Green and White Week's goal: unite student body

By T.E. Moore
Staff Writer

A body building competition and a performance by the University Mass Choir today highlight Green and White Week activities this week.

Green and White Week is sponsored by the Student Government Association in preparation for the MU-WVU basketball game Saturday.

According to Sammi S. Parish, Charleston sophomore and Student Government senator, Green and White Week was initiated for the purpose of uniting the student body and stirring up team spirit.

The SGA hopes to make the Green and White Week a bi-annual event in coordination with the MU-WVU games.

Today, a performance by the University Mass Choir begins at 12:15 p.m. in the Student Center, and the Mr. Marshall Body Building Competition starts at 9 p.m. in the Student Center Coffeehouse.

The contest is sponsored by Fitness World, ICG and SGA.

Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. a Voter Registration Drive will be in the Student Center.

A Pie-Throw at a favorite target begins at 11:30 on the Student Center Plaza. The MDA events will follow at noon.

The Paul Winters Concert, sponsored by the Marshall Artist Series will be from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. A dance contest follows at the Old Library, beginning at 11:30.

Thursday, evening activities begin with a reception for Christine Craft at 6:30 p.m. in the Alumni Lounge. Craft will speak in the Multi-purpose room at 9 p.m. The lecture is free with a Marshall ID and activity card; $1.50 with a MU ID and $3 for the general public.

Friday, Green and White Day, head basketball coach Rick Huckabay and "Huck's Herd" will appear at the Student Center at 11 a.m.

Student Activities will present "48 Hours" at 3 p.m. in the Science Hall auditorium. There is no charge to Marshall students.

At 6:30 the MU Marching Band will conduct a parade on campus and at 7 p.m. a bonfire-pep rally sponsored by the Twin Towers East Advisory Council and SGA will be conducted on the Henderson Field.

Saturday, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. there will be a Student Alumni pre-game reception in the Alumni Lounge.

Marshall's game against WVU begins at 4 p.m. in the Henderson Center.

It will be followed by a dance featuring "High Tymes" at the Convention Center Hotel. Tickets are $4 per student if purchased before Saturday.

6 say they're interested in MU coaching position

From Staff Reports

Six coaches have confirmed their interest in filling Marshall's vacant head football coaching position.

Tommy Groom, Marshall's defensive line coach under former MU mentor Sonny Randle, and Lonnie Warwick, a former NFL all-pro and assistant coach were the first to publicly state their interests in the coaching position.

Four other coaches, Bob Lutz, head coach at Ironton, Ohio High School; George Wheeler, defensive coordinator of the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League; Larry Coyer, defensive coordinator of the Michigan Panthers of the USFL; and Gary Stevens, offensive coordinator at the University of Miami, said Monday they are interested in the job.

One other collegiate assistant coach, Dale Evans, defensive backfield coach at the University of North Carolina, is also reportedly interested in becoming MU's next football coach.

Evans was not available for comment.

Lutz, a Marshall graduate, has coached the Ironton Tigers to a 121-11-4 record since becoming head coach in 1972. The Tigers were 8-0-1 this year and have gone unbeaten in 62 regular season games. He said he would officially apply for the post in the next couple of days.

Coyer, who is a former Marshall player, said he was "very much interested" in the position, adding that he has already applied.

Wheeler, a native of Virginia, played against Marshall in his collegiate days at East Carolina and was a graduate assistant at ECU when the Marshall plane crash occurred. He said he has already applied for the post.

Stevens, a former assistant under Frank Cignetti at WVU, is in his fourth year at Miami. He is a native of Cleveland.

Meanwhile, Marshall Athletic Director Lynn J. Snyder said Monday inquiries to the position continue to pour in. He said about 50 coaches have expressed interest.

Snyder said the goal to name the coach before the Christmas break is still very realistic. The search committee that will seek Randle's successor was announced over the Thanksgiving Holiday.

Members of the committee are: Dr. Dorothy Hicks, professor of Health, Physical Education and Recreation; Steven Hatfield, chairman of the Athletic Committee and a professor of mathematics; Denise Welker, president of the alumni association; Bart Andrews, chairman of the Big Green

Committee will choose 3 to 5 finalists Saturday

By Sandra Joy Adkins
Special Correspondent

The presidential search committee will meet Saturday morning to select three to five of the eight candidates to recommend to the Board of Regents.

All eight candidates have completed their campus visits, which included interviews with the search committee and meetings with students, faculty, staff, administration and the public.

Search committee members want those who attended the various forums to make their opinions on the candidates known, according to committee Chairman Paul M. Churton.

See articles, pages 2 and 3

"The search committee invites and encourages individuals to put their views about the candidates in writing and provide them to any committee member," Churton said.

He said constituencies also could talk to their representatives on the 17-member search committee.

Students are represented by Student Body President Michael L. Queen; faculty by Dan O'Hanlon, Dr. Virginia Plumley, Sarah N. Denman and Dr. Donald S. Robinson; classified staff by Kenneth Reffeitt; and administration by Dean Alan B. Gould.

Churton said input from the Marshall community would be an important part of the committee's considerations and must be received before Saturday.

William J. Walsh, Board of Regents secretary to the search committee, said the committee wants to submit the three to five names to the BOR in time for the regents' December meeting.

The BOR will select Marshall's next president. Walsh said the final candidates will be interviewed by board members at the January or February meeting.

Scholarship Foundation; Gary Wilson, president of the Big Green; Mike Queen, student body president; Ken Blue, associate dean of student development; and Phil Carter, athletic committee member and an assistant professor of sociology and anthropology.

Snyder is ex-officio member of the committee.

Jones says MU president must be visible

By Sara Crickenberger
Wire Editor

If the presidential search committee is looking for a person to sit behind a desk in Old Main and do paper work, at least one candidate is not interested in the position.

However, if Marshall is looking for a president who is visible to the campus, the community and the state, Dr. Olen E. Jones Jr. said he thinks he is a qualified candidate.

Jones, who is currently Marshall's provost, told students, faculty and staff at meetings Sunday and Monday that he is convinced the next three years will set the direction for the university's future for the next 10 or 15 years.

Salary increases for administrators, faculty and staff were cited as a top priority of the only candidate who is from within the ranks of the university.

Jones also listed completion of the science building, renovation of Old Main and Northcott Hall, the construction of a fine arts building, continued upgrading of the library facilities and land acquisition as other items which should occupy positions of high priority.

Although Jones said higher tuition rates are not the answer for providing the funding to achieve these goals.

"The real margin of excellence for this institution will have to come from outside funds."

Jones said his background with the university will be a plus because he knows the people at Marshall and has identified with the institution for years.

"The debate that you have to be an outsider to have new ideas is hogwash."

If Jones were selected as chief executive officer of Marshall, he said he will implement a network system to contact legislators and make known Marshall's needs and the positions of the university on impending legislation.

"The lid was taken off of lobbying about two weeks ago," Jones said. "It is essential we have some lobbying effort state-wide."

Jones said the university's hopes for a law school and engineering program in the near future were "dead." He termed the proposal for a new football stadium ridiculous in light of the institution's problems of funding programs that already exist.

Marshall's use of the state-wide educational computer network

(WVNET) should be abandoned to ensure the institution's progress in computer capabilities, Jones said. He suggested the network be left for use by West Virginia University while other campuses develop decentralized systems or that the network be given up altogether.

Jones said he favored admission standards which are high enough to provide quality while insuring access to the people of the state, but he said the determination of admissions standards rests with the BOR.

As for his relations with the board, Jones said "I would hope it's superb, but that's a guessing game."

He said he worked closely with the chancellor of the BOR while on temporary assignment as the West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine.

Student financial aid information ready

By Terri L. Lovely
Staff Writer

Financial Aid recipients who already have pre-registered and have received a tuition statement should have received additional information concerning aid disbursement and payment of tuition, Ed W. Miller, director of financial aid said.

The Aid Notification Form was mailed to eligible students during the week of Thanksgiving, Miller said.

The form shows the amount of financial aid available to the student for the payment of registration fees and living expenses, based on full-time enrollment for the spring, Miller said.

The top two copies of the form must be signed and returned to the Cashier's Office before the due date of

Dec. 19 for students who pre-register prior to that date.

Students who pay through the mail should submit a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a receipt of payment, I.D. validation sticker, and activity card, Miller said.

Students who register after Dec. 16 must submit the form to the Cashier's Office on the day of advance registration, Miller said. Registration during Jan. 16, 18 or 19 requires the student to submit the signed form that day and the sooner the student completes and returns the form the better, Miller said.

Once students have completed the form they should compare the invoice with the total amount available, as shown on the form, Miller said.

The comparison will reveal one of two things,

Miller said. One is that the fees due exceed the amount of aid available. If this is the case, a student must provide the difference at the time of payment. If a student finds the aid available exceeds the payment figure, a check for the remaining financial aid will be disbursed to the student, Miller said.

Pre-registered students who show proof of registration through validated I.D. may pick up their checks in Old Main Auditorium, Miller said.

Students whose last name begins with the letters A-L may pick up their checks Thursday, Jan. 12 between 8:30 a.m. until noon and on Friday, Jan. 13 from noon until 4 p.m. Students whose last name begins with M-Z may obtain checks Thursday, Jan. 12 from noon until 4 p.m., and on Friday, Jan. 13 from 8:30 a.m. until noon, Miller said.

Presidency way to blend experiences

By Sandra Joy Adkins
Special Correspondent

The list of references provided by one of the Marshall University presidential candidates is a bit different from the rest.

Former United States President Jimmy Carter, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Alan M. Cranston are just a few of the political figures Dr. Rodney Kennedy-Minott included on his list of those to contact for comments on his qualifications.

Kennedy-Minott, 55, a former United States ambassador to Sweden during Carter's administration, is presently head of an international trade consulting firm.

Alpha International, a New York-based firm, specializes in helping small and medium-sized Swedish businesses in their attempts to do business with the United States.

He is a Stanford University graduate, where he also received his master's and doctorate in history.

His list of career positions include being the dean of humanities at California State University at Hayward from 1965 to 1970 and a full professor of U.S. history for several years after that. He resigned from Hayward to take the embassy position.

Kennedy-Minott said he treated being an ambassador as a "post-doctoral" program.

"I learned a lot and am now looking for a way to blend my diplomatic and academic experiences," he said. "The job of a college president is very similar to the job I had as U.S. ambassador."

He said the embassy has funding problems and the foreign service staff has to struggle through periods of low morale.

"Few people have had experience with a U.S. embassy," Kennedy-Minott said. "An embassy is a relatively self-contained enclave. The same sort of spirit exists within an embassy as with the Marshall community."

He said being a university president would be a tremendous challenge but that he truly wants to get back into the academic community.

"I miss teaching. I never really lost my concern for students and scholarship," Kennedy-Minott said. "It's awful to carry around the titles professor emeritus and former ambassador, because people say, 'Why would you want to come back.'"

He said if he was appointed president he would try to enlist the support of the Board of Regents and try to educate them on the realities at Marshall.

Presidential candidate Hollis proposes reforms

By Edgar Simpson
Special Correspondent

The Californian candidate for Marshall's presidency advocated a three-pronged solution to the university's budget woes and better relationships between colleges of liberal arts and colleges of business across the nation in meetings with administration, faculty, staff and students Sunday and Monday.

W. Slater Hollis, dean of the School of Business at California State Polytechnic University, told several constituency groups that he believes three to five percent could be shaved from Marshall's budget based on 1981 figures which could be turned into a 10-percent salary increase for faculty.

Hollis, 53, said the cut would be achieved through higher efficiency, not personnel layoffs.

"If there has to be a trade-off it will be in things, not people," he said.

Hollis said Marshall could become a model university in the area of the relationship between liberal arts and business.

"At my current school we make an effort to interphase the arts and sciences," he said. "When a student comes into my college (of business) I figure 50 percent of that student belongs to the arts."

However, he said liberal arts students very often are not required to take enough business courses and as a result have trouble finding well-paying jobs after receiving their degrees.

"The greatest single tragedy in education is for a student to spend four years at an institution, earn a degree and then not find a job," he said.

Hollis also proposed a "legislator-in-residency" plan designed to educate state lawmakers about Marshall University.

He said the proposal would consist of giving state senators and representatives tours of campus, the opportunity to observe classes in session and a night in Huntington.

He said the same program would work for alumni and Board of Regents members.

"I want them to become a part of us," he said. "I want them physically and emotionally with us."

Hollis also advocated student and staff representation on university committees.

"I am a great believer in consultation with all groups affected by a decision," he said.

Although intercollegiate athletics are important, Hollis said academics are the primary purpose of a university and sports only should be supported with that in mind.

Despite favoring more stringent exit standards, Hollis said he was in favor of open door admission standards.

Opening night

Huckabay's Herd makes debut on the road against Eastern Michigan

By Leskie Pinson
Staff Writer

The curtain goes up tonight on Rick Huckabay's first season as Marshall coach, but he wishes he were not opening as a roadshow.

"Sure, I wish we were home," he said. "It's always easier when you are home but the easy way is not always the best. You can't always have everything just the way you want it."

Want it or not the Herd opens its season tonight against the Hurons of Eastern Michigan. It will be the second game of the season for EMU, which boast a 1-0 record after an overtime win at Cleveland State.

Last season the Herd tripped the Hurons 71-68 in one of the most physical games of the season. Marshall was led by LaVerne Evans' 23 points in the contest.

Evans is expected to start along with Jeff Battle, David Wade and Jeff Richardson. The other starting spot is undecided.

"We will have to see how Sam Ervin's foot is coming along," Huckabay said. "If he is OK then he will start at a forward and Richardson will be at center."

If Ervin is not ready to go then Robert Eppes will be the center, Huckabay said.

EMU is expect to start three transfers along with a pair that combined for 19 points against Marshall last year. Newcomers Fred Cofield and Percy Cooper will be in the backcourt with University of Michigan transfer Joe James filling a forward spot.

The other forward will be 6-6 Phil Blevins, who scored 19 points against the Herd last year. The center will be Vince Giles, who tallied 10 against MU.

The game, which begins at 7:30 p.m., will be broadcast live on channel 33 WPBY-TV.

Her..d off to 3-0 start; battles W.Va. Tech tonight

By Bill Durstein
Staff Writer

Women's basketball coach Judy Southard did not celebrate Thanksgiving with a turkey dinner, instead she and the Her..d feasted on two teams in the MU Thanksgiving Invitational.

Saturday the women beat West Virginia Tech 94-68. These teams have a rematch tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Henderson Center.

"The whole tournament went well for us and we played well both days," Southard said. "We probably won't beat Tech by 26 points again because they are a good program."

The Her..d thrashed West Virginia State 102-53 Friday to reach the finals.

The women's record now stands at 3-0 with an average victory margin of more than 41 points.

"Overall I would have to say I was happy about the tournament," Southard said. "At times our defense was bad but we really played well."

Southard is also happy about her team's record and its confidence. "This year we finally got a schedule that allowed us to get out and start on a winning note."

Karen Pelphrey scored 39 points against Tech and poured in 25 against State which gives her a 30.3 scoring average after three games.

Herd runners finish third in final cross country meet

Marshall placed all five of its runners in the top 40 finishers of a 99-runner field, on way to a third-place team finish in The Athlete's Congress national junior cross country championship.

The 5,000-meter race, which took place at Penn State University, was won by Tim Wakeland of Iowa State with a time of 15:26. Marshall's top finisher was Todd Crossan, who came in fifth with a clocking of 15:52.4.

Dave Tabor of Marshall came in 12th place at 16:02. He was followed by 28th-place Todd Harris, 16:31; Rich Stewart, 33rd at 16:44; and Dave Ball, 38th place at 16:51.

The meet was won by Bucknell, with Malone State also finishing ahead of the Herd.

Others teams in the meet included Edinboro, Penn State, Lafayette, Virginia Tech and the Univac Track Club.

The meet ended the season for the harriers, who finished third in the Southern Conference.

Three runners have finished their careers for Marshall. Mike Dodge, Roy Poloni and Brent Swartz will not be returning for coach Rod O'Donnell, who completed his ninth year at the helm.
