are."

Since performing at the White House, they have presented concerts in New York's Carnegie Hall, Chicago, Hollywood, Berlin, Amsterdam and Paris. The group, which is directed by Ward Swingle, consists of four women—two sopranos and two altos—and four men—two tenors and two bass-baritones.

All full-time students are eligible to attend the show.

Committee Set Up On Food Service

Members To Meet With Director Of Cafeteria To Air Complaints

By SHERRY ALLEN
Staff Reporter

A committee has been established by President Stewart H. Smith to meet with Frank S. Willis, director of the food service, at regular intervals to discuss students' comments and complaints about the University food service.

Jane Sterne, Pt. Pleasant senior and president of Laidley Hall, was selected to appoint the committee at the third of a series of meetings President Smith is holding with various groups on campus. Tuesday's group was composed of the presidents of the dormitories and residence halls.

The appointment of the committee was spurred by a letter recently appearing in The Parthenon that criticized the service of the University Dining Hall.

Commenting on the letter, President Smith said that he felt that it was unfair of the girls to write it before calling the problem to the attention of one of the University's officials.

He said that although the complaints may be legitimate, they should have been brought to the attention of either himself or John E. Snay, dean of student affairs, before being aired to the readers of the newspaper.

Willis also attended the meeting and commented, "The students' interest is Marshall, and so is mine."

He agreed with President Smith on the fact that they want to correct the things that are not right. He added, though, that he likes to correct his own mistakes. Speaking of the letter, he said it is "unfortunate that it was done the way it was done."

President Smith hopes that the new committee will provide a student-administration communication that does not currently exist.

During the remainder of the session, the students directed questions to Dr. Smith that they felt should be discussed.

One of the things discussed was the possibility of a longer spring vacation. President Smith explained that in order to have a week

ACADEMIC CENTER

The new classroom and office building may be correctly referred to as the Academic Center until the building is officially named, according to Joseph S. Soto, vice president of business and finance. It will eventually be named after a professor, administrator or other Marshall leader who is considered worthy of the honor, he said.

during the Easter break, it would be necessary to do one of four things: (1) start earlier in September; (2) have a shorter Christmas or Thanksgiving break; (3) reduce the semester break by a few days, or (4) dismiss later in May or early June.

Dr. Smith advised Larry Bruce, Huntington senior and president of the Student Government, to explore the situation and commented that he would also take a look into the matter.

Qualifying Exam Slated Tomorrow

The English Qualifying Examination will be given at 9 a.m. tomorrow in Science Hall Auditorium, according to Dr. Mervin A. Tyson, professor of English and department chairman.

Students whose last names start with M-Z are requested to take the exam on this date. Any other students who need to take the exam at this time may do so.

Those eligible to take the examination are engineering majors who have completed 68 hours, students in other four-year programs with 58 hours and students in two-year programs who have completed 45 hours.

Dictionaries and line guides may be used. No other paper or books are necessary. Students must present their identification cards to be admitted. The examination must be written in ink.

INTRAMURAL CHAMPS

Capturing the 1966 intramural football championship Wednesday was the Sigma Phi Epsilon No. 1 team with a 1-0 victory over Kappa Alpha No. 1. Sigma Phi Epsilon No. 3 defeated Teke No. 1, 12-8, in the battle for third place.

Those On Probation Get Break

There has been a change in University policy towards probationary students, announced Dr. J. Stewart Allen, vice president of academic affairs.

In the past, students on probation could not register during advance registration and they were limited to a 12-hour load.

Probationary students now may register during advance registration with no limitations to the amount of hours they wish to carry so long as they have the consent of their advisers.

This is done in order to give students an equal chance in section selection.

3 Students, Grocers Duped By Con Artist

By JIM JOHNSON
Staff Reporter

The "Great Society" no longer holds an appeal for three Marshall University students.

The students were hired by a man identifying himself as Alfred M. DeBakey of National Press Inc. Their job was to take a survey of the Great Society's Grocery Prices. This consisted of listing all retail grocery stores in Huntington and placing each one into an eastern or western district.

After the first night's work, the boss decided to look for a bank with night hours in order to cash a check. Upon finding the banks closed, the students suggested that the man go to one of the larger grocery stores to cash his check. The man explained that he would have a hard time cashing a check, since he had an out-of-town address. The students volunteered their help and cashed two checks made out to them.

The next day, the man came up with a "money-saving device." Instead of going to each of the 134 grocery stores in Huntington, he decided that they would go to only 35 of the stores. This, he explained, would be a good cross section of stores and represent a larger variety of prices.

The plan called for the students to go to each of the 35 stores and purchase a list of items to determine the rising cost of food. The items would be purchased with checks made out by him. The students would return the difference between the purchase price of the groceries and the amount of the check to him personally. He said, however, that the students could sell the groceries and keep that money. He explained that he would only need the cancelled checks to furnish his company with proof of the purchase.

He said the plan would net each student $360 and cut their work in half.

With this incentive, the students started the survey and canvassed local grocery stores until 9 p.m. Each time the students bought the groceries, they gave the money left over from the checks to the man. The students then were told to report to work at 11 a.m. the next day.

The students reported promptly at 11 a.m., but the man was gone and it seems he took the Great Society's funds with him.

The three students said they plan some kind of fund-raising effort to repay grocery store owners who cashed the bad checks.

DANCE SATURDAY

King Charlie is coming. A dance will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Student Union.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

Have you ever wondered why visitors to Marshall University ask the silliest questions?

We take for granted that everyone knows Marshall has been granted university status, but by the publicity and the signs plastered all around the campus, branding us Marshall College, you would think that we are ashamed of being one-half of all the universities in West Virginia.

Last Sunday as I was walking across campus, believe it or not, I was asked by a visitor if Marshall College and Marshall University were one in the same. He had evidently observed the numerous Marshall College signs that are intermingled with the Marshall University ones and was thoroughly convinced that John Marshall must have had a split personality.

HARRY BRUNER,
Charleston Freshman

To the Marshall Students:

In behalf of the ushers, staff and others connected with the Marshall Artists Series, I wish to commend those of you who attended the Johnny Mathis production on your exemplary conduct. We were all highly pleased with the patience you showed when the first performance was delayed, with the warmth you gave the performers who were working under somewhat difficult circumstances, with the way you waited patiently and quietly for the second performance to start, and with the quiet efficiency with which you cleared the theater after the first performance.

You set a fine example and we are all very proud of you.

Foundation Given $350

The Marshall Foundation Inc. has received a $350 contribution from George M. Mendenhall, Engineering Instructor and director of the Computer Center. It will be used for three scholarships to be given in Engineering and Chemistry.

Harry M. Sands, director of development and alumni affairs and executive secretary of the Marshall Foundation, said Mr. Mendenhall taught a course this year in report writing at the Union Carbide Technical Center at South Charleston.

Upon completion of the course, Mr. Mendenhall contributed the entire amount of his stipend to the Marshall Foundation and the Alumni Association.

Mendenhall felt since the money was earned from the technical center, it could best be used to educate a future chemist or engineer.

The funds will be used for one D-Rho-D-Theta scholarship of $115, two engineering scholarships of $115 each and the balance will be credited as an unrestricted contribution to the Alumni Association.

The engineering faculty will award one scholarship to a current member of D-Rho-D-Theta for second semester. An engineering scholarship will be given for the present semester and one for the second semester.

Other contributions for the month of November to the Marshall Foundation include $45 in memorial gifts, $100 from the Dingess-Run Coal Company, $1,000 from Houdaille, Inc., $1,000 from the annual Caldwell-McFadden Scholarship fund and $350 from the Persinger Supply Co.

Clinic Is Now In 40th Year

Among the many counseling services on campus, the Psychology Clinic is the oldest. It was established more than 40 years ago.

Dr. Elizabeth Wolfe, professor of psychology and director of the clinic, said that approximately 10 per cent of the students come to the clinic for counseling.

Common topics discussed are dating, marriage, relations with fellow classmates and how to get along with them, vocational problems, parents and grades.

According to Dr. Wolfe, the purpose of the clinic is service to the students and being available when needed.

Many of the problems are determined by tests. A test is given and an analysis is made.

The clinic is open to both faculty and students by appointment.

Businesses Express Support, Indifference

Two of Huntington's three taxi cab companies apparently are willing to help Homecoming at Marshall.

Harold Johnson, manager of Black and White Cabs, was somewhat hesitant when asked if he would be willing to entertain an official committee from Marshall to discuss Homecoming problems. But he said his hesitancy was caused by Marshall fraternity men who had "overstepped" the boundary of courtesy and consideration in the past when one of his company's barns had been used for the building of floats.

"You see, we used to let these fellows build floats here," Mr. Johnson said, "but the last few times the place was left in such a mess that we decided to cut it out entirely."

Mr. Johnson felt his company would be willing to help in any way it could. "Yes, we would be interested in discussing this matter with someone from the University," he said, "if they can give us some assurance that our property will not be mistreated."

Mr. Johnson said that he could see no reason why the barn-loaning could not be reinstated, but before such an agreement could be made it would be imperative to discuss it with a University official.

Mr. Horace Riggs, manager of Yellow Cabs, said he "could not commit the company financially to any such cause." But he did feel that the company would at least be interested in discussing the matter with a delegation from Marshall.

Robert King, administrative assistant at Appalachian Power Co. said that the company has already made a substantial donation to President Stewart H. Smith's fund with no strings attached. The money can be used for Homecoming or anything that President Smith thinks is worthwhile.

Mr. King said that the only support his company could give Marshall for Homecoming would be financial.

Leonard Samworth, president and owner of Ohio Valley Bus Co., said his company would want to and would cooperate in some way for next year's Homecoming.

In past years fraternities were allowed to build floats in warehouses owned by the bus company.

Mr. Samworth said the warehouses were left in a mess. "The fraternities have mistreated the generosity of their donors," he said.

The company had no facilities for float-building this year so it had to refuse the space to fraternities. A space became available at the last minute so Mr. Samworth assumed that all fraternities had a place to build and offered the space to Larry Glick of the Downtown Improvement Group (DIG) for an alumni float.

Mr. Samworth suggested the formation of a Homecoming committee consisting of representatives from fraternities, independents, the student government, and several townspeople from the service clubs. The service club representatives could study the problems and present them to their clubs to get the support of their members.

He also suggested that the fraternities themselves could obtain money through fund-raising drives and assessments.

Mr. Samworth said, "I am proud of my connection with Marshall and proud that Marshall is in Huntington. I will help in any way possible."

Mr. Samworth is a former president of the Alumni Association. The Chesapeake and Potomac

Telephone Co. will be happy to meet with University officials to discuss next year's Homecoming, according to Assistant Manager L. N. Davis.

Davis said, "It's possible we could contribute in float construction, although we do not contribute now." Davis said he would have to be "noncommittal" at this time, or until he checked with a higher official.

According to Davis, the telephone company will be happy to cooperate with Marshall in relieving some of the pressure put upon organizations that build floats.

The Chesapeake and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio Railroads do not feel that they have the same responsibility toward Marshall as do the downtown merchants, according to Willis W. Cook, regional public relations manager for C&O and B&O.

"Railroads just don't get involved with civic affairs," said Mr. Cook, "simply because of their geographical situation. C&O/B&O serves hundreds of cities and towns, many of which are college towns. We have no central location as a downtown merchant would have, and therefore, we have no outstanding loyalty."

Mr. Cook emphasized that a different situation would exist where some civic project would be undertaken by a group of people who are mostly employed by the railroad. In this case, the undertaking might be eligible for support.

Mr. Cook admitted that "railroads probably do not participate in, or have the interest for Homecoming that they should have." He said that interest that comes from the railroad most generally has to be generated from each employee acting as an individual.

"Homecoming, like all other athletics, deserves more support than it is getting from business and the community. Existence of athletic contests depends on enthusiasm, and they just won't endure without a little backing."

He stressed that railroads are not helped by Homecoming as are the downtown businesses. A lot of alumni come back and patronize the stores, but none of them come by train. Passenger volume records show no increase over past Homecoming weekends, and therefore "C&O/B&O is not helped as are the stores."

William Cobb, business manager of the Huntington Water Corp. said, "We don't have the money to give."

He said that such donations are not included in the budget, but noted that his office does and will contribute in some way to help Marshall.

During the football and basketball seasons, the water office runs advertisements in the programs. He added that the water office will gladly cooperate with Marshall if they are able.

The Retail Credit Office does not have funds or space to contribute to Homecoming, said J. W. Jarboe, manager.

He explained that the only space he could offer would be office space which would probably be occupied.

He was certain that money could not be donated because such donations are restricted. He said that the main office, which is located in Atlanta, Ga., contributes to the

MU Will Be 'Hungry For Bobcat Stew'

'Sharp-Shooting' Varsity Cagers To Open Season Play In 2 Weeks

By TIM BUCEY
Staff Reporter

With the Marshall University Thundering Herd's first basketball game only two weeks away, Coach Ellis Johnson is looking forward to the new season with optimism.

This year's team has only one senior in Keith Blankenship, but Coach Johnson said it is a well experienced squad.

Bob Redd, George Stone, Bob Allen, and Orville Stepp, who are all juniors, saw plenty of action last year in their first varsity season, and they were all members of Marshall's first undefeated freshman team in 1964.

Two other members of that team, Joe Dawson and Jim Jordan, both juniors, will also begin their second year of varsity competition. A new face on the team is Parkie Beam, a junior transfer student from Ashland Junior College in Georgia.

Dan D'Antoni was last year's leading scorer on the freshman team with a 22.7 average, and Dallas Blankenship was runner-up with a 21.1 average. The other two members, John Mallet and Mike Watson, were the top rebounders on the freshman squad. The other sophomore, Jim Davidson, is a transfer student from Concord College.

The three members missing from last year's team, which compiled a record of 12-12, are Captain Tom Langfitt, Center George Hicks and Bill Whetsell. Langfitt, who scored 300 or more points for three consecutive years, averaged 12.7 points last season and is among the top 10 on Marshall's all-time scoring list.

Coach Johnson said his cagers should be a good-shooting team. His statement drew emphasis when the varsity poured in 131 points against the freshmen in an exhibition game last week.

The coach also said, "One of the team's strong points will be depth at the guard positions, but one of the weak points will be a lack of depth at center and forward. Overall, though, the team looks stronger this year and has a good attitude."

Stone, Redd and Stepp—all from Kentucky—were the leading scorers last year, while Stone and Redd also were the leading rebounders along with Allen.

Coach Johnson said that last season was the first time he can recall three sophomores ever scoring over 400 points each in one season.

Stone accounted for 447 points last year for an 18.6 average and pulled down 277 rebounds for an 11.5 average to finish the season as team leader in both departments. Redd was second to Stone with 432 points and an 18.0 average and 272 rebounds for an 11.3 average. Stepp was the third leading scorer with a game average of 16.9.

In the 24-game schedule last year, Stone was the leading scorer nine times, while Stepp and Redd each took game honors six times.

This year Marshall will be seeking revenge from Bowling Green, Miami and Toledo, the three teams that twice defeated the Herd last year.

When asked who he thought would provide the toughest competition in the conference this year, Johnson rattled off the names of Bowling Green, Kent State, Ohio University, Miami, Western Michigan and Toledo.

The varsity opens competition against Morris Harvey Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. in the Field House.

MATMEN CALLED

Wrestling Coach Ed Prelaz has called a meeting for 3:30 p.m. Monday in room three, Gullickson Hall, for prospective wrestlers. No previous experience is necessary to join the squad. The Herd's first match will be at Ohio State University in the Ohio Quadrangular Tourney, Dec. 3. A new 191-pound class has been added this year.

"They will come here hungry for Bobcat stew," predicted Ohio University Line Coach Cliff Heffelfinger. (It tasted pretty good in '64 and '65.) Heffelfinger made his prediction after watching the Thundering Herd stun the Kent State Flashes last Saturday, 16-7. Kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at Peden Stadium in Athens.

"Marshall is a young and aggressive football team that right now is probably the most improved team in the MAC," the line coach added. "For us to win, it will take an all-out effort, because this game to Marshall is what Miami and Bowling Green are to us — their big one."

The Bobcats will be especially leary of senior fullback Andy Socha who said earlier this week, "We'll beat OU, there's no doubt in my mind." Socha made MU "back of the week" for his performance against the Flashes. A repetition of other surprising individual performances during the Kent game would mean a fast TKO on the Bobcats.

Sophomore tackle Harold Bennett was named "lineman of the week" by Coach Charlie Snyder. Junior end Tom McLaughlin and sophomore cornerbacks Bruce Wallace and George Hummel simply refused to allow Kent runners to come around their end last week. Kicker Tom Harris also surprised the fans.

Senior defensive end Vic Ferrari distinguished himself in an additional category this week. He was named to the 1966 MAC All-Academic Football team for his fine grades. Ferrari majors in education.

Ohio U Coach Bill Hess plans two or three lineup changes for the Herd encounter. His sophomore linebacker Mike Christian broke his right hand in last Saturday's game against Bowling Green. Sophomore John Resch finished the game for OU and will start tomorrow. Ron DeLuca will start for the Bobcats and halfback Jay Maupin will probably lead the rushing attack.

Coach Hess told The Parthenon Wednesday that he and his staff had considerable respect for everything about the Herd team.

"They've played outstanding football and tough defense, and I feel their passing is a threat also. We're expecting a strong attack from Jackson and Socha."

ANDY SOCHA

THUNDERING HERD Co-Capt. Andy Socha (top) and Dennis Miller wind up their college football careers tomorrow with the Ohio U. clash. Socha, Steubenville, Ohio, fullback averaged 3.7 yards per carry last season and is averaging 6.1 yards this season. Miller, a Waverly, Ohio, lineman, has played on both offense and defense this year.

Guaranteed Borrowing Power?

Right now you are probably not too concerned about "borrowing" or "collateral," yet in a few years you may need money for a down payment on a home, or for a business opportunity. Life insurance, with its steadily increasing cash value, is preferred collateral at any lending institution. I hope I'll have a chance to discuss this unique aspect of life insurance at your convenience.

From a woman's point of view — who can resist snuggling her cheek against the soft, plush nap of the new velour pullover shirts. Pure luxury, with its velvety look and soft feel — velour seems the closest thing to the 'royal velvet'.

In deep rich tones of burgundy, royal blue, burnished gold and bottle green, the velour shirt is a most handsome gift item for any man of discriminating taste.

To see one is almost certainly to buy one.

Ups And Downs In Growth Shown By Arts And Sciences College

The College of Arts and Sciences has grown from 1925 when 12 degrees were issued to the largest college at Marshall with an enrollment of 2,886. The College was founded in 1923 under the direction of Robert J. Largent, the first dean. The college offered degrees in political science, philosophy, sociology, psychology, commerce, geology, astronomy, library science, economics, Bible, journalism, dramatic arts, speech, mechanical drawing, and physical education.

The number of Arts and Sciences graduates remained one-fourth the number of Teachers College graduates until 1929 when it rose to one-third. That same year Augustus Hayes resumed the duties of acting dean.

In 1930, William E. Greenleaf became acting dean and was made permanent dean in 1931. During Greenleaf's administration, the ratio of Arts and Sciences graduates to Teachers College graduates fluctuated. In 1931, the College of Arts and Sciences had an edge of eight, but was behind 59 graduates in 1933.

Elsworth Vachel Bowers became the College of Arts and Sciences' fourth dean in 1938. In 1940, Teachers College again had four times as many graduates as Arts and Sciences.

In 1945, Dr. J. Frank Bartlett took over his present position as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences after previously teaching in the chemistry department.

According to Luther E. Bledsoe, registrar, the postwar influx of veterans in 1945 pushed the enrollment of the Arts and Science College over Teachers College 745 to 493.

In 1950, Teachers College trailed Arts and Sciences 1,545 to 1,113. In 1955 Arts and Sciences led by a 3 to 1 margin.

In 1960, the College of Arts and Sciences suffered a drop caused by the creation of the College of Applied Science. Subtracted from Arts and Sciences were the engineering, nursing and medical technology departments, plus the military science curriculum.

Since 1960, the two colleges' enrollments have remained almost equal with Arts and Sciences usually leading. This year it leads by 13 students, 2,899 to 2,886.

Since 1923, many new fields have been added, such as music, modern languages, mathematics, physics, bacteriology, botany, zoology, geography and anthropology.

In addition to the Masters Degree in Business Administration started this semester, Dean Bartlett cited the Journalism, Math and Physics Departments as planning masters programs. The Chemistry Department has been working on a Ph.D. program.

LT. COL. Patrick H. Morgan will join the faculty upon military retirement Dec. 1. The ROTC battalion plans a ceremony to honor the colonel prior to his retirement.

Col. Morgan To Join Faculty

Lt. Col. Patrick H. Morgan, professor of military science, will remain at Marshall as a faculty member upon his military retirement, according to Samuel T. Stinson, associate professor of engineering.

Colonel Morgan, who retires from the Army Dec. 1, will step down as head of the Military Science Department. His successor is Col. Henry C. Bowden, who recently returned from Viet Nam.

Professor Stinson said that Lt. Col. Morgan will assume duties immediately upon military retirement, and at first will divide his time between the office of Dr. A. E. McCaskey, Dean of the College of Applied Science in the mornings, and the engineering department in the afternoon.

Professor Stinson said that most probably Colonel Morgan will not begin instruction until the fall semester.

W. Va. Educators Hold Meet Here

Educators from nine West Virginia counties met Wednesday in the Science Hall Auditorium to discuss local, state and federal areas in development of a comprehensive educational program.

County superintendents, their assistants and others active in education attended the meeting. The counties represented were Boone, Cabell, Kanawha, Lincoln, Logan, Mason, Mingo, Putnam and Wayne.

The meeting was conducted by Robert Patterson, director of instruction for the West Virginia Department of Education. According to Patterson, "The main concern of the conference is to suggest a structure which will involve the classroom teacher in the improvement of the total educational program of a given school system."

The meeting Wednesday was one of six regional meetings to be held in various parts of West Virginia.

DEAR REB:

Sports hero loses girl to mild-mannered math major.

DEAR REB:

I'm a big football star, and I've found a girl who suits me to a T. But I've been blocked out of the play by a math major. He knows math from $A = \pi R^2$ to $E = MC^2$. Now she says he's found the formula for success with her. All he has to do is mutter "Coronet R/T," and I get thrown for a loss. Believe me, this is no equilateral triangle that I'm in. Outside of telling me to bench myself, have you any advice?

FALLEN STAR

DEAR FALLEN STAR:

Now's the time to plunge. Coronet R/T isn't his exclusive formula. Your nearby Dodge Dealer has it, too. And it comes almost as easily as the cube root of 27. Then how can the girl of your dreams resist two superstars... you and your Coronet R/T? From there on out, your math major will be the victim of diminishing returns. Huddle with your Dodge Dealer now, and get your signals straight.

Sincerely, Reb

And why not? Look what you'll have going for you in your Dodge Coronet R/T, convertible or two-door hardtop. All standard, too. 440-cubic-inch Magnum V8 engine. Dual exhausts. Heavy-duty brakes and suspension. High-performance Red Streak tires. And exclusive R/T grille and hood scoop design, full length paint stripes, and nameplates, front, rear and sides. So get with your Dodge Dealer, and your problem will solve itself.
