All-Campus Talent Show Is Slated By Veterans' Club For April 7-8

By ARCHIE GLASPELL
Staff Reporter

If you have talent, the Marshall Veterans' Club wants you for its annual All-Campus Talent Show. The show will be presented April 7 and 8.

Leon Weekley, Mansfield, Ohio, senior, holds the post of show director with James Wellman, Kenova senior, in charge of publicity. Ted Wilson, Bartley freshman, is stage manager. The stage manager also will be in charge of lighting this year.

Performers in the show will be competing in four categories: two group divisions, male and female; and single acts, male and female. First and second prizes for each of the categories will be awarded. Awards will be in the form of trophies.

Applications for entrants will be available next week. No auditions will be required unless the number of acts exceeds 35. Two rehearsals will be conducted in order to coordinate the acts with the lighting and to insure continuity. The dates for the rehearsals will be announced at a later date.

Publicity Chairman Wellman had this comment about the show, "We hope that all persons interested in performing in the show will be getting their acts ready early and send in applications as quickly as possible. The club is looking forward to a good show this year—as successful as those of the past two years."

Court Refuses Review Of Sigma Kappa Case

The West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals recently voted four to one to refuse to review the case concerning the local Sigma Kappa residence.

The refusal means that the sorority will be forced to comply with the injunction issued against them on Jan. 14 ordering them to vacate the house at 1535 Fifth Avenue.

"Sigma Kappa is now in the process of negotiating for other living quarters," said Patty Poliskey, St. Albans senior and sorority president. "Of course, we are unhappy that we must leave our present house, but feel confident that adequate arrangements will be made immediately."

The plaintiffs in the case had charged that the properties in the 1600 block were for residential use only and that Sigma Kappa was violating restrictive covenants in the deeds.

Attorney L. W. Blankenship, serving as special Circuit Court judge, stated in his final order that "the sorority house, being so operated and maintained, is a direct and overt violation of said restrictive covenants and that plaintiffs are entitled to a permanent injunction to inhibit, prohibit, restrain and enjoin the sorority from further maintenance and operation or permit the same to be done by any other person or corporate entity."

A 60-day stay was granted at the time to permit an appeal of the ruling.

After the Supreme Court denied to review the case, Miss Poliskey said that she was disappointed with the decision but that it was final.

Earlier in the year, Joyce Rutledge, Huntington senior and then president of Sigma Kappa, said, "Although the injunction does not or may not directly affect the other sororities and fraternities, the ruling will have some influence on the Greek organizations. For instance, if any of the present or future organizations wanted to establish a residence in this block, there would be a precedent set."

"We are pioneers. We hope to encourage the Greek system and all extracurricular organizations to keep pace with the growth of Marshall. It is inevitable that Marshall will someday expand and that more sororities and fraternities will be installed on the campus. These organizations will want houses."

Blankenship said at the time, "I was concerned only with the one sorority," but he added that other sorority and fraternity houses fall under the same restrictive covenants. He said that he did not know whether the surrounding residents had waived their rights by permitting or tolerating the house to remain for a length of time.

Andrews Says Spring Festival Won't Be Held

The Spring Carnival, scheduled for the weekend of April 14 and 15, has been canceled by the Student Government administration, according to John Andrews, Clendenin junior and co-ordinator of the committee.

Andrews said the reason for this is that too many conflicting academic and social activities are scheduled for the spring and few organizations would be able to participate.

In a letter to the presidents of campus organizations, Andrews said, "It is with regrets that we cancel this function. We hope that it will be initiated during the following year. We feel that a Spring Carnival will benefit not only the participating organizations, but the university as a whole."

Campus Politicians To File March 27

Aspiring campus politicians will toss their hats into the election ring on March 27, 28 and 29.

The election has been scheduled for April 12. Nancy Jett, Harrisville senior, is coordinator of the Election Commission.

Lou Mott Will Transfer Next Autumn

By JIM DUFFIELD
Assistant Sports Editor

Lou Mott, backcourt ace for the Big Green, will not be able to get his degree from the Teachers College.

Mott—who was informed about a year ago that a speech impairment would not allow him to teach and, as a result, he could not get a teaching degree from Marshall—is going to transfer to Fairmont State College next fall with a major in Physical Education and a minor in Economics.

Mott said, "I have no grudge against the University or Dean Wilburn. He has given me a fair deal all along."

D. Banks Wilburn, dean of the Teachers College, told Lou that he could transfer into the Arts and Sciences College. If he did this it would put him about a year and a half behind.

Lou has been playing independent basketball in Wheelersburg, Ohio.

Lou said that he hoped to go into the recreational side of Physical Education and be a playground director somewhere after he graduates.

Mott said that Coach Jule Rivlin had talked to him about coming back to Marshall the second semester of next year to play basketball, but Lou decided against it. Since he has been playing independent basketball he would be ineligible to play varsity ball next year.

Dean Wilburn told him that if his speech improved he would be allowed to enroll next fall, but Lou said, "I understand fully about my speech and I can't count on it improving very much."

Mott is a first semester senior now, but has dropped his class load to nine hours.

... Receives Grant

Instructor Gets $10,000 Grant To Gain Ph. D.

William C. Moran, English instructor, has been granted a National Defense Graduate Fellowship to study at the University of Tennessee.

The grant is for three years with the stipulation that Mr. Moran study during the winter and summer terms. At the end of that period he will receive a Ph.D. in English.

The total sum of the grant is $10,000. The government pays the university $2,500 for each person receiving a fellowship, and Mr. Moran will receive $2,000 the first year, plus $400 for each dependent. After that, he is allotted $2,200 the second year and $400 for each dependent, and $2,400 the third year plus $400 for each dependent.

Mr. Moran will begin his studies in September.

In 1958, the government became concerned by the tremendous number of war babies which would soon be swamping the colleges and universities throughout the country. In order to educate them, more qualified teachers would be needed.

Congress passed a bill allotting a certain amount of money to carry out three year graduate programs of this nature.

Francois Awarded $125 Scholarship

William E. Francois, assistant professor of journalism, will begin a one-week study Monday at the Chicago Campus of Northwestern University.

Professor Francois, who was awarded a $125 scholarship by Northwestern, will be taking a course entitled "Short Course for Newsmen in Crime News Analysis and Reporting."

Francois

The scholarship will cover tuition, complimentary luncheons, lecture outlines and a certificate of attendance.

Professor Francois, a journalist for 10 years, holds B. S. and M. S. degrees in journalism from Northwestern University.

Prior to coming to Marshall in 1959, he was a reporter for the New Castle (Ind.) Courier-Times and worked on the Idaho State Journal, Pocatello, Idaho, as a reporter, photographer and farm editor. He also was a copy editor, assistant city editor and assistant news editor of the Dayton (Ohio) Journal Herald.

By BOB SMITH
Feature Writer

If you happen to be sitting in a classroom when a fire drill occurs and the professor looks more astounded than others around you, don't be surprised. He probably forgot to check his mailbox that particular morning, because all fire drills are announced in advance by the Marshall Safety Committee.

A new name has been given to the drills this year. They have been changed from fire, to building evacuation drills, according to Frederick A. "Doc" Fitch, associate professor of physical education and chairman of the safety committee. Professor Fitch pointed out that there are several causes for building evacuation besides fire, including explosions or future nuclear warfare.

Marshall is required by state law and city ordinances to have a drill at least once a month and so far these requirements have always been met, said Professor Fitch.

There is a definite system by which the drills are carried out and several people play an important part in seeing that each phase of the operation is successful.

Professor Fitch takes the first step by deciding when the drill will occur. He then calls Building and Grounds who in turn set every alarm on the campus. They have to be set individually in every building. Each clock is synchronized, thus insuring that all buildings are evacuated at approximately the same time.

An important thing not to be forgotten is the call made to the fire department. If it is not called, the Marshall campus would be invaded by downtown firemen and fire equipment before you could say Smokey Bear. They must be called and told that a fire drill is about to be held because the alarms at Marshall and the fire department ring simultaneously. Sometimes fire department officials come to view the evacuation and check to see the speed with which students exit from the buildings.

Each teacher at Marshall is required to perform certain duties in regard to the drills. At the beginning of each semester, freshmen classes are instructed as to what exits are to be used and are given duties that must be carried out. The teacher appoints a student to close windows and shut the door before leaving the building. It's the teacher's responsibility to help any incapacitated student out of the building.

Custodians on campus also have their share of responsibility. After everyone is out of the building, it's their job to check and see if all lights are off and doors and windows closed. If there is a fire, they are to go to that area and try to contain it. When the drill is finished, they make out a report for their own individual floor and send it to the safety committee. In past years, demonstrations have been held on campus in order to instruct the workers concerning the controlling of fires.

Professor Fitch said that every building on campus is now equipped with crash and panic bars. These bars are attached to the inside of each door to permit them to be unlocked from the inside, even though they may be locked on the outside.

In order not to disrupt classroom work, certain rules have been set up concerning the drills. First of all, the drills are always announced ahead of time to the teachers, so as not to possibly interrupt an examination.

The drills are set up to avoid taking up more than five minutes of any class period. It is also agreed that the drills do not interrupt the same class more than once during a semester. Thus the drills are held at a different time and day each month.

Fortunately, Marshall hasn't had to test the system in an actual situation for several years, said Professor Fitch.

When asked if students take the drills seriously, Professor Fitch replied, "Students don't take anything serious unless it's serious." He said that many just take their time in making their exit. In the past some classes have even remained inside, he added. Although the drills aren't taken seriously by students, they do provide an excellent opportunity to test alarm systems and correct any difficulty that might exist.

Language Week Observance Planned For March 20-24

Next week is designated as National Foreign Language Week and will be celebrated all over the country by high schools, colleges, and universities.

This week is annually proclaimed by the President of the United States as a time set aside for the consideration of the values of meeting, speaking to, and understanding people of all nations. This year's theme is "The Thrust to Put It in Orbit."

On campus the departments of French, German, Russian, and Spanish will have a combined celebration March 21 at 7 p.m. in the Science Hall Auditorium. A travelogue, "Our Journey Across Europe," will be featured by Dr. Ralph Valentine, a student of French and Executive Secretary of the Christian Churches of West Virginia.

Dr. Valentine will also present a two hour color film on his travels in many European countries.

All members of the faculty and students who are interested are invited to see the film and hear the commentary by Dr. Valentine.

Ward Is Selected Adviser On Books

Harold E. Ward, associate professor of science, has been selected as an adviser for the "Vistas in Science" program of the National Science Teachers Association which meets in New York today.

"Vistas in Science" is a project to develop paperback books for distribution to the Science Clubs of America and Future Scientists of America. The vista on which Professor Ward will be working is cytogenetics (the branch of biology which deals with the structural basis of heredity and variation.)

The book, written for high school students, will include the fundamentals of cytogenetics as well as ideas for projects, experiments, and other activities. The book is designed to appeal to students in grades 7 through 12.

Students Will Get Honorary Awards

A student from Huntington High and South Charleston High will receive a silver medal from Eta Sigma Phi, classical honorary, for the first time this year.

The honorary's main project is the awarding of a silver medal to the best student in each high school who has maintained an average of at least 90 during four years of Latin. Students from Stonewall Jackson High of Charleston, Charleston High, Triadelphia of Wheeling, and East High of Huntington have received medals from the fraternity during the past 10 years.

Local students receive their medals at the ODK Awards Convocation on campus while those in the other schools receive the medals at their own Senior Assembly.
