2 Woodrow Wilson Winners!

Coeds 1st To Gain Two Fellowships In One Year

Two coeds have scored a "first" in Marshall history by winning $1,500 Woodrow Wilson Fellowships. They are Juliet A. Willman, Huntington senior majoring in English and French, and Joyce A. Rohr, Huntington senior majoring in political science.

Since Marshall actively began participating in the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship competition in 1950, four other Marshall students have won the coveted awards; but, until this year's competition, there have not been two winners at one time.

Miss Willman and Miss Rohr were among 11,000 candidates in the nation seeking 1,000 fellowships. According to Dr. Norman B. Green, professor of zoology and Woodrow Wilson Fellowship faculty representative, there were 800 nominees in MU's region, which consists of Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, North Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia. Only 70 of the nominees received fellowships, and there were only four in West Virginia, including one each at Bethany and West Virginia Wesleyan.

There were seven nominees from Marshall. In addition to the two winners, two others received honorable mention. They are James Harper and Stuart Thomas, Huntington seniors.

Dr. Green singled out the honors programs at Marshall "for producing some top-notch students" and aiding in the list of candidates who apply for the fellowships.

Miss Willman, who is carrying a 3.97 overall average in the College of Arts and Sciences, says she plans to work for her master's degree in comparative literature at the University of Indiana. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer D. Willman Sr., 1026 12th Ave., "were very happy" when they learned the news of their daughter's selection.

In commenting on study habits, the diminutive coed, who's nicknamed "Jet", said she prefers to study alone in a quiet room.

"I usually set a time limit," she added, "and try to stick to it."

Her ambition is to become a teacher on the college level.

Miss Rohr, with a 3.65 average in the College of Arts and Sciences, probably will work for her master's at the University of Michigan, although she has not made a final decision yet. She wishes to be a teacher "at a small liberal arts college." Why a small college?

"One of the things I've gotten out of college is a close association with professors, and this can be attained better at a small college."

Dean J. F. Bartlett's telephone call to her Saturday morning "left me numb with surprise," Miss Rohr said. "I haven't gotten over it yet."

As for her study habits, she prefers to study alone, but with soft background music. "I work best under pressure," she noted, "and frequently do a great deal of studying in 'blocks'; that is, on a Sunday, for example."

She lives with her mother, Mrs. Dan Huston, at 78 Scyamore St.

The Woodrow Wilson Fellowship is aimed at encouraging students to enter the teaching profession. Although the $1,500 award is good for only one year of study, winners frequently are able to receive other stipends or grants to continue their education toward the Ph. D. Those who receive honorable mention also are frequent winners of other awards.

Two-Day Blood Drive Begins

The second semester blood drive begins today from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and continues tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Student Union. The purpose of the donation drive is to provide an immediate supply of blood for students and administration.

Competition is being held for campus groups donating the most blood in comparison to number of members.

Trophies will be given to the campus group having the largest percentage of member contribution for both semesters' drive. The trophies are now on display in the Union.

$7,500 Research Grant By Benedum Foundation

Happy Coeds Set A Record

THESE TWO COEDS established a "first" at Marshall by winning Woodrow Wilson Fellowships. This is the first time Marshall has had two winners in one year. The coeds are Juliet Willman (left) and Joyce Rohr, both Huntington seniors.

Fund Will Aid Faculty Work

By LARRY ASCOUGH
Editor-in-Chief

A Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation grant of $7,500 has been given the Research Board for summer faculty research, according to Dr. Harold E. Walker, vice president of academic affairs and chairman of the board. He said the money would be used to pay faculty members' salaries while they devote fulltime to research.

Dr. Walker explained that the board's proposal to the foundation asked for faculty support since many faculty members were doing research and many had a desire to do so but had to teach summer school classes. Through such grants, research-minded individuals could carry on projects without having to teach, he said.

Board Meets Friday

The Research Board will meet Friday to select recipients of the grants. Dr. Walker said nine requests had been received, but the board only would be able to handle about four, depending on the amounts requested.

"I'm quite delighted with this grant," he explained. "It is the first breakthrough in the board's efforts and if all goes well, we may be able to return to this foundation for further grants." Dr. Walker said the board was making similar requests of other foundations.

The Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation was established by the late Michael L. Benedum in memory of his son. The elder Benedum, a native of Bridgeport, W. Va., was president of the Benedum-Trees Co., an oil firm which developed many new properties in the United States, Mexico and South America.

Cites Foundation Aid

According to Dr. Walker, the Benedum Foundation is very interested in the growth of West Virginia, especially educational growth. Each year the organization grants thousands of dollars to state colleges and universities.

Dr. Walker praised members of the university Research Board for their work thus far. Members of the board include Dr. Walker, chairman; Dr. Jack Brown, professor of English; Dr. Dana R. Cartwright, assistant professor of chemistry; Dr. Elizabeth Cometti, professor of history; Dr. Ralph Edeburn, professor of zoology; Miss Cleo M. Gray, associate professor of home economics, Dr. Howard L. Mills, professor of botany; Dr. Walter H. Perl, associate professor of German; Dr. Paul D. Stewart, chairman of the Political Science Department; and Samuel T. Stinson, chairman of the Engineering Department.

4 Scholarships Are Available Through Student Government

By DONALD WAGNER
Staff Reporter

Applications for four Student Government Scholarships for 1963-64 are available in the Student Government office and the dean of men's office, according to David Curtis, Student Government Business Manager.

The $98.90 scholarships, which cover a student's tuition, health and activity fees, will be awarded to one sophomore, one junior, and two seniors. The application deadline is April 1.

To qualify for a scholarship an applicant should be a full time student and be able to prove that he or she is in need of financial help. Each applicant should include at least three letters of recommendation from such persons as ministers, teachers, etc., in addition to a personal letter with his application. All students who wish to apply must have at least a 2.5 overall average and not less than a 2.0 for any one semester. Each applicant must also participate in at least one extracurricular activity. Marital status is of no consequence.

The basis for the selection of the recipients of the scholarships will be on the student's financial need, overall academic record, and participation in campus activities.

Other Student Government news includes the announcement of the annual Student Government banquet which has been set for March 30 at Young's Restaurant. According to Student Body President Gary McMillan, all members of the Student Senate are invited to attend the affair.

Five members of the Student Senate will attend a meeting of the Emancipation Proclamation Committee of the West Virginia Centennial Commission March 30 at Webster Springs. The delegates to the conference will be mainly concerned with the problem of racial equality.

The Student Government has also decided to send the new basketball coach, Ellis Johnson, a note of congratulations upon his recent appointment. The Senators agreed unanimously that they will lend help and support to the new coach.

Precipitation Produces Puddle-Jumping Perils

By SANDY O'SHEA

Puddle Trouble?

TWO TECHNIQUES for navigating puddles are (top sketch) walking through the water on your heels or for the athletically inclined (second sketch), pole vaulting is always a possibility. The casting the bread upon the water style was used in fairy tale history.

Puddle-jumping is a habit for Marshall students crossing campus after a rain. Now there is nothing wrong with having to jump puddles, but the large mass of water (it's more like a small lake) that collects across the walk leading from the Student Union after a bit of precipitation offers a challenge to even the most adept puddle-jumper. This large mass of water is impossible to dodge (oh, you could walk around it, but then you are faced with trudging through a swampy, mire that at any other time is called the lawn).

You can't dodge the water, so you must get through it—somehow. Preparing a course of action takes a bit of ingenuity, but with all the rain we have in Huntington, one can get plenty of practice. I have come up with a few solutions myself.

Obviously, if one doesn't care to get the toes of his shoes soaked, he can always walk on his heels. If you don't mind being laughed at as you waddle through the water on your heels, then this course of action is definitely for you; however, if you are female, a romantic, and do mind being laughed at, then you can wait for some modern-day Sir Walter Raleigh to toss his coat upon the water and allow you dry passage. The trouble with the latter solution is that chivalry on the Marshall campus is not what it could be, so if you should choose this alternative then don't hold your breath.

One could pole-vault across the water. This is an especially good solution for the athletically inclined.

There is a Grimm's Fairy Tale about a mean, nasty little girl who was also very vain about her appearance. She had just purchased a new pair of shoes and her mother sent her to the store for two loaves of bread. On the way home she was confronted with a muddy puddle of water, and rather than dirty her shoes, she tied the two loaves of bread on her feet and attempted to cross the water.

Now we students could attempt this too, but there is one major drawback: In the middle of the puddle the little girl descended into a hell-like dungeon full of serpents where she was tied up and tortured until she promised to change her vain, nasty ways. If such a fate terrifies you, then I wouldn't suggest employing the "bread-technique"; but for those who like to take chances, don't miss this one!

Forsaking all else, the university could plant rice in this troublesome water spot. The additional income from such an endeavor could certainly be put to good use.

It would seem to me that the most obvious solution to the problem would be to fix it; but then that may be a little too obvious. I bet they haven't thought of that. And besides, if it were fixed there would be no more problem and with that would go the opportunity and challenge of devising methods to overcome it.

Honors Cap Hard Work!

The fact that two Marshall coeds have won simultaneous Woodrow Wilson Fellowships—the first time since 1950 when Marshall began participating in the program—is a tribute to the emphasis being placed on scholarship.

Joyce A. Rohr, Huntington senior and one of the winners, pointed out, "I don't think that the people who are concerned with the honors programs are getting enough credit for what they're doing."

The Parthenon would like to salute the work being done under the Departmental Honors Courses, coordinated by Dr. Charles Moffat, professor of history, and the Interdisciplinary Honors Seminar, coordinated by Dr. Ronald Rollins, assistant professor of English.

Dr. Moffat is chairman of the Honors Committee that consists of Drs. Elizabeth Cometti, Eugene Hoak, Ben Hope, Woodrow Morris, James Richardson, Alma Noble, Bruce Dunn, Dana Cartwright, Allen Brown, Jack Brown, Howard Mills, and Rollins.

Dean J. F. Bartlett and Dr. N. Bayard Green also have worked very hard to promote the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship program.

The efforts of all of these people—and department chairmen who are actively pushing honors courses—deserve to be capped with a WELL DONE!

New Cage Coach, Players Meet

Togetherness, Optimism Key Points In Rebuilding Green, Says Johnson

By DANNY BARBER
Sports Writer

Coach Ellis Johnson met the members of his basketball team for the first time last Thursday and cited together-ness and optimism as the key words in his campaign to rebuild the Big Green basketball fortunes.

At a press conference attended by 24 cagers Johnson told the team that "we are all in this together." He reminded them that they "came here to play winning basketball" and that he thinks "we can get the job done."

On the subject of optimism he told the players, "Since I've had this job I have talked with confidence". Then he asked players to "share this confidence, too."

Coach Johnson called recruiting the Big Green's most serious problem. "We have got to do a good job of recruiting. We need more good talent. I want you to . . . help us get back in the groove."

He noted that the present players could have a lot of influence in their home areas on athletes who might be prospective players. "You know the kind of boys we need . . . good basketball players as well as good students." He then urged the team to ". . . do the job together."

On the subject of plans for next year, he said the starting berths were "up for grabs."

This statement served as a source of encouragement to at least one Big Green player, back-court man Jody Sword. Sword said, "I think this will help to inspire some of the seniors to be and will encourage everybody to work harder." He added that he agreed with Coach Johnson about the need for the team's help in the area of recruiting.

Personal interviews with each of the players is on the new coach's agenda along with a busy recruiting schedule which will take him to state tournaments in West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio. The interviews will be to compare his philosophy of basketball with each of the players and to answer any questions which they might have.

Coach Brown Foresees Rough Baseball Season

The baseball season is nearing and Coach Alvis Brown started preparing for the campaign as 43 prospects turned out for practice sessions during the past week.

After a 4-10 record last year and a seventh-place finish in the Mid-American Conference, Coach Brown looks at the coming season as "a rough one".

"We have 14 returning lettermen and most of them starters but right now I'm looking for a third baseman, an outfielder, and another starting pitcher," Coach Brown said.

Returning lettermen are catchers Zeke Myers and Gary Satterfield; pitchers Charles Brown, Jim Freman, Dale Lynd, and Mike Muth; first baseman Toby Holbrook; second baseman Dick Fillmore; shortstop Rusty Wamsley, and outfielders Mike Cunningham, John Griffin, Dennis Osborne, Harry Raczok and Mickey Sydenstricker.

"Dale Lynd and Jim Freeman pitched for us last year and I would have to say that they are our most experienced pitchers," the coach emphasized.

The baseball season opens for the Big Green on April 2 at West Virginia Tech, if the schedule is approved by the athletic board. The other pending games are April 5, at Toledo; April 6 at Toledo; April 9, a doubleheader with Rio Grande at home; April 11, at Morehead; April 12 and 13, Miami of Ohio at home; April 16, Morris Harvey at home; April 19, at Kent State; April 20, at Kent State; April 23, West Virginia State at home; April 26 and 27, Western Michigan at home; April 30, Morehead doubleheader at home.

May 3 and 4, Ohio University at home; May 7, West Virginia Tech at home; May 9, at Rio Grande; May 10, at Morris Harvey; May 11, at West Virginia State; May 17, at Bowling Green, and May 18 at Bowling Green.

The Union Co. wishes to announce the appointment of Mr. John J. Cappellari as manager of the Boy's and Alumni Shop and Mr. David Singleton as his assistant manager. The Union Co. is proud to have these two fine young men as part of the family at the Union Co.

John J. Cappellari. Graduated from Marshall University in 1962 with a degree in Marketing-Retailing. At Marshall he was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity in which he held several offices. # Anonymity Helpful To Authors-Auden

By JIM CASTO
Staff Writer

"It might well be best for everyone concerned if all books, including my own, were published anonymously," Pulitzer Prize-winning poet W. H. Auden told The Parthenon in an interview last Thursday.

Auden, on campus to speak at a convocation, pointed out that, if books were published anonymously, readers wouldn't feel it necessary to like or dislike a work because of the reputation of its author.

"Of course," he added, "this might put a good many book reviewers out of work."

The British-born poet admitted that this scheme might not be practical. "But," he added, "the public doesn't really expect poets to be very practical, you know."

Money Practical Matter

One thing, Auden pointed out, that all poets do need to be practical about is money. Few, if any, poets derive their entire income from the sale of their work. Some are teachers, some are journalists and others are translators. Of the three fields, Auden said, translation is perhaps the best.

Auden recommended that the young person interested in writing steer clear of journalism because "it is too easy to get it mixed up with serious writing."

When asked if he had any other advice for the would-be poet, Auden replied that the two most important things to do were to read everything one could find and to learn how to work hard.

Auden said he could not over-emphasize the importance of hard work in learning how to write.

This, according to Auden, is the main problem with the so-called "beat" poets. "They seem more interested in creating a way of life," he said, "than they do in really writing very much."

Takes It Seriously

Yet, when asked if he took beat poetry seriously, the poet replied "Of course I take it seriously. Each poet is quite different. Thus, each poet's work is quite different. Just because their work is somewhat different from mine doesn't mean that I won't take it seriously."

SPEAKEASY SCHEDULED

Guest at tomorrow's Speakeasy supper will be Dr. Jack Brown, professor of English, speaking on Samuel Johnson. This is the first of two meetings devoted to men who were notable practitioners of the art of intelligent conversation. Dr. Lloyd Beck, professor of philosophy, will speak about Socrates on March 28. Speakeasy meeting time is Thursday 5 p.m. in the small dining room of the university Dining Hall. Interested students are invited to attend.

CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

Students who were selected for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges Award may pick up their certificate at the Dean of Women's office at their earliest convenience.

WILSON SETS MEETING

Neal B. "Whitey" Wilson, athletic director, announced Wednesday that there will be a meeting of the athletic board at the end of this week to discuss the spring sports schedules. The main topic on the agenda will be the approving of the golf, baseball, track, and tennis schedules for the coming season.

"After all," he continued, "I'm not so sure that this so-called beat generation really exists."

All too often, the poet maintained, such labels as "beat" are devised by journalists who need a "gimmick" to tie together reviews of three or four unrelated books.

Much too much emphasis is placed on "lumping various writers into schools," he continued.

Pointing out that this "distortion" is often carried over from the daily press into the classroom, Auden said "Take Keats, Shelley and Byron for example. The ways in which they are different are really much more important than the ways in which they're alike. But still they have been lumped together into one so-called school."

Fraternity Men Discuss Ideas At IFC Retreat

Representatives from each fraternity on campus conducted the Inter-Fraternity Council Retreat Saturday morning in the Student Union to discuss various problems.

Following a keynote address by Dean of Men Stanley Shaw, who spoke of the IFC's objectives and how they can benefit other organizations at Marshall, the men divided into five discussion groups; (1) Pledging, (2) Rushing, (3) Athletics, (4) Greek Week, and (5) Homecoming and Mother's Day Sing.

Scores of suggestions from each group were read aloud to the whole body. Many revisions to the present fraternal methods of conduct and activities were presented.

In the closing minutes of the meeting Fred Charles, IFC President, led discussion about the revised IFC Constitution. He asked all members present to exercise the ideas brought out during the meeting concerning unity, friendship, and cooperation among the Greek organizations.
