Summer getaway spots close by

By Kelly J. Messinger

As August prepares to bring a grand finale of heat to hit stir-crazy summer session students, rest and relaxation begins to seem as vital as reading half a textbook for tomorrow's quiz. During the next month, though, many activities and quick getaway spots are still available to fill the gap between classes and study time.

In Huntington the end of July brings an arts and crafts show at the mall the 27-31, a square dance festival at Marshall the 29-31, a picnic and seed spitting contest in Ritter Park on the 30 and Camden Park's anniversary celebration will continue through the 31 with Freddy Fender and a Scottish dance group.

August in Huntington means the Oak Ridge Boys in concert the third at the Civic Center, Dollar Day downtown the fourth, drum corps from across the nation will compete at Fairfield Stadium the fifth, the Tri-State Fair & Regatta will begin the sixth, Conway Twitty will be at Camden Park the thirteenth and Billy "Crash" Craddock will be there the fourteenth.

A short trek across the river into Proctorville before July 31 means the Lawrence County Fair could be a diversion. It is at the Proctorville Fairgrounds and admission is $4. Also in Ohio about six miles from Ironton on Route 93 is Wayne National Forrest and Lake Vesuvius.

Within easy driving distance in Ohio is the Bob Evans Farm at Rio Grande. A variety of festivals are still planned there for the rest of the summer and early fall months in addition to farm tours, horseback riding, exhibits and canoeing. More information may be obtained by calling (614) 245-5305.

Charleston offers the Kanawha Players presenting "Same Time Next Year" July 29, 30 and Aug. 5, 6 at 8 p.m. Reservations may be made by calling 348-8070.

Georgia Championship Wrestling will be at the Civic Center Coliseum Aug. 8. But the biggest event planned is the Sternwheel Regatta beginning the 27th. The Charleston Convention and Visitors Bureau will sponsor a "Funline" which anyone can call to find out the events. The 24 hour number is 345-5555, and currently it offers daily information on activities in Charleston.

The P.A. Denny Sternwheeler makes trips daily at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. down the Kanawha River. Reservations may be made by calling 343-4114.

For those wanting something more exciting than a sternwheeler, white water is just a few hours away. West Virginia White Water in Fayetteville offers a variety of trips down the New River and, for the more experienced, a 28-mile trip down the Gauley River. Trips are available seven days a week. More information may be obtained by dialing 574-0871. A deposit is required for all reservations.

MU benefits emphasized

By Sandra Joy Adkins

The benefits package and working conditions at Marshall University are the main assets being emphasized to applicants for vacant positions, according to Marvin E. Billups, director of personnel.

"We offer good benefits although salaries are not competitive with other institutions in our region," he said. "That is obviously the result of not having received a raise in the last two years."

Billups said the job of the personnel office is to advertise faculty and staff positions. He said the office of the provost handles the hiring for faculty positions and that an exact count of the number of open staff positions was not available at the time because resignations were turned in every day.

He said that as a result of seven staff positions being advertised over the weekend, the personnel office was filled with over 100 applicants Monday and Tuesday.

"That shows how bad the employment situation is out there," he said. "We hope to have all the positions that have been advertised filled by the time the semester starts."

The time period does not present a problem, he said. Required posting periods are 30 days for professional and faculty positions and 10 days for non-professional positions.

Billups said recruiters are aware of the need to recruit women and minorities and are trying to get as many applicants overall in order to be as selective as possible.

"Unless it is a critical field like computer science or medical technology, we have no trouble getting applicants," he said.

He said positions are advertised in professional journals, The Chronicle of Higher Education, newspapers and through other institutions.

The personnel office advertises the vacant positions, Billups said, and the various colleges and departments pay for it out of their advertising budgets.

He said a vacancy due to a late resignation could be filled before the regular semester begins because of a provision in Marshall's policy that is used for emergencies.

"We can request a waiver for the time the job has to be published if it is going to cause class scheduling problems," he said. "With justification from a selected supervisor, the requests are usually granted."

Faculty vacancies less than last year

By Kelly J. Messinger

Eleven of 41 faculty vacancies have been filled as of July 25, according to Acting President Sam E. Clagg.

Thirteen letters of offer have been sent out, he said, and of the 41 positions open two have been eliminated, both in the College of Education (in Curriculum and Foundations and Occupational Adult and Safety Education).

"We're still better off now than last year," Clagg said. "Two to two-and-a-half percent of the budget is based on resignations, but it's mostly for classified personnel rather than faculty."

People are more aware of the openings because of all the attention given to them, he said. "(This) would be expected going into the third year with no pay increase, budget cuts and the loss of high profile people."

There is a cash flow cushion of $84,000 in the state account and $32,000 in the Big Green Fund, which is used primarily for salaries and weekly commitments, he said.

The final figure for Marshall's part of the July 15 three percent state spending cut ordered by Gov. Jay Rockefeller is $578,000, and $171,092 for the medical school. Clagg said the money came from current expenses, travel and utility appropriations.

"(The cuts) may not be too much of a problem if the winter isn't too awesome," Clagg said.

Building project cost rises

By Joe Harris

The cost of the Science Building project is now $5.8 million higher than originally expected, according to Dean E.S. Hanrahan of the College of Science.

Hanrahan also said the complete remodeling planned for the older Science Building will not be carried out.

"The original plan was to completely renovate the old building to match the new one. Now the Board of Regents has agreed only to air condition the old one and do some plumbing and electrical work," he said.

Hanrahan said the BOR's decision will cause some difficulties with the two buildings.

"It will be a major problem because the addition was designed as a complete project which included some major changes with the old building," he said.

However, Hanrahan said the addition will be completed according to schedule, in May or June of 1984.

The College of Science equipment budget has also been cut by $600,000 as a result of the higher cost of the Science Building addition. According to Department of Physics Chairman Dr. Ralph E. Oberly, the equipment the students won't get isn't exotic or unusual, just basic materials students need.

"It means in a lot of cases we just do without which means the students will have to do without," he said.

CORRECTION

Due to an error in last week's story on the College of Liberal Arts two departments were misnamed. There were three vacancies in the Departments of Anthropology and Sociology instead of two. All but one opening is filled. The correct name of speech/pathology is the Department of Speech.

Reynolds lives up to his old image in Stroker Ace

By Joe Harris and Kelly Bragg

"Stroker Ace" lives up to the image of a Burt Reynolds' movie by having the following elements: car chases, car crashes, flashy women, and plenty of down-home, good-ole-boy, yee-ha humor.

However, it loses the money-making potential of previous Reynolds' flicks because no one other than down-home, good-ole-boys would part with the requisite $3.75 so brutally wrenched from their tooled leather wallets by the movie houses hungry for repeat business.

Lonnie Anderson is featured -- rather unconvincingly -- as the oldest living virgin -- one wonders how she got ol' Burt to give her the part.

A new twist on the repetitive theme of Reynolds' movies is Jim Nabors starring as the singing mechanic. He plays the lovable, nice guy loser to Reynolds as the macho, fast living, womanizing, stock car driver.

The whole 'plot' of the film revolves around Reynolds' trying to escape a contract he has with chicken-shack magnate and racing sponsor Ned Beatty in which Burt is required to dress up in a chicken suit and do promotions for Beatty.

But Reynolds gets out of the contract by having a friend pose as an executive from Miller Beer and offers to buy out Beatty if he will drop Reynolds. Beatty agrees and on the day of the Big Race he tells Burt that if he loses the race, he loses his sponsorship. Burt has pangs of conscious, however, and the movie ends on a somewhat predictable, if happy note.

We both give this movie a large ho-hum and recommend it only for 16-year-olds with their first car and a heavy right foot.

Coach Huckabay optimistic: New schedule not too tough

By Joe Harris

Although most people take vacations during the summer, there is no rest for Marshall University's Head Basketball Coach Rick Huckabay as he recruits new players for the Thundering Herd.

According to Huckabay, recruiting is broken down into three time periods.

"July is a time of evaluation," he said.

"Me and two full-time coaches will evaluate 2500 people, all in basketball camps this summer," he said. Coaches may not talk face to face with players during July, Huckabay said, but may talk to them over the telephone.

"We just basically sit and watch the players play for 12 hours," he said.

Then, July 31, Huckabay and the basketball coaches review the list of prospective players.

"We go over them by grade first, starting with the ninth grade and judge them on closeness to the school and whether any contact has been made," he said. They then pick 50 seniors they think they have a chance of recruiting.

"We're finding kids that are seniors," he said, "but have been recruited since the 10th grade."

Huckabay said during the month of August coaches may only write or call the players and finally during September and October the coaches may make contact with the players.

"All this is due to an NCAA rule," he said.

Huckabay said he is pleased with the quality of players so close to MU.

"In West Virginia, we've seen some good players. I was surprised that in a 150 mile radius how many good players are to be found," he said.

Although the schedule for the up-coming season appears to be challenging, Huckabay says he is not worried.

"I like that kind of a schedule to get the program the recognition you need. The schedule is a tough schedule," he said. "I'm just saying it could possibly be looked upon as tough for a new coach to adjust to."

Huckabay said the team will not make any special preparations against in-state rival West Virginia University.

"I know the rivalry is great, but it's still a business first," Huckabay said. "I'm going to have to not let the kids act too emotionally high and try to win the games one game at a time."

83-84 basketball schedule

By Joe Harris

Marshall University Head Basketball Coach Rick Huckabay and Athletic Director Lynn J. Snyder have released the 1983-84 Thundering Herd basketball schedule.

The schedule of 27 games includes 15 at home, pitting the Herd against visitors such as West Virginia, Marquette and the eight members of the Southern Conference.

However, the Herd will have a challenging road schedule, highlighted by a trip to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas's Rebel Classic. MU will play national powers Georgetown and Clemson in the classic matches.

The Herd will open the season with an exhibition game (Nov. 26) against an opponent yet to be named.

All Marshall University basketball games are tentatively set for 7:30 p.m. tip-offs.

Assistant coach appointed

By Joe Harris

The position vacated by Assistant Coach Waverly Brooks early this month has been filled by Peter Dewald, former Assistant Coach at the University of Maryland.

Dewald, a 1976 graduate of Gettysburg College in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, will coach the defensive secondary positions on the Thundering Herd.

Students graduating during the summer will have as good a chance of finding a job as those who graduated in May, according to Reginald A. Spencer, director of the Placement Center.

"I don't see any significant difference in first or second summer term graduates versus May graduates in finding jobs," he said.

Many budgets of employers start at July 1, so graduating in the summer is not a hindrance, Spencer said.

However, December graduates do have problems.

"January tends to be a down period," he said. "December graduates in education may have trouble."

Overall, Spencer said there is no "prime time" of the year to look for a job, even though optimism exists among many because of the beginning economic recovery.

Summer grad faces market at 'good' time

"Everyone is anxious to see what will happen (in the job market)," he said. "I think this state will be the last to recover."

In spite of the continuing gloom of unemployment, Spencer said the high demand fields are still in computers, engineering, health and high tech.

"What is meant by 'high demand' is you can take the degree and go to any major city and get a job," he said.

Some basics that should be followed anytime in getting a job are deciding geographical preference, acquiring a network of people to help, sending resumes to those in relevant positions and reading newspapers from cities where the graduate is seeking a job, Spencer said.

Area rugby team organizing

By Debra A. Jackson

A men's area rugby team is being organized by the Ashland-Huntington Rugby Club, according to Joe Morris, vice president.

The Rugby club is organizing a team in the Tri-State area for the fall season, and practice begins in mid-August, he said.

The team competed last fall and this spring with teams from Charleston, Ohio State University, and the Lexington area, Morris said.

Interested persons may call Joe Morris at (304) 429-4042, or Ken Aminao at (606) 836-7262. No experience is necessary, but participants should be at least 18 years of age, Morris said.

Appalachian poems in second printing

By Cheryl Palmieri

Fifteen years in her adopted state of West Virginia have given Lewellyn McKernan, part-time English instructor, something to write about.

Her poetry book, "Short and Simple Annals: Poems About Appalachia," is now in its second printing.

Under a grant from the Humanities Foundation of West Virginia, 1,000 copies of the poetry book are being published.

"Most of the poems in the book are dramatic monologues written from the point of view of an Appalachian woman or young girl," McKernan said.

"They touch upon many subjects relevant to this particular region."

McKernan said she is originally from Arkansas, but has lived here since the late 1960s. She said growing up in the country has given her a natural sympathy for the lifestyle she has tried to capture in her work.

The first printing of the book, which produced 500 copies, was made possible through a grant from the American Association of University Women, McKernan said. The AAUW is a national organization which offers financial support through grants and scholarships to women with undergraduate degrees.

The publication grant allowed her a specified amount of money to have her book published, she said, and it was her responsibility to find a printer and a distributor to get the books out.

McKernan said she is presently working on her second book of poems, which will follow the same theme as her first.

"Short and Simple Annals: Poems about Appalachia" is available at the Marshall University Bookstore and Stationer's, or may be ordered from the author through the Department of English.

Karr named assistant dean

Dr. Carolyn M. Karr, professor of social studies, will become acting assistant dean of Marshall's College of Education effective Sept. 1, Provost Olen E. Jones Jr. said.

Karr will assume the duties handled by the current assistant dean, Dr. Jack Maynard, who will become acting dean of the college, Jones said.

Maynard will fill the vacancy occurring with the resignation of College of Education Dean Philip J. Rusche, which takes effect Aug. 31, during the search for a new dean.

New HPER chairman named

Dr. W. Donald Williams, MU professor of health, physical education and recreation, has assumed the chairmanship of that department on an acting basis, according to Provost Olen E. Jones.

Williams fill the vacancy which occurred with the resignation of the previous department head, Dr. Robert Case, who accepted a similar post at Sam Houston University in Texas.

ROTC=job, some think so

By Bobette Gilkerson

More students are showing an interest in Reserve Officers Training Corps at Marshall and the enrollment officer said they apparently see ROTC as helpful in landing a job later.

Many students believe ROTC will help them find employment, Captain Robert E. Dittmer, enrollment officer, said. "Many top corporations and businesses look upon today's Army ROTC training as a major plus when recruiting young men and women for management positions," he said.

"That's a fact that hasn't escaped the prospective students," he said. "They know that it's a big plus on their resumes."

The summer school enrollment is up from 12 to 16, Dittmer said. He also expects the fall enrollment to rise, he said.

Positive attitudes about the program and a better knowledge of programs being offered are two of the reasons for the increase, Dittmer said. The enrollment of women in the ROTC is also up, he said. The upcoming senior class is 33% women. ROTC's goal is to help cadets be able to deal with the problems of the civilian world within their roles as future officers, Dittmer said.

Students may find out if ROTC is right for them by taking the introductory level classes, Dittmer said. There is no obligation and no uniforms or haircuts are required in these classes.
