Activity fee increase totals $8.20

Athletics may receive half of fee increase

By Terri Bargeloh

Intercollegiate athletics will receive $4.50 of the total $8.20 increase to be made in student activity fees if the Board of Regents approves the recommendation made by President Robert B. Hayes this week.

With athletics as the exception, Hayes approved all of the other fee increases suggested by the Committee to Study Student Activity Fees. However, the committee proposed a $1.25 increase for athletics while Hayes Tuesday passed on a $4.50 increase for BOR approval.

Hayes said the budgetary need of the athletic department warranted an increase beyond what the committee had considered before. The Athletic Committee had originally requested the committee approve a $5 increase in student fees.

"The needs of athletics are very apparent," he said. "They cannot balance the budget and maintain all the non-revenue sports. We must generate more money from all areas that contribute to athletic revenue or risk losing the quality of our division one programs."

In addition to the increase in student fees, Hayes said attempts will be made to obtain more money from the Big Green Scholarship Foundation and ticket prices for athletic events will be raised to generate more athletic funds.

He said a portion of the increase will go toward sustaining non-revenue sports. The Athletic Committee has made a substantial indication that non-revenue sports should be sustained, Hayes said.

"We are struggling all the time to keep revenue-producing sports at a competitive level," he said, "but at the same time maintain non-revenue athletics."

Included in the request to receive increases if the recommendation for athletics is approved are men's golf, women's tennis, volleyball, swimming, men's and women's track, baseball, men's tennis and soccer.

Another factor Hayes said went into his decision is the percentage of the athletic budget other colleges and universities receive from student fees. Athletic Director Lynn J. Snyder found in a study of nearby schools that they are receiving a much higher percentage of their budget from student fees.

The other groups who received Hayes' approval for student fee increases are The Escalade, et cetera, the Memorial Student Center, the Birke Art Gallery, The Parthenon and the Human Relations Center.

After BOR approval the following increase would be made: The Escalade, 5-cents; et cetera, 15-cents; the Memorial Student Center, $1.50; the Birke Art Gallery, 30-cents; The Parthenon, $1; and the Human Relations Center 70-cents.

Hayes said he hoped for BOR approval of his recommendations, probably during the May meeting. However, he said he thinks the Board will take a very careful, in-depth look at all fees this year due to the economy.

Senate nominations accepted on Tuesday

Student Senate swore in nine senators Tuesday, made several nominations for senate positions and approved two motions.

Sworn in as Commuter senators were Christopher S. Burnside, Barboursville sophomore; David Hunt, Huntington senior; Mark Underwood, Barboursville freshman; and James E. Ware, West Hamlin junior.

Tammy L. Rice, Radnor junior and Dean Roberts, Chicago junior, were sworn in as off-campus senators.

The Residence Hall senators sworn in were Mark Rhodes, Oak Hill sophomore; Sammi Sue Parrish, Charleston freshmen and Christopher S. Swindell, Logan sophomore.

The senate made several nominations for positions on the senate. Burnside and Hunt were nominated for senate president.

Nominations for pro-tempore were Amy L. Corron, Huntington junior and Robert W. Bennet, South Charleston sophomore.

Swindell was nominated for the position of parliamentarian.

William Bands, Huntington sophomore and Roberts were nominated for Sergeant at Arms.

Senators nominated for historian were Rhodes, Jane L. Daugherty, Huntington junior, and Sue E. Hubbs, Moundsville junior. Voting for the positions will be Tuesday.

Senate also approved a motion to "to Hoof for the Herd."

Senators will get sponsors to support them according to how many laps they can either walk or run around the Marshall track. Fifty percent of the money will go to the Athletic Department and the other 50 percent will go the student government.

Student Government's 50 percent will be divided into two categories. Twenty-five percent will go for next years inaugural banquet and the other 25 percent will be allocated to pay for next years MDA Superdance grand prize.

Another motion was approved by senate to sponsor a question and answer period for Clyde M. See Jr., Speaker of the West Virginia House of Delegates from 3:30 to 4:40 p.m. Thursday.

Student Body President-elect Michael L. Queen, Clarksburg sophomore said, "See was very helpful this year in our lobbying efforts and we need to support him in return."

House Speaker See to 'speak' with MU students

By Jeanne Wells

Some tips on lobbying from a man who knows about it first hand will be just one of the topics offered in a talk on campus today.

West Virginia Speaker of the House Clyde M. See Jr., D-Hardy, will speak to Marshall students from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Memorial Student Center Room 2E10.

See will also be the guest at the Student Government Inaugural Ceremony at 5 p.m. The 3:30 to 4:30 session will be open to all students, according to Student Body President-elect Michael L. Queen, Clarksburg sophomore, who arranged for See to speak at Marshall.

Queen said students get an opportunity to question See for advice about lobbying techniques and issues that effect higher education.

"(This) is an excellent way for the student body to begin what could be another great year of lobbying on behalf of Marshall University in higher education in West Virginia,"

Queen said.

Jennifer K. Fraley, Moorefield senior and outgoing student body president, agreed with Queen.

"Since the speaker has been so cooperative during our lobbying efforts this year and is providing the time to reach out to the students of higher education, I believe this proves the leaders of West Virginia are indeed listening and responding to our needs," she said.

See, who has been Speaker of the House for the past three terms and is the youngest in 10 years, has not officially announced his candidacy for the upcoming gubernatorial race but "is testing the waters," according to his secretary.

See attended Concord College and West Virginia University as an undergraduate and received his law degree from WVU.

He practices law in Moorefield and is a member of the Moorefield Volunteer Fire Dept. and U.S. Army veteran.

He and his wife Judy have four children.

A 'plus, minus' grading system?

West Virginia University's Senate agreed Monday to test the use of "pluses" and "minuses" in the college's grading system.

For one year, WVU professors will have the option of awarding the "plus" or "minus" grade, although the number of quality points may be added or subtracted for each plus or minus.

Although the Senate member said he feels this system could result in lower grade point averages for students, we think it is a good one - one which Marshall officials should consider adopting.

For many students, the rewards it offers are tantalizing. It is a frustrating experience for a student to earn an "A" at the very top of the grading scale and then see another student, who has managed to squeak in at the bottom of the "A"-range, awarded the same grade. Clearly the present grading policy does not distinguish between the amount and quality of work different students applied toward the course. An "A-" or "B plus" would be far more precise.

Also, the latter scale would provide prospective employers with better accessing tools when they evaluate graduates' grades. It would show much more clearly the actual class performance of students whose grades are on the borderline between one letter grade and another.

We encourage the Academic Planning and Standards Committee at Marshall to closely monitor the progress of this grading system at WVU and be attentive to the way it is evaluated by academicians there.

WVU will evaluate the system in the fall of 1984, and may decide to adopt the pluses and minuses, drop them, or modify the system.

If this option of pluses and minuses is considered valuable enough to merit adoption by WVU, we urge Marshall University also to implement the system.

Elimination, rain befall men's tennis team

By Tim T. Howard

The decision to eliminate the men's tennis team after this year and postponement of matches due to rain could dampen hopes for a winning season, head coach Bill Carroll said.

The recommendation by the Athletic Committee to eliminate men's tennis was made last Wednesday and approved Thursday by President Robert B. Hayes.

Four matches were scheduled for last weekend and all but one was rained out, Carroll said. Marshall traveled to Davidson, N.C., for the matches and was defeated by Furman 6-0.

Matches with Western Carolina, Davidson and V.M.I. have been rescheduled for this weekend in Chattanooga, Tenn., Carroll said.

Robert E. Kidnocker, Chillicothe, Ohio freshman and second seated team player, said this weekend was going to be tough because of the long layoff the team has had and the number of matches scheduled.

"We're playing the top team in the Southern Conference in Chattanooga and we play W.V.U. here tomorrow, which will be tough," he said. "I think we can still come out of this season in fourth or fifth place."

"The team has been constantly improving," he said. "I think that in a couple of years the team could be one of the best, but because of the cuts that won't happen."

The team usually finishes seventh or eighth out of a field of nine in the conference, he said.

"I think it is a bummer," (that the team has been cut) he said. "I can keep my scholarship here, but I will look into other schools and see what they have to offer."

Mark S. Elliott, Parkersburg senior and team captain said he hopes the team will be reinstated when things improve economically.

Rain beaches the beginning of volleyball

By Robin Robinson

The intramural beach volleyball matches scheduled to begin this week have been postponed until April 18 due to bad weather, according to Thomas A. Lovins, director of intramural and recreational services.

Because of the postponement, several teams have withdrawn from participation, he said. Several teams also missed the manager's meeting on Tuesday, which automatically eliminates them from participation.

Fourteen teams are now registered to participate, he said.

If the matches are played on April 18, it will be the first time beach volleyball has been played as a co-recreational event, he said.

Because of the response of the beach volleyball matches, Lovins said he will continue to schedule the event as a co-recreational activity.

The rules for beach volleyball are basically the same as those for regular volleyball, Lovins said. The only difference is that the matches are played in the sand pit on the field adjacent to Gullickson Hall.

Seeking signings, Huckabay returns to former school

By Leskie Pinson

On the first day he could sign players to binding letters to play basketball for Marshall, Coach Rick Huckabay found himself in a place he had been before.

Huckabay was on his way to Baton Rouge, La., and Redemptorist High School, where he once coached. He hoped to sign two players from Redemptorist High School. It had been reported that he had received a verbal commitment from one of the players but as of 4 p.m. EST neither had been signed.

Huckabay had won a state championship at Redemptorist during his 12-year high school coaching career. The current coach at the school, Gary Duhe, was an assistant for Huckabay.

"I know Rick is on his way down here," Duhe said. "He has shown interest in both my players."

Redemptorist won state championships two years in a row before losing this season. The team was ranked by

USA Today among the top 25 high school teams in the nation through most of this season.

The player who has reportedly given Huckabay a verbal commitment is Craig Ferguson, who Duhe described as a "very quick power forward."

"Craig's potential is tremendous," Duhe said. "I think he will make a very fine college player."

Ferguson, who is left-handed, is 6-foot-6 and 190 pounds.

"Craig was overshadowed some this year by his being on the same team as Tom Curry," Duhe said. "Still, he has been recruited by a good number of schools."

Curry is a 6-9 All-American who has signed with Louisiana State University.

The other Redemptorist player Huckabay hopes to sign is Joe Johnson, a 6-4, 190-pound guard.

"Joe is a very, very tremendous competitor," Duhe said. "He is a very good defensive player and an adequate shooter."

"Both of the players are interested in Marshall," Duhe said. "Craig is deciding between Marshall and McNeese State. Joe is looking at Nicholls State University."

Survey for jobs futures planned

By Lorie Wyant

Board of Regents' strategies for conducting manpower survey relating to the Jobs Partnership Training Act were discussed Tuesday with educational institution representatives from several West Virginia counties.

The Jobs Partnership Training Act is a program by which the federal government will set aside funds for training people who are out of work, according to William W. Thomas, Marshall University Community College Coordinator.

"This will provide an educational approach to the problem of unemployment," Thomas said. "But the program isn't scheduled to begin until Oct. 1, 1983."

Bob Wilkinson, BOR representative, led the survey discussion which was sponsored by the MU Community College. Representatives from Cabell, Jackson, Roane, Mason, Wayne, and Wood County educational institutions were also present at the meeting conducted in the MU Memorial Student Center.

Wilkinson said the survey will be conducted to provide the federal government with an idea of training people for the types of work needed for the future job market.

He gave an example of the need to determine trends in employment demands of state businesses and industries.

"It has been determined that the state will need 161 accountants each year for the next 10 years," he said. "But the state's educational institutions produce over 300 accountants each year."

"There is a need to determine employment trends to avoid this type of market glut in any particular field," Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson and the representatives discussed different alternatives for conducting a survey of West Virginia industries and businesses to determine their employment needs for the future.

One alternative discussed, which did not receive a favorable response from the representatives, was the use of mail surveys. A list of questions would be compiled by the BOR and mailed to the state's industries and businesses. The questions would concern the business or industry's current job force and predictions for future hiring.

Most of the representatives said they felt this was an ineffective way to conduct the survey, saying they believed there would be a low percentage of surveys completed and returned.

One representative suggested using volunteers to administer the surveys in person. This would assure complete, reliable and immediate responses from those being surveyed, he said.
