Adams elected Student Senate president

By Ruth Giachino

A Summersville junior was elected president of Student Senate in its meeting, Tuesday.

Kyle "Kookie" Adams, off-campus senator, will serve as new senate president. Adams succeeds former senate president Ronna G. McClure, Logan senior.

Adams has served in Student Senate since the spring of 1981, when he was elected to his off-campus seat. He served as parliamentarian for three months before being appointed vice president of Student Senate. Adams was re-elected to his senate office this year.

Adams said he plans to get greater participation by increasing the number of available senate seats. "I hope to increase senate involvement," he said.

"I want to encourage them (Student Government) to increase the number of senators to help ease the problems and to help with the different committees," he said.

Adams also said he plans to maintain the Minority Task Force. "The problems of minority students should be listened to so that something can be done to help them."

The task force is set up to discover the needs of minority students, increase minority student involvement in Student Government, and initiate programs to help them, he said.

Joseph Caro, Huntington sophomore, was elected senate vice president.

Caro said he would also like to see more participation and involvement from the senators than there had been in the past.

Joanna I. Tabit, Charleston junior, was elected parliamentarian, which was her most recent position in the senate.

Victoria L. Baker, Bluefield junior and residence hall senator, was elected senate historian, and Ronald Salmons, Hamlin junior and commuter senator, was elected the sergeant-at-arms.

Student Senate OKs Fraley appointments

By Kevin Thompson

Two Student Government cabinet appointments made by Student Body President Jennifer K. Fraley, have been accepted by Student Senate.

Lori A. Fulks, South Point, Ohio, sophomore, was approved as Director of Off-Campus Housing and Commuter Affairs, and Charles W. "Chip" Coughlan, White Sulphur Springs sophomore, is Student Government business manager.

Fulks and Coughlan were the only applicants for their positions, Fraley said.

Fraley said she did not advertise the availability of the positions because she did not want to be accused of choosing her friends in favor of other applicants.

She said it was crucial that those offices be filled quickly because there are apartment listings Fulks must make and the Student Government budget must be completed by Coughlan before Student Senate's special session next Thursday.

"Those offices are very complicated and they need to be people I can work with," Fraley said.

Fraley said she plans to advertise the availability of the other positions. They will be publicized through radio spots on WMUL, a letter to the Parthenon editor, a paid advertisement in the Parthenon and posters in Corbly Hall, Smith Hall and Twin Towers cafeteria, she said.

Fraley said 16 seats on faculty committees, Director of Publication, Chief of Staff and several administrative aid positions are available. Five positions on the Student Alumni Board also may become available.

Marshall student placed on probationary suspension

By Vaughn Rhudy and Kevin Thompson

A Marshall university student has been placed on probationary suspension for allegedly voting twice in the April 7th Student Government elections.

Bruce Carter, Huntington senior, said Rita Mann, coordinator of student conduct and student life, placed him on probationary suspension after meeting with him Thursday to discuss two complaints filed against him.

He said Mann told him this would be his only punishment if he pleaded guilty to voting twice.

In a Student Court hearing last week, Carter said he had voted twice in the election to prove faults in the election system.

Robert W. Bennett, South Charleston freshman and head election commissioner, filed one of the complaints with the Student Conduct and Welfare Committee charging Carter with dishonesty under the Code of Conduct.

Bennett charged that Carter voted with his ID and activity card at the polling place in the Memorial Student Center, and he then voted again on a challenge ballot at the polling place in Corbly Hall.

The election commission did not invalidate his ballot because he is a full-time student, Bennett said.

Carter said Mann told him that she first went before a Judicial Executive Committee to determine if enough evidence existed to file charges. He said Mann told him there were, but that she had been granted the power to determine the punishment if he wished.

Carter said the probationary suspension will be for the remainder of this semester and then for three more months of the next term he attends, Marshall. He said all this means is that if he is found guilty of another misconduct during the probationary period, he could be expelled from Marshall.

According to Carter, Mann told him he had the right to appeal her decision to the Judicial Board. However, Carter said he will not appeal Mann's decision because he might get a harsher punishment.

Construction causes loss of 48 parking spaces

By Carol Anne Turner

Forty-eight university parking spaces in Area C will no longer be used because of construction on the Science Building, according to Marshall's parking coordinator.

Bonnie J. Lytle said the addition to the Science Building will extend into part of Area C parking lot. The parking spaces, located behind the building, have been lost permanently because of the construction, she said.

Twenty spaces are left on the east end of Area C between Harris Hall and the Science Building. The parking office will police these parking spaces on a regular basis, Lytle said.

The 48 parking spaces that were lost were leased to staff, faculty members and handicapped students. A number of these permit holders were moved to Area F, across from Smith Hall. The majority was moved to Area G, a recently-extended area across from the Henderson Center.

The loss of the parking spaces did not create a problem for parking officials because they knew it was coming and had time to prepare, Lytle said.

She said only construction workers are being allowed in the area. Because part of Area C has been closed off, there was some concern as to whether emergency vehicles would have access to the Science Building, Buskirk Hall and Harris Hall. Safety officials said access routes exist, and if necessary, the fence would be broken through.

MSC board adopts new voting rules, elects officers

By Jim Hooker

Students will have more of a say in running Memorial Student Center under new voting rules adopted this week.

The Memorial Student Center Governing Board Wednesday voted unanimously to increase the number of students voting from six to eight members. This gives students an eight to five majority over faculty/staff votes. Previously, two non-voting student positions existed.

Board secretary Brian Machtinger, Bricktown, N.J., junior, said, "I don't want the non-voting student members to be intimidated."

Giving the vote to the two non-voting members would give those members a stronger voice, he said.

However, Ann Johnson, outgoing vice chairperson and Ravenswood senior, said she saw no problems with the current system.

She said the non-voting members often voted in the past when voting members were absent.

Board members agreed they will now change the board's constitution to include the new voting rule and a change in the quorum from three to four student members.

In another matter, the board discussed a Student Senate request to lower the weekend rental rate for the Multi-Purpose Room from $100 to $35.

Sen. Michael L. Queen, who presented the proposal before the Senate, said he drew up the resolution, passed unanimously by the Senate Tuesday, at the request of the black student organizations on campus.

Queen, Clarksburg freshman, said the blacks made their request because the Multi-Purpose room is the only place on campus where they can hold functions and fund raisers.

The resolution asks the student center board to "keep the rate for the multi-purpose room at $35 during the entire week for recognized student organizations."

Earlier in the semester the student center board changed the weekday/night rate from $100 to $35 to accommodate the financial needs of smaller student organizations.

However, the current rate, which runs on a trial basis until December, still applies to all student organizations.

Dr. Maureen Milicia, associate professor of speech and student center board member, said the board would review the resolution next semester because Wednesday's meeting was the last one for this semester.

The board also elected new officers for next year. Machtinger was elected chairman; Tim T. Howard, Huntington sophomore who stepped down from the chairmanship because of increased obligations, was elected vice chairman for next year; and Charles W. "Chip" Coughlan, White Sulphur Springs sophomore, was elected secretary.

Committee to review final HERF requests

By Mona Walters

Two final requests for Higher Education Resource Fee money will be considered next week by the HERF Advisory Committee, while monies awarded earlier in the semester are at various stages of distribution, according to Dr. Nell C. Bailey, dean of student affairs.

The Office of Student Activities has requested $122. Bailey said the money would be used to purchase an instrument to measure personality preferences to aid in leadership development seminars and workshops.

Ray Welty, director of student housing, has submitted a $200 request. This money would be used to start a library at University Heights on domestic concerns, Bailey said. The library would include books on family planning, child care and development and domestic relations.

A total of 26 projects were funded this year through the $11,000 student affairs HERF allocation to distribute for student services, Bailey said.

Financial matters have been completed for 10 projects. Other project awards are awaiting results on bids or still are being processed through the Office of Finance and Administration in Charleston because of the budget freeze, Bailey said.

Funds left after all HERF awards have been completed will be carried over for distribution next year, Bailey said.

FOR THE RECORD

Association playing vital role at MU

As graduation is drawing near for many seniors, it comes to mind that many of us no longer will be students of Marshall. We instead will be alumni of Marshall.

What that means will have to be seen in the future. But for the people who are alumni now and are members of the Marshall University Alumni Association, the future is wrapped up in the present. And the present looks pretty good from an involvement standpoint.

One worthwhile activity the Alumni Association is involved with now is recruiting high school students to come to Marshall for their educations. Alumni should be active in bettering the university, and recruitment of students is definitely a step in a positive direction.

A dinner was sponsored April 8 by the Alumni Association chapter in Beckley to let people there know a little about Marshall and to discuss college life in general.

An annual scholarship dinner Thursday was sponsored by the Logan chapter of the Alumni Association. According to Alumni Affairs Director Karen C. Thomas, every dollar contributed to the scholarship will be matched with $9 by the chapter's financial aid program to help with educational costs.

Recruiting students is just one of many ways members of Marshall's Alumni Association deserve recognition as a dynamic force within the university. The association every year is actively involved in Homecoming festivities, student scholarships and helping to plan cultural activities.

The association is planning an open house at Marshall for graduates the weekend of May 7. Graduates will have an opportunity to come back to visit different departments within their alma mater.

All this is not to mention the money the association generates for the university. Through fundraising and donations, association members help the university in the financial arena, an arena that certainly can use some help these days.

The group, in addition to serving Marshall educationally and institutionally, serves itself. Members get together for goal post parties after ballgames and travel together on cruises and road trips.

The Alumni Association is certainly a group for Marshall students and faculty to be proud of. More importantly, it is a group we should appreciate.

We encourage the association to remain an active segment of the university and we challenge them to grow even stronger.

Concert promises good time for students

Dear Editor,

On Friday, April 23, an event will take place that many students look forward to -- the annual Spring Concert put on by the Office of Student Activities. It is an event that has been planned since early November and features a variety of entertainment including two fantastic out-of-state bands and two of the area's finest acts.

There are several reasons for the production of this six-hour concert at Ritter Park:

The headlining band is Orleans, who has had several top 40 hits ("Still the One," "Dance with Me," "Let There Be Music," to name a few).

The other out-of-state band is the Todd Hobin Band which is currently touring the eastern seaboard and performs high energy rock'n'roll.

The two opening acts, Nuthin' Fancy Band, a southern rock band, and Joe Bartges, a good-time folk musician, are the local acts which for the last two semesters have drawn the biggest crowds in the Coffeehouse and were picked on these merits.

This is a professionally-produced concert which was not "thrown together" at the last minute and all of the acts are very professional in their approach.

Finally, this concert is free to all students with ID and activity card. There is no soliciting of donations because the only "purpose" to this concert is to have a good time. After all, with all the pressures of school, work, etc., isn't taking off an afternoon to bask in the sun, hear good music, and have a good time worth it? Marshall students, you owe it to yourselves!

Sincerely yours,
Max Lederer
Student Activities President

Headline sensational

Dear Editor,

I was dismayed by the headline "Most Medical Graduates to Leave State" in your April 14 issue. Fortunately, the accompanying article in its truthfulness could not corroborate the negativism of its sensational headline. It is unfortunate that Marshall cannot depend upon its own Parthenon for more supportive journalism.

Athletic Committee responds . . .

. . . to ad hoc committee report

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the report of the Athletic Committee in response to the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Faculty Committee on Football. The Parthenon is printing the report as a public service for those who have not had access to the information.

Athletic Committee Report to the Faculty in response to the recommendation's of the Ad Hoc Faculty Committee on Football.

This report was prepared by a subcommittee of the Athletic Committee consisting of Dr. Mary Marshall (Chairman), Dr. Steven Hatfield, and David Sommerville, and adopted by the Committee as amended on April 16, 1982.

The members of the Marshall University Athletic Committee commend the members of the Ad Hoc Faculty Committee on Football for their pursuit of information concerning football and its future status at Marshall University.

Upon examination of the Ad Hoc Committee's 19 recommendations submitted March 13, 1982, we found that several do not require further action by the Athletic Committee. However, we do feel the necessity to respond to those recommendations that are unfeasible, require further study, or need additional documented commentary.

The first three recommendations concerning (1) the retention of intercollegiate football, (2) remaining in the Southern Conference, and (3) moving to Division 1AA from Division 1A were acceptable as presented.

In response to Recommendation 4 opposing any "... increase in financial support of varsity football which is based upon appropriated tax monies . . .," we must state that it is the intent of the Athletic Committee and Athletic Director to establish a 1982-83 budget with no appropriated tax monies for the football program.

To Recommendation 5 calling for "...a serious and in-depth investigation into the means for reducing the total amount of appropriated tax monies allotted to football, ..." we must state that it is the intent of the Athletic Committee and will continue to be the intent, to review all the Athletic Department's expenditures, including football, to assure the best allocation of funds.

The Athletic Committee supports the concept contained in Recommendation 6 that savings in football be allocated to the non-revenue sports. The Ad Hoc Faculty Committee requested in Recommendation 7 that the football budget reflect "immediately and continuously" the movement to Division 1AA through a reduced allocation of funds. If one accepts the basic premise offered in the first recommendation, the Athletic Department should maintain the same percentage allocated to football to offset the effects of inflation.

In response to Recommendation 8 which called for an investigation into the means for reducing the total budget allocated to football through suggesting a minimum of seven factors, we respond thusly:

A. The Athletic Department has eight of the nine football coaches permitted by the NCAA on the current payroll. With the exception of two or three colleges in the Southern Conference, all employ eight football coaches.

B. Through such factors as improved scheduling of away football games and using University vehicles for team transportation, expenses for travel could be reduced. Attempts have been made to reduce these costs during the 1981-82 season through making fewer trips by air and using chartered buses, all of which will continue in the 1982-83 season.

C. Efforts have been made during the past year to reduce the amount of money spent for long distance telephone calls. A system will be implemented this summer to reduce those charges. The Athletic Department will have its own long-distance WATS line and West Virginia centrex dialing system. Phone calls will be made on these lines.

D. In moving to a lower division, the number of football scholarships was reduced from 95 to 75 automatically. The Athletic Committee is requesting that Marshall University pursue a further reduction of football scholarships by the NCAA for Division 1AA institutions.

E. In the recommendation pertaining to the elimination of graduate assistant allocations to the Athletic Department, Dr. Snyder informed the Athletic Committee that an average of two tuition waivers have been granted this year through non-state appropriation. Additionally, the Department of HPER assists the Athletic Department by providing two additional graduate assistantships. It should be mentioned at this point that it is imperative that the two HPER graduate assistantships be retained to assist with the Department of HPER athletic training curriculum, which functions cooperatively with the Athletic Department.

F. Dr. Snyder has presented to the Athletic Committee a complimentary ticket policy which will be discussed at a future meeting.

G. The recommendation calling for the elimination of practices providing preferential treatment to football players will be discussed in Recommendation 9.

Recommendation 9 requested that the Athletic Committee examine practices understood to provide preferential treatment to athletes.

A. The Athletic Committee recognizes that preferential treatment is provided to athletes in the following areas:

1. athletic dormitories,
2. special training tables,
3. providing players with complimentary tickets, and
4. staying at local motels the evenings before home games

B. The Athletic Committee does not believe that preferential treatment is provided to athletes in the following areas:

1. "under the table" gifts;
2. businessmen selling players items at reduced costs;
3. wages paid for part-time work when little or no work is done; and,
4. special treatment when players violate University rules or local municipal ordinances.

If there is evidence that preferential treatment is being provided to the athlete as per "B" above, it should be submitted to the Athletic Committee.

C. The Athletic Committee will take steps to prevent preferential treatment to athletes, or eliminate their occurrence in areas that cannot be justified.

Recommendation 10 stated that "... serious attention be given to the total Athletic Department's budget and the pressures used in developing and maintaining it . . ." The Athletic Committee recommends that an itemized budget including a specific breakdown of receipts and expenditures be submitted to the Committee. The Athletic Department is working presently toward this end.

In response to Recommendation 11 concerning an annual audit of the Department of Athletic's budget by an independent auditing agency, Dr. Bailey informed the Committee that the University has an excellent internal auditor, and that the University would have an additional expense if the athletic budget were audited by an independent audit, and would like to see this audit commence within the 1982-83 fiscal year and be continued every two years.

Concerning Recommendation 12, the Committee agrees that the maximum should not be the minimum in regard to scholarships and staff. At the present time, the football coaching staff has been reduced by one. Nine coaches are permitted to be employed under NCAA mandate.

In Recommendation 13, requesting the Athletic Committee to investigate possible improprieties concerning the use of government funds for athletes and monetary kickbacks to a certain coach, we must state that at the present time the Athletic Director is investigating this matter and will report his findings to the Athletic Committee. The information gathered thus far does not indicate a violation of NCAA rules.

The Athletic Committee accepts the commendation by the Ad Hoc Faculty Committee on Football offered in Recommendation 14. The Committee wishes to point out that retention of an athletic scholarship is governed by more restrictive conditions than those governing non-scholarship students.

The Athletic Committee agrees with Recommendation 15 in that all students should be treated the same for violating norms of campus behavior or transgressing University regulations. The Athletic Department and Dean of Student's office reaffirmed their support of this recommendation.

The suggestion offered in Recommendation 16 concerning the Athletic Committee's examination of making the purchase of season football tickets voluntary on the part of students is not feasible, since there are 11 different allocations from student activity fees.

Concerning Recommendation 17, the Athletic Committee does not feel it is responsible for supervising the football program. We do not feel that we should be involved in the everyday operation of the Athletic Department.

In response to Recommendation 18, the Athletic Committee is not aware of any pressures on faculty by anyone to secure an improved grade for a football player or any other athlete. Further, the Committee has not been apprised formally of exceptions made for athletes that are not made normally for all students.

The Athletic Committee considered the suggestion offered in Recommendation 19 "... that the Athletic Committee investigate the possibility of carrying out the survey of Alumni attitude toward football and contribution's to athletics which the Ad Hoc Faculty Committee on Football formulated but was unable to complete because of lack of time and funds." The Athletic Committee sees no benefit for conducting such a survey.

Dr. Case moved the adoption of the subcommittee's report as amended, and Dr. Hatfield seconded the motion. Motion approved.

The Athletic Committee would like to give a special thanks to Dr. Marshall, Dr. Hatfield and Mr. Sommerville for their effort in preparing the report of the subcommittee.

Reasons for college attendance varySome come for better life, others have no choice

EDITOR'S NOTE: This concludes the four-part series on the value of a college education today. The article looks at students' reactions to college and deals with the financial outlook for higher education.

By Pam Owens

Different people place different values on a college education.

National research shows that today's college student is going to have a better life, according to Dr. Nell C. Bailey, dean of student affairs.

She said this is contrary to college's original purpose: "an education for education's sake."

James W. Harless, director of the Office of Admissions, said some students come to college because they have no other options. He said they are sometimes pressured by parents or forced by the state of the economy to continue their education.

However, regardless of why a person attends college, the decision to enter an institution of higher education is a personal choice, Reginald A. Spencer, director of the Office of Career Services and Placement, said.

Mona L. Walters, Parkersburg junior, said college offers students job preparation skills, and provides them opportunities to gradually break away from home and meet people they would not get to meet otherwise.

"College broadens your horizons," Walters, a journalism public relations major and member of Public Relations Student Society of America and part-time employee for the attorney for students, said.

She said college forces her to budget her time better.

As a student who works and is involved in extra-curricular activities, "You don't get to goof off as much, and when you know you have a project due, you can't wait until the last minute because you're not sure of what your other commitments will be demanding of you at that time," Walters said.

Sandra K. Burris, Hurricane senior and former president of the Panhellenic Council, said she hopes to get a college education that will get her a job she will be happy with the rest of her life.

"Involvement in college organizations has helped me overcome shyness," Burris said. "I'm not as shy as I was before I got involved with campus life."

Even with the personal benefits of college life, money plays a role in deciding if and where a student will attend college.

Tuition fees are attractive to students who consider attending Marshall, according to James W. Harless, director of the Office of Admissions.

The average college cost at Marshall during the 1981-82 academic year was $2,770 for in-state students who lived on campus and $3,770 for out-of-state students living on campus, he said.

The average college cost was $770 for in-state commuters and $1,770 for out-of-state commuters, he said.

Expenses include room, board, tuition and books, Harless said. The estimated costs do not include personal expenses, he said.

It is cheaper for Ohio students to come to Marshall than to attend Ohio State or Ohio University, even considering that those students have to pay out-of-state tuition to attend school here, he said.

Although Marshall fees are lower than many other colleges and universities, students' costs are increasing gradually, Harless said. For example, out-of-state tuition four years ago was $500, compared with $770 for academic year 1981-82, he said.

Edgar W. Miller, director of the Office of Financial Aid, said the proposed financial aid cutbacks by the Reagan Administration, if they followed to the letter, would place a great burden on the middle-class.

Students will be less willing to take the risk of attending college because the only way they may be able to finance their education is through loans, which have high interest rates, Miller said.

This is particularly true in rural Appalachia where a lot of the students are first generation college students, he said.

Provost Olen E. Jones Jr. said he thinks higher education is in real trouble.

"I think the financial aid aspect of it and the cut-back is going to be devastating to higher education, regardless of what they say in Washington," Jones said.

Eight to contest for Miss MU

By Jeannette Dillon

The title of Miss Marshall University will be up for grabs Sunday with eight women scheduled to compete.

The pageant, sponsored by the Student Government Association, will be at 4 p.m. in the Club Pompeii at the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

Two former Miss West Virginias will be present. Debbie Davis, the 1979 winner, will be emcee and Candy Cohen, the reigning titlist, will provide entertainment and crown the winner. Both Davis and Cohen are also former Miss Marshalls.

Cohen, who won last year's Miss Marshall pageant, noted that the last three Miss West Virginias have been Marshall students. "It would be great to make it four in a row," she said.

Campus ugly men to conclude battle for plaque today

By Susan Monk

The Ugly Man on Campus Contest sponsored by the Alpha Phi Omega National Coed Service fraternity ends today.

A photograph of each ugly man is taken and displayed in Memorial Student Center, then students make a donation and select the ugliest man. The donations will be received from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today.

The money will go to an autistic children's organization, while the amount received for each contestant will be counted to tabulate a winner.

"The organization sponsoring the winning ugly man will win a plaque, and the money will be donated in the name of the winning organization," Mary Helen McMorran, co-chairperson of the contest, said.

"We try to make as much money as possible for organizations like the autistic children and have fun doing it," McMorran said.

The ugly man contest is similar to others held across the nation by ATO chapters.

"Around six organizations will participate," McMorran said. "We limited it to fraternities to make it easier for us, since this is the first year we have held it on campus."

Concert for peace Saturday

By Lisa McDonald

Rock and new wave bands will perform Saturday in Ritter Park Amphitheatre as part of a spring peace concert.

The concert, which begins at noon, is sponsored by AWARE, Allies Waged Against Radioactive Environments.

The Audiomatiks, The Spread, The Jackals, Mooshy and the Slugs, and Duck Bill and the Platypi will perform.

Tickets are $2 and may be purchased from any AWARE member, or at the door.

The concert will conclude AWARE's involvement in the national Ground Zero Week, a week planned to educate the public on the dangers of nuclear war.

"We just want everyone to come out and have fun," Laurie R. McKeown, Capon Springs graduate student and AWARE member, said.

"We are just hoping to break even," McKeown said. "This is not a money-making project. It is just a day to relax and enjoy."

Campus library: It's a real hot spot

By Kim Metz

Some students are getting hot under the collar in the James E. Morrow Library and the director of university libraries wants something done about it.

Temperatures in the library have been above normal and some students and faculty members have been getting headaches and become nauseated from the heat, Dr. Kenneth T. Slack said.

Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president of administrations, said the air conditioning in the buildings have not been running because "we want to conserve the few remaining dollars we have."

The budget for utilities was cut by about $50,000 this fiscal year because of the state spending freeze, Egnatoff said.

The library and Smith Hall operate under the same heating and cooling system, D. B. Sargent, mechanical foreman, said. The system's cooling mechanism is located in Smith Hall.

Slack said the system does not appear to be designed for Huntington's changing weather patterns.

"In the ten years I've been here at Marshall the temperatures in the library have always been either too cold or too hot," he said.

The the high temperatures in the library are a discomfort to students trying to study, Slack said.

Sara B. Staats, a staff librarian, said she received a phone call from President Robert B. Hayes Monday evening inquiring about the temperatures in the library.

She said Hayes implied students had called him at home complaining about the temperatures.

Staats said she did not have a thermostat, but said the temperatures were "extremely hot."

Not only do the warm temperatures cause discomfort, but they also could damage the library's materials, Slack said.

Excessive heat results in a shorter life span of book paper and makes microfilm brittle, he said.

Temperatures are not as much of a problem as stagnant air, Slack said.

He recommended to the director of administrative services several changes that may help remedy the situation in the library.

He suggested that windows on each floor be equipped with steel grids so they can be opened when necessary to create air movement. Windows presently are sealed shut.

Sargent said opening windows would cause air movement, but it would have little effect as far as cooling.

He also recommended the removal of florescent tubes in some of the light fixtures to reduce the electric bill and heat.

The library has an excessive amount of lighting, Sargent said. The fixtures contain two florescent light bulbs and said each fixture generates temperatures of 98 to 102 degrees.

"A whole row of florescent fixtures can raise the building's temperatures five to seven degrees," he said.

Slack also suggested fans be installed to create air flow.

The heating and cooling in the library is transmitted through tiny holes in the ceiling. Slack suggested these holes be unclogged to allow better air movement.

He also recommended a new cooling system be considered because the chilled air, which is forced through air pockets in the ceiling, counteracts with the florescent tubes, which produce heat.

Maintenance men check the 29 buildings on campus every morning at 6 a.m. to regulate temperatures. If the temperatures are 40 degrees or warmer, the boiler automatically kicks off. When temperatures are 55 degrees or cooler, the cooling system will not start, Sargent said.

During cooler and warmer months, temperatures are checked about four times a day in the library, Smith Hall and Corbly Hall.

with high college costs

Financial aid officials look ahead

Students to work, stay home, go public

Editor's note: This concludes the five-part series from the Associated Press on the costs of a college education. Today's article looks at what lies ahead for students in terms of college costs.

By Ben Olan

Average total expenses have soared 110 percent at private colleges and 95 percent at public colleges during the past nine years, a recent national survey disclosed.

In addition, the detailed study by the College Scholarship Service, revealed the 1981-82 average cost to be $6,885 at private four-year colleges and $3,873 at public four-year institutions. However, the survey also showed that aggregate costs at some of the nation's private colleges now approach, and sometimes exceed $12,000 for 1981-82. Total costs at the most expensive public colleges run about $6,000.

Total expenses were listed as tuition, fees, room and board, books and supplies, transportation and money for personal needs.

"By 1990, it will cost $20,000 a year to go to the larger private colleges," predicted Leo Kornfeld, former deputy commissioner of Student Federal Assistance. "Only the wealthy will be able to go to the best colleges. If there are further cutbacks in education, low income students will only attend community colleges."

Kornfeld's reaction to the curtailment of federal assistance to needy students last fall and additional cutbacks asked by the Reagan Administration recently is similar to others expressed by leading educators, financial aid directors and guidance counselors.

"With less money available, a student's options begin to dwindle," stressed Harold Higginbotham, Jr., director of financial aid at New York University. "We're likely to see more students living at home as opposed to being residential students. There will be no more fleeing the nest. Many students will go to less expensive schools. And then there is the group for which money has been an obstacle who will abandon education altogether."

"A great many students will go to less expensive colleges and take five and six years to graduate," forecasts Brett Lief of the New Jersey Board of Higher Education.

"More students will be working and going to college part-time, at night or on the weekends," said Joseph Sciamé of St. John's University, president of the New York Financial Aid Administrators Association. "The colleges will have to redirect funds to students that they had set aside to put up new buildings. They will also have to give students more time to pay."

John A. DiBlaggio, president of the University of Connecticut, is also among those who believe there will be a shift of large numbers of students from private to public colleges. He disclosed that his college's main campus in Storrs is attracting a growing number of middle income students who in the past would have attended local private institutions.

"My fear is that such a trend would tend to modify the character of public institutions by increasing the number of affluent students enrolled and by diminishing access to students from more disadvantaged backgrounds," he said.

Other colleges turned to various techniques in response to the millions of dollars of cuts in Federal aid. The University of Texas introduced a new employment assistance program that features a 24-hour telephone service listing current job opportunities. The same school doubled, to $2 million, the budget for its $1,500 Texas Achievement Awards, most of which go to minority students.

Cornell University's business school wrote to all former scholarship recipients, soliciting contributions for a low-interest loan fund. Columbia University last fall persuaded a foundation to cover $200,000 in reductions in Federal grants to disadvantaged students. At Pasadena City College in California the terms of a scholarship fund for second-year students were revised to permit work-study grants for first-year students.

Vanderbilt, in Nashville, Tenn., suggested that parents take out a second mortgage and explore other sources of revenue. "With inflation, the value of a family home has risen," said David K. Wilson, director of financial aid, "and if a family really wants to send their child to an institution such as Vanderbilt, then they have that security. Vanderbilt just can't keep increasing its level of student aid that it gives without bankrupting itself."

Joseph O'Neill, executive director of the Conference of Small Private Colleges, pointed to still another area in which colleges will be hard hit. "The number of high school graduates from 1990 to 1997 will be much smaller than it is now," he said. "In New York alone, the decline will be about 41 percent."

George H. Hanford, president of the College Board, a non-profit organization representing many colleges and universities, agreed with O'Neill. In a recent report, Hanford listed "the reality of a sharp decline (15 to 20 percent) in the number of 18-year-olds in the country" among the major challenges facing American education.

At this point, even if approved by Congress, there appears little likelihood that President Reagan's plan to transfer the responsibility for some educational services to the states will immediately affect the major post-secondary education programs.

However, another threat to the colleges comes from business and industry which have, in some instances, assumed the role historically associated with institutions of higher education. Companies are taking increasing responsibility for the education of their employees. In fact, business is offering more and more courses to the same group of adults the schools had been counting on to bolster their enrollments.

According to the American Society for Training and Development, business and industry now allocate more than $80 billion annually to education and training—almost as much as the yearly expenditure on the nation's publicly financed colleges and universities. / Another factor in the projected decline in college enrollments is likely to be "psychological," said Joseph Sciamé. "Many students need prodding. They have to be encouraged to go to college. If there is any reason they can get out of going, they'll point to the decrease in financial aid and say, 'I may not be able to get in.'"

Rowe sets record as Herd ups home mark

By Randy Rorrer

Marshall's baseball team has a new sultan of swat.

Jeff Rowe, the Herd's designated hitter, slammed his eighth homer of the season in a 12-1 win over Marietta College Wednesday, giving him 18 for his career, which is the school record.

Teammate David Jones said Rowe, a senior, had to overcome a lot of adversity to do it.

"He came out here and played today and his ankle is this big around," Jones said, indicating the size of a softball.

"It is not," Rowe said. "It's just a little blue."

"I'm really happy," Rowe said. "This was a goal of mine at the beginning of the season and I'm glad Coach (Jack) Cook kept me in the lineup."

After clubbing eight home runs as a sophomore, Rowe had an operation on an arm he broke playing a pick-up game of basketball as a freshman.

"The doctor took about an inch and a half off my elbow," Rowe said. "It hurt so bad last year I couldn't even hurt your hand if I tried when I shook it."

Rowe's home run output dwindled after the operation during his junior year. He homered only twice last year and batted only .241.

"Jeff stuck out last year even though he wasn't the same hitter he was before," Cook said.

So why did Cook stick with him so long this year when Rowe started the season with only one hit in his first 11 at-bats and was hitting in the .240s halfway through the season?

"Last year you could tell Jeff wasn't swinging the bat like he could," Cook said, "and I might have stuck with him too long then, but you could really tell a difference in this year's pre-season. He was swinging the bat like he did as a sophomore."

Rowe was hitting .315 going into Thursday's doubleheader with the University of Charleston and had 24 runs batted in.

The record-breaking homer cleared the left field fence by about 40 feet. It ties Rowe for season-high honors with sophomore Todd Sager. Both are one home run away from tying the single season home run mark of Glenn Verbage with nine in 1971.

Verbage had held the career home run mark also.

The win gave Marshall a 14-16 record.

The Herd plays Southern Conference foe Appalachian State in a Saturday doubleheader and Furman in a doubleheader Monday. All four games will be played at St. Cloud Commons.

Cook said he will probably pitch freshmen Robbie Pannell and Steve Verrone against Appalachian State and come back with Jeff Montgomery in the first game of Monday's doubleheader.

'Weird' injuries chase tracksters into SC meet

By Shawn Holliday

The men's track team had a typical day Tuesday.

Yes, it practiced, and yes, its depth was reduced once again, making it more difficult for it to attain its goal of a third place finish at the Southern Conference Outdoor Championships at Greenville, S.C., today and Saturday.

The men will compete without freshman Rob Alford, who was struck with another of what head coach Rod O'Donnell has called "weird" accidents that have plagued his team all year.

O'Donnell said Alford was demonstrating the shot put to somebody Tuesday night after practice and fell over the toe board and is now out for the season.

Alford sprained his ankle, stretched his Achilles tendon, strained his knee and cut his hand. "And he didn't even have the shot in his hand," O'Donnell said.

"If that's not indicative of some of the breaks we've had this season then I don't know what is," he said.

"That sure as hell doesn't happen very often to teams. He doesn't just sprain his ankle - he screws himself up so bad he can hardly walk."

Marshall finished fifth in 1981 and fourth in 1980 and 1979.

"I think it's going to be really difficult to get it unless we have a great day," O'Donnell said. "East Tennessee has great quality, and I think Furman and The Citadel will be battling for it, too."

O'Donnell said he expects East Tennessee, The Citadel and Marshall to compete for third place, and Virginia Military Institute or Appalachian State University to take the No. 1 position.

O'Donnell said the Herd's strengths are field events and sprints.

"We're pretty balanced going in," he said. "I think the big thing is just a matter of everybody that goes is going to have to do the job, because we don't have any depth."

O'Donnell said the loss of Alford will hurt since he was ranked about fifth in the Southern Conference in the discus.

"He was sure points," O'Donnell said. "He could've been anywhere from first to fifth."

Doug Hoke is also injured and will miss the meet. However, Joe Sassler, Brad Hansen, Jim Bishoff and Cris Gibson will run, O'Donnell said.

"I can't say they'll be 100 percent," he said. "To be 100 percent they would've had to practice all season - which they did not do. But as far as the way they're running right now, they're all right."

O'Donnell said he is entering everybody in everything he thinks they can do anything in.

"We haven't run a 4 x 100 relay team all season and we're going to do that," he said.

Tad Walden, Joe Sassler, John Gonzales and Cris Gibson will form the 400-meter relay team, O'Donnell said.

Also, Jim Bishoff will throw the javelin. "He's been throwing pretty well in practice," O'Donnell said. "We'll also run Hansen and (Rick) Reddecliff in the high hurdles, and Hansen will run the intermediates (hurdles)."

Golfers' fate in Schenkel key to SC tourney

By Tom Aluisse

The men's golf team's performance in the Chris Schenkel Invitational, which begins today, could be a key factor in the Herd's success in Monday's Southern Conference Tournament, Coach Joe Feaganes said.

"A high finish at the Schenkel would put us in a good frame of mind for our challenge at the conference tournament," he said. "It will be of great aid to our team to go to the conference with a positive attitude."

The 54-hole Schenkel, being played in Statesboro, Ga., concludes Sunday.

Marshall, which hasn't played in the Schenkel since 1978, is seeded 17th in the 18-team event. Oklahoma State, Georgia and Florida are the top three seeded teams.

Following its stay at Statesboro, the Herd goes to Matthews, N.C., for the 29th annual Southern Conference Tournament.

Marshall has never won the three-day tournament since it began playing in the event in 1977 and will be trying to end East Tennessee State's three-year reign as Southern Conference Champion. The Herd finished second to the Buccaneers last season.

Feaganes said the battle for the team championship would be between Marshall, ETSU and Furman.

"I think it will just depend on what team has the hot hand for three days," he said. "East Tennessee has depth, Furman has Brad Faxon, who can carry any team almost by himself, and I think we can compete with both these squads."

"Faxon has played the best of anyone so far, so if I had to pick an individual favorite for the tournament he'd be the one," Feaganes said. "But don't count out any of our kids. I think anyone is capable of a top 10 finish."

To make the 1982 all-Southern Conference squad, a top 10 finish is required. Marshall placed four on the team last season, two of whom are returning this season.

Mike Owens and Frank Mellet, the two returning all-conference players and Matt Cooke, Gary Rusnak and Greg Meade will compete for the Herd in both the Schenkel and Conference Tournaments. The five will be joined by Ty Neal at the Southern Conference Tournament, which takes the best five scores.

Owens and Mellet finished fourth and fifth, respectively, in last year's conference tournament.

Suspension

Also, Carter said he would rather accept Mann's punishment than have a formal hearing before members of the Student Conduct and Welfare Committee because he was concerned that people on the committee are also associated with Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and Student Government.

Carter said Bennett, who filed the charges, is an ATO pledge; Charles W. "Chip" Coughlan, White Sulfur Springs sophomore, Student Government business manager and member of the committee, is an ATO member; Robert Mayo, also a committee member, is a former ATO pledge; and Michele E. Hale, Huntington junior and committee member, is a member of the ATO little sister organization.

Carter also said the student members of the committee were appointed by Marc E. Williams, former Student Body President and an ATO.

Carter said another complaint was filed against him by David A. Kosar, graduate student from Wheeling. Carter said Kosar's complaint charged him with misrepresentation which allegedly occurred in a Student Court hearing last week.

According to Carter, Mann said Kosar decided to drop the charges and not push the issue.

Neither Kosar nor Mann could not be reached for comment.

Women to run into rough racing at EKU

By Jim Forbes

The women's track team is running into what Coach Arlene Stooke calls the toughest competition it will face this season today at Eastern Kentucky University's Becky Boone Relays at Richmond.

The meet begins Friday with trials at 1 p.m. and semifinals at 5:30 p.m. Events begin at 10 a.m. Saturday.

There will be 33 teams competing, including Purdue, the University of Kansas, Bowling Green, Southern Illinois, Eastern Michigan and Ohio State.

Stooke said this will be the toughest meet the girls compete in this year.
