Sightseers hinder workers

Visitors to Henderson slow progress

By Randy Rorrer

If Gene G. Kuhn, special project coordinator, could have he probably would have donned a football official's shirt and thrown a flag on visitors of the Cam Henderson Center for fan interference.

He probably would have penalized them just enough yards to get them out the front door and out of the way of the construction workers who are trying to complete the project by Nov. 27, the scheduled date for Marshall basketball's home-opener.

"We've had visitors from everywhere," Kuhn said. "They've come in off the street, students come in, staff comes in, everybody just wants to see it because they have heard how nice it is."

Kuhn said the "no trespassing" signs posted all over the building haven't stopped the uninvited guests.

"We are now working with the Marshall security and they will come through the building occasionally and escort those who are not supposed to be there out of the building," Kuhn said.

Kuhn said some of the visitors would talk to the workers and interfere with their work.

"The visitors were starting to affect the job and we're on a deadline," Kuhn said. "No visitors whatsoever are now allowed on the project. We're asking them to please refrain from coming into the building because it is not safe with construction going on."

Kuhn said it will really help the workers meet the Nov. 27 deadline if they can keep those people desiring a sneak-preview out of the Henderson Center until it opens.

Student Senate issues invitation to faculty

By Brent Archer

A memorandum sent to faculty members inviting them to attend Student Senate meetings may improve relations between the faculty and Student Government, according to Senate President James A. Dodrill.

Dodrill said the memorandum was sent Nov. 5 to all faculty members on campus.

He said the goal he wanted to accomplish by sending the memorandum was two-fold.

"First, we did it to promote Student Government's image with the faculty and give them a chance to come over here and see how we work," he said.

"Also, it encourages the faculty to take an active part in student affairs."

Dodrill said he had hoped a few faculty members would attend Tuesday's senate meeting, but none were present.

"If Tuesday's attendance is any indication, I'm sorry I wasted the time and the paper to send it out," he said. "It shows that they are either too busy or not concerned."

Dodrill said he would give the faculty a few weeks to respond and begin attending meetings before he considered the memorandum idea a wasted effort.

Carpooling program progressing slowly

By Brent Archer

Student Government's newly initiated carpool program is making "excellent progress," according to Jennifer K. Fraley, director of the Office of Off-Campus Housing and Commuter Affairs.

Fraley said the program, which began in September, now has 13 participants.

"I'm really pleased that we have that many," she said. "It's a new idea and it will take a while to catch on."

Fraley, Moorefield junior, said that while she is hoping for a large number of new participants in the program, she does not expect many new additions until new students begin classes in January.

"I'd like to see about 25 carpools by the end of the semester," she said. "That would mean there are at least 75 people working together and saving time and money."

Fraley said she does not have knowledge of any particular problems which may have arisen with the program so far, but feedback from those in the pools has been poor.

"I would like to hear from the people

Calendar to feature Marshall's best in men

By Ruth Giachino

A man for every month is what Tina D. Foster, Huntington junior, plans to offer in her "Campus Classics" calendar.

"I got the ideas last summer from a friend who goes to Arizona State," Foster said. "She showed me 'The Men of Arizona State' calendar and I thought if Arizona State can do it why can't Marshall."

The first thing Foster did was try to get permission to use the name "Men of Marshall" for her calendar. She went to C.T. Mitchell, director of relations, who directed her to the Public Relations and Publications Committee. The committee advised her to do what she wanted.

"I decided to name it the 'Campus Classics' calendar to stay out of legal problems," Foster said.

Now Foster is in the process of choosing twelve good looking men for her calendar. "I have nine definites but, I don't want to say who they are because if something better comes along a picture may be replaced," she said.

"I have approached many guys on campus about posing for my calendar. Most of the guys are either flattered or think I've lost my mind," Foster said.

The big drawback is money. Foster has been trying to get local stores to advertise in her calendar to help pay for the cost of publishing it. So far, all of the stores she has gone to downtown and at the mall have turned her down.

"Most of the store managers I have talked to told me to come back next year and if the calendar is a success they will advertise in it. The managers are afraid to advertise in something unless it is a sure thing," Foster said.

Foster has hired the Marshall University Advertising Club to help her get some ads. But, if she is still unable to get ads she plans to take out a student loan.

Students should be wary

Thefts may increase in residence halls

With the joy of Christmas giving also comes the sadness of those who take.

"With Christmas coming around, students are going to be taking more money out of their banks to spend on gifts. If students don't take precautions they may find someone has stolen their Christmas money," Phil Ricci, area coordinator, said.

Ricci said he feels more thefts will occur as more money is kept in rooms.

"Residence should keep their doors locked whenever they leave their rooms for anything," he said.

Ricci said presents should be kept out of the view of the open door or windows if the residents live on the ground floor.

"Keep receipts of anything you buy while you are in school. Even if security catches whoever stole your items, if you can't identify them in some way, they won't be returned to you," he said.

"Watch out for your neighbor's room," he said. "If you see someone who's not familiar or acting suspicious, question them or call the resident adviser."

Ricci said he felt items left in the rooms over the holidays were secure.

"People take home most of their small valuables. If they can't, they should not leave them out in the open where they can be seen. If you have a stereo, put it under the bed, but put the table it sits on away too so it looks like it was never there," Ricci said.

Anything stolen, no matter how small should be reported, Ricci said.

There are some staff workers around the buildings even through the holidays, he said. Also security patrols and maintenance people are around.

Holderby Hall is the only residence hall for students to live in if they can't go home for the holidays. During this time the only visitation allowed is in the lobby. This is to protect the people who live there, Ricci said.

Residents may engrave their belongings, he said. Engravers may be picked up in the security office or most residence hall's offices.

Ricci said clothing being stolen from the laundry rooms has been consistent this year.

"The only solution I can see for it to stop is for residents to sit with their own laundry. It would be a great opportunity to study," he said.

He said the idea for writing the memo was developed at the Oct. 16-17 Student Government retreat as part of an effort to improve relations with all groups on campus, including the faculty.

"It is a stepping stone to bring the faculty and students together," Dodrill said.

Faculty members who attend senate meetings will be able to inject opinions and add another point of view to Student Government, Dodrill said.

"We already have the input of students and advisers as well as our own point of view," he said. "There is always room for improvement."

Dodrill said the main goal behind sending the memorandum was not for the faculty to know when the senate had its meetings, but to find out what actually happens at the meetings.

"All the Student Government officials are together and are conducting a business meeting," he said. "This is a chance for them to see that we really do get things done."

in the carpools if they have any suggestions about changes we can make to do it better," she said.

Fraley said the program still is operating as it was originally.

Any commuter student desiring to join a carpool must report to Fraley's office or the parking office in the basement of Old Main, and his or her name will be filed according to city, she said.

After at least three students from the same area agree to form a carpool, one parking sticker will be issued to the group.

Removable adhesive covers are provided with the sticker so it can be moved from car to car.

Fraley said each student is responsible for making periodic checks with the parking office to determine if at least two other students from the same area had also registered.

She said most of those presently in the program organized themselves without assistance from either office.

There is little delay between registration and assignment of the sticker, she said.

"They're picking them up immediately," Fraley said.

FOR THE RECORD

Residence Life Office fails to communicate to Security Office

The Security Office should be commended in its attempt to tighten security to protect women on campus from further accosting or assault incidents. However, the Residence Life Office seems to be making things a little difficult for the Security Office in its negligent communication efforts.

After a recent accosting incident occurred in one of the women's shower rooms in a residence hall, Investigator Robert Huff said the Marshall Security Office was unaware of the incident until reported in The Parthenon.

In one of the two cases in which the Residence Life Office failed to communicate to security, the victim reported the accosting incident to her resident adviser. The resident adviser reported the incident to the Residence Life Office.

We must question the judgement of the resident adviser in not reporting the serious incident immediately to the Security Office so it could file a report.

Why?

The female who was accosted in this particular incident was not contacted by the Residence Life Office until nine days after the incident.

Why?

The Security Office at least has attempted to tighten security in the residence halls. So, we suggest the Residence Life Office begin doing its job with some sense of responsibility dedicated to the protection of all Marshall students.

New sorority colonized

By Sara Crickenberger

Alpha Sigma Alpha will be colonized as a sorority Saturday, according to Ann E. Hicks, Grassymeadows junior and president of the group.

The group started as an interest group in the fall of 1980 and has been working toward colonization since then, Hicks said.

To become colonized the group was required to have 25 members. The campus organization has exceeded that goal with a total of 27 members, Hicks said.

The group was also required to have on philanthropic project each semester, two activities a week, regular meetings, develop a budget and each member must maintain a 2.0 grade point average, Hicks said.

A public reception will be from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday in Memorial Student Center Alumni Lounge to recognize the colonization, Hicks said.

"We are really excited," Hicks said. "We've been a while in doing it and we worked so hard that I can't wait until we're colonized."

Caribbean, Russian tours planned

By Peg Hellston

Plans are now underway for the Alumni Association's 1982 travel program, Karen Thomas, executive director of the Alumni Association and director of Alumni Affairs, said.

A nine-day trip to the Soviet Union is scheduled for June and an 11-day Caribbean cruise to Panama is planned for November, 1982.

The Russian tour includes tours of Moscow, Vladimir, Suzdal and Leningrad, Thomas said. Among the sites in Moscow are the Kremlin, Red Square, Lenin's Mausoleum, numerous museums, monuments and cathedrals. Also included are a ride on the Moscow Metro and an evening theater performance.

The Caribbean cruise, aboard Sitmar's T.S.S. Fairwind, includes stops in Puerto Morelos, Mexico; San Andreas; San Blas Islands; Cartagena; Columbia and Nassau, Bahamas.

Also included in the itinerary is a ride through the Panama Canal.

Thomas said the trips are offered as a service to active members of the Alumni Association.

"We submit bids to several travel agencies," she said. "We try to get the most for our money according to the benefits which are offered by each of the agencies."

Thomas said either she or someone from the Alumni Association board of directors or the administration accompanies the group on the trips.

"It's a priority that someone accompanies them," she said.

Thomas said response to all the Alumni Association's trips is enthusiastic.

"We just returned from a Bermuda cruise with 44 alumni participating," she said. "It was our seventh trip to Bermuda and we had a great time."

Woodford to leave MU despite loyalty

Dr. Charles Woodford, associate professor of speech, will leave Marshall University in January to become head of the graduate audiology program at West Virginia University.

Woodford said he accepted the position because "I'll be more in my area (audiology), and I'll get a reduced (class) load there to do research."

Woodford said he heard about the position last spring, and applied for it last summer. He accepted the position in early September after an interview.

Woodford has been on the faculty at Marshall since 1975.

MU vs. Western Carolina

Herd seeks second conference win

By Patricia Proctor

Last year's game against Western Carolina was a first for the Thundering Herd football team. This year's game could be even bigger.

The 1980 contest was the first Southern Conference game the Herd didn't lose. It ended in a 13-13 tie, as Barry Childers booted a record breaking field goal to tie it in the final seconds.

This year the Herd will be seeking its first home conference victory in Fairfield Stadium, and Coach Sonny Randle says it won't be easy.

Randle said, "Western Carolina will be a tough opponent.

"I don't know what brought about the change," he said. "Early in the season, Western Carolina wasn't a very good football team, but against UT-Chattanooga they found out they could play defense and against Florida State they discovered they could really play offense."

Randle said the Herd will have to score points to beat Western Carolina. "If you look at their total points, you can see that offensively they are a real good football team," he said. "There is no way we can expect the defense to shut them out. We are going to have to score some points to beat them."

Randle said he thinks the team's attitude will be good after last week's 17-10 win over Appalachian State, which was the first conference win for the Herd.

"They love it, they have tasted victory, and it is the greatest thing that has ever happened to them," he said. "I think if they play with the type of emotion and enthusiasm they showed last week, it will be fine."

Randle said he had to worry about the "other reaction" though.

"It took the first couple of days for them to come back to earth," he said. "To tell the truth, I wasn't sure they were going to get here, but I think yesterday's practice was an indicator that they have made it back and will do all right."

Randle said practice Monday and Tuesday was not very good for the Herd, but Wednesday's practice was excellent. "I hope today will be the same," he said Thursday.

Ted Carpenter will start at quarterback Saturday. He passed for 161 yards in the Appalachian State game and scored the tying touchdown.

Randle said Carpenter has been injured since last week's game, and hasn't had an extremely good week in practice. "Ted has an extremely painful injury called a turf toe, and it hurts him to run on it," he said.

"He didn't practice Monday and he is not real sharp yet, but he will be. He had a good day Wednesday."

Randle said freshman defensive end Marty Palazeti may not play Saturday. "He is our only question mark," Randle said. "He had a bacterial infection and a temperature this week. It was down Wednesday, and if it stays down, he will probably play."

Larry Fourqurean, who was named All-Southern Conference "Offensive Player of the Week," will start at tailback, and Jimmy North will start at fullback.

The Catamounts have had two weeks to prepare for the Herd since their 56-31 loss at Florida State. Both Marshall and Western Carolina have records of 2-7 overall and 1-4 in the conference.

Western Carolina quarterback Ronnie Mixon has passed to receiver Jeff Dean for 697 yards and two touchdowns this season, and passed for 322 yards against Florida State. Tailback Melvin Dorsey has rushed for 849 yards on 203 carries.

Marshall quarterback Carpenter believes he can earn scholarship

By Patricia Proctor

Marshall's Ted Carpenter and baseball's Tug McGraw agree on one thing - "You've got to believe."

For Carpenter, the freshman walk-on quarterback from Manassas, Va., the belief was that he could earn a football scholarship at Marshall. That dream hasn't become a reality yet, but it's only a matter of time.

"My goal at the beginning of the season was to get a scholarship, and in order to do that, I would have to play well," Carpenter said. "I haven't got the scholarship yet, but it's on the way."

Coach Sonny Randle said Carpenter will have a scholarship as soon as the athletic department can get one for him.

Carpenter said he doesn't have much of a problem combining football with academics.

"It's difficult, but not very difficult. I have 15 hours now, and I will have 18 next semester," he said. "It is hard when you are gone for trips, because you miss that day in class."

Carpenter said he is taking classes in the college of business but his major is still undecided.

He said football is more like a career now than high school football was because it is more time-consuming.

"I figured it out once, and football takes up about six hours a day, not including study hall, which is two," he said. "The reason it's like a career is because it's more time consuming, but it's still not work - it's fun."

Carpenter describes his personality as "somewhat introverted."

"I'm quiet; I spend a lot of time with myself," he said. "I guess they call that an introvert, don't they? I'm not that bad, really."

In the off-season, Carpenter said he likes to play basketball.

"I could have gone to some Division II schools and played basketball, but I chose football because with basketball I would have ended up paying for four years and I would have never been able to get a scholarship."

"If you come to a school where they offer football scholarships, then you can get one, so that is why I played college football," he said. "Plus, I like football."

Carpenter said he likes all sports. "I like baseball a lot," he said. "I like to watch it and play it, but it wasn't a major interest in high school. I did play it my freshman year, but after that I decided to concentrate on two sports."

Carpenter said he became interested in sports through his father.

"My interest was developed from my dad," he said. "He was a pretty good football player in high school, but he didn't go much farther than that. He is just really a big sports nut, and that is how I got my interest."

Carpenter decided to come to Marshall and walk-on in July, after he was contacted by Coach Bob Pruett, who saw him play in an all-star game.

"I played in the Virginia All-Star game at defensive back, but I was listed in the program as a quarterback, since that is what I played in high school," he said. "Coach Pruett saw me play and he had lost his quarterbacks, so he called me a couple of days afterwards and asked me if I wanted to play. I came and visited and they told me all the scholarships had been given out, but I decided to walk on."

Carpenter said his high school career at Osborne Park High School in Manassas was a lot like his college career has been so far.

"I came in as a freshman and started in the fourth or fifth game," he said.

Carpenter said he likes playing football at Marshall. "Once I made the adjustment just to college life, I really began to enjoy playing Marshall football," he said. "It is a lot tougher and more time consuming, but the major difference is the travel. The caliber of athletes I am up against is another thing that changed."

Carpenter secured the starting role in this Saturday's game against Western Carolina. In last weekend's 17-10 win over Appalachian State he scored the tying touchdown and passed for 161 yards. He has completed 37 of 80 passes for 511 yards and thrown two touchdown passes. He has also thrown three interceptions and has rushed for two touchdowns. Carpenter has started in two Marshall games, and played for the majority of the VMI game.

He said he doesn't feel much pressure as a freshman starter. "I feel the pressure, but I don't think it gets to me," he said. "Most of the pressure is game pressure. My job is to move the offense, and my pressure is through reading defenses and checking off blitzes and things like that."

Carpenter said the team is getting better all the time. "We have a lot of potential," he said. "Hopefully these last few games will overflow into next year and give us momentum to start things into motion."

Carpenter said he has improved since he has come to Marshall. "I have learned a lot, and I am eager to learn much more," he said. "I throw more now, because we have a lot of good receivers."

He said his passing has improved also. "I don't know if I am throwing the ball better, but I am more on target. I am improving in that way."

"I am starting to develop long-range goals I think, but I'm not sure what they are yet. I think about them a lot though," he said. "Of course, I have goals for the team."

"For the team, I definitely want us to have a winning season in the four years that I am here," he said. "I want people to know where Marshall is as far as football goes. I want people to learn."

She knows what it takes to win

By Scott Andrews

Judy Southard knows what it takes to win. She wants to teach Marshall's Thundering Herd what it takes to win.

Southard, Marshall's first year women's basketball coach, is the first full-time coach in the 12-year history of the program.

A native of Columbia, S.C., Southard, 33 is entering her 11th year in a coaching capacity. She started fresh out of college in 1970 as an assistant high school coach. Two years later, she became the head coach at West Florence H.S. in Columbia and led that team to a record of 89-19 in her five years there. The team made it to the state playoffs all five years.

In 1976 her team won the South Carolina AAAA girls' title with a 24-1 record and Southard was named "Coach of the Year." In 1977 Southard, who also coached tennis, was named "Girls Sports Coach of the Year" by the South Carolina Athletic Coaches Association.

Southard then moved on to the University of Tennessee where she served as an assistant to Pat Head-Summit. Tennessee had a 32-4 record that year and was ranked first in the nation among women's teams.

Southard then spent three years as head coach at the University of Tennessee at Martin, where she coached a rebuilding program similar to Marshall's.

"I've always been a sports oriented person," Southard said. "I'm the oldest of three daughters and my dad was always dragging me out to the tennis courts to play with him."

"I'm a very competitive person. As a young person I played all the sports that were offered and I continued to play volleyball, tennis, and basketball through college. I always wanted to go into physical education and coaching."

Southard graduated from Coker (S.C.) College in 1970 and earned her masters degree in physical education from the University of Tennessee in 1978.

She said she came to Marshall because she thought it was a good opportunity and was impressed with the school, its facilities, and the community.

"I'm very impressed with the university itself," Southard said. "I like Huntington and the geographic area. I was in a smaller city before and I like getting back into a larger one. And Henderson Center is a fine facility. We can build an outstanding program here at Marshall."

Southard said that this is her busiest time of the year, but when she has time she likes to relax by reading and doing needlework.

"My parents, sisters and their families all still live in South Carolina. We enjoy water sports," Southard said. "I love to swim and water ski and spend time outdoors in the summer months."

Judy Southard

Southard said her future plans include building a nationally ranked team at Marshall. She said she enjoys working with young people and would like to coach five to 10 more years, then get into another area of athletics.

Women's basketball team satisfied after scrimmage

By Leskie Pinson

Coach Judy Southard is hoping for a successful combination of young and old as a new era in women's basketball is ushered in at Marshall University.

"We have six players returning and six new players," Southard said. "And having a very structured system, as I do, it is important that they all learn the system."

Southard was speaking in Huntington's Brewer Gym immediately following an intrasquad scrimmage that was the Herd's first public appearance.

But as the players pulled on their sweats there was a clear sense of satisfaction. Southard reflected this feeling.

"I'm pleased with the way we played," she said. "Things were a little ragged in the first 10 minutes but I think that may have been a case of the jitters."

"I saw some good things out there. One of the things I saw in watching the game films from last year was a lack of rebounding positioning," she said.

"But when the shots went up tonight there was some pretty good maneuvering under the boards."

Some shots that went up didn't yield any rebounds. One player with a particularly hot hand was newcomer Barbara McConnell. Playing on the winning team, McConnell was able to pump in quite a few long-range perimeter jumpers, including three consecutive in the late going.

Though in her first year in the green-and-white, McConnell is the most familiar with Coach Southard's system. She played under Southard for three years at the University of Tennessee-Martin. She is one of two seniors on the squad, the other being veteran Deanna Carter. The 5-foot-3 McConnell was the picture of wide-eyed enthusiasm when asked if she was eager for the season to start. "Sure, we're all ready to play," she said.

McConnell was listed at only 50 percent healthy this night as she was nursing a badly burned hand. "It (a blister) burst on me during the game," she said, looking the pink area that covered the entire back of her right hand. Embarrassed, she admitted she had a kitchen accident.

"I was frying bacon and tried to pour grease into a jar. It spilled all over my hand."

When asked if she learned anything from that experience, she smiled and said, "Yeah, don't use a jar."

With the statement McConnell may have summed up the goals of the Herd this season. A learning experience, while managing to get the job done.

Hoop ticket sales 'rapid' says manager

By Randy Rorrer

They may not be as much in demand as a front row seat to a Rolling Stones concert, but judging from their rapid sale, a ticket to the Marshall vs. WVU basketball game is also a valuable commodity.

Single-game tickets to the Dec. 5 contest went on over-the-counter sale to the public Monday at 9 a.m. and were sold out at 9:30 a.m.

This may be a little misleading since the athletic ticket office had been accepting mail orders for tickets since Nov. 2.

The only ways to get tickets to the game are to be a full-time Marshall student, a guest of a Marshall student, or buy a season ticket.

Athletic Ticket Manager Joe W. Wortham, said there are still approximately 500 season tickets available to the general public.

Wortham said season tickets cost $93 or $77 to the general public, depending where the seats are, and $54 to Marshall employees.

Wortham also announced the procedures for Marshall students to obtain tickets to basketball games.

The procedures are similar to last year's with the exception of a new plan for student groups to obtain tickets.

Students will be assigned to one of three priority groups by the first letter in their last name. Those groups will be students with last names A-F, G-N and O-Z. Each student group will also be placed in one of these alphabetical groups.

Rules constituting a student groups are as follows:

1) There must be a minimum number of 10 members, maximum 30. Organizations can have more than one group per organization.

2) Groups must be a recognized student organization or all members of the same dorm floor.

3) Rosters will be turned in and checked against student activities rosters or computer read outs for dorms. Students can only sign up with one group. Rosters will be turned in to the Student Government Association Office, checked and a copy sent to the ticket office.

4) A card will be issued to the spokesperson of each group which will give them permission to pick up the tickets on the given day. This person must have the activity cards of all members of their group wishing to receive a ticket for that game. The cards will be checked with the roster and punched before reception of the tickets.

5) Four guest tickets may be bought per group but the number of tickets per group including guests can still not exceed the amount designated by the roster. The total number of guest tickets will not exceed 150 for any game.

6) A random drawing prior to the season will determine what alphabetical group each group, not organization, will be placed in.

Some rules that students should keep in mind when picking up their tickets are that each student must present his valid I.D. and current activity card to pick up a ticket.

Students will also be allowed to pick up three additional tickets for other Marshall students at the same time provided the other student's valid I.D. and current activity cards are presented also.

A valid I.D. card will also be required along with the ticket to be admitted to a game. Wortham said this is to make sure student tickets are being used by students.

Christmas jobs waiting for students at mall

By Gina Brooks

With Christmas 43 days away, Huntington Mall businesses, like the North Pole, need extra help, said Reginald A. Spencer, placement director.

Spencer said he and graduate assistant Bill Yeater have contacted all businesses in the mall, and approximately 250 seasonal jobs are available.

"We have been trying to develop Christmas job ideas by going to the mall and talking with people in management," Spencer said.

Most of the jobs pay federal minimum wage of $3.35 an hour, he said, and some also offer commission and employee discounts.

Spencer said most of the businesses contacted need help from Thanksgiving weekend until Christmas, while some need permanent part-time help.

"After Christmas," Spencer said, "a part-time job might be part of the picture."

Students must be available evenings and weekends, and have transportation, he said.

The Career Services and Placement Center has contacted area employers during previous Christmas seasons, Spencer said, but the Huntington Mall is "a unique situation."

With many stores under one roof, he said, jobs are easier to locate.

Available jobs are listed at the Career Services and Placement Center in Prichard Hall.

Spencer said he and Yeater plan to contact other area shopping centers, such as the Pea Ridge Mall and Eastern Heights, and larger downtown stores for more Christmas jobs for students.
