Coach's family wants to stay in Huntington

By Leskie Pinson
Sports Editor

If nine-year-old Ricky Huckabay has any say in the matter, the Huckabay family will not soon be leaving its south Huntington home.

"I'm not moving again," he said when his father showed him a story in The Herald-Dispatch. "I'm not packing another box. I want to stay here."

The story rumored of the elder Huckabay possibly leaving his post of head basketball coach at Marshall in favor of a similar job at Clemson University.

Huckabay said his son's opinion is probably the family consensus.

"I think Ricky was reiterating my wife's feeling," he said. "It looks like we're here to stay."

The Clemson job became available when Bill Foster was named the head coach at Miami, Fla. Huckabay said he was somewhat surprised by Foster's moving to Florida.

"I'm surprised, but then again I'm not surprised," he said. "Foster has done a real good job at Clemson. This job at Miami is a $2 million job when you consider all the fringes he will receive."

Marshall defeated Clemson this season in the Rebel Classic in Las Vegas.

"No one of any clout has contacted me from down there," Huckabay said. "I had a sportswriter from North Carolina call me but he is the only one that has contacted me."

Huckabay said he would be flattered that he might be considered for the job.

"Anytime someone considers you, it makes you feel good," he said. "I felt good when I found that Marshall was thinking about hiring me."

He admitted that the Clemson position is a desirable one.

"It's in the Atlantic Coast Conference, which is a very prestigious conference," he said. "It's a job with a lot of security."

But he feels his current job can become one like the one at Clemson.

"Marshall can be like Clemson," he said. "I want to be able to make it that kind of situation here."

"I've only been here a year," Huckabay said. "One year does not make a head coach. I still have a lot to do."

New housing plan may cause problems for Greeks

By Richard Sullivan
Staff Writer

The elimination of housing exemptions for Greeks who don't want to live in residence halls during their sophomore year will cause severe problems for fraternities and sororities, according to Jim Stewart, Interfraternity Council president.

The exemptions are granted each year to a limited number of students who want to live in fraternity or sorority houses instead of residence halls. They will be phased out over a period of five years under a Housing and Conference Facilities plan going into effect next year.

"The sororities will lose their houses within two or three years and the fraternities will go next," Stewart said. "We are against it totally because it will do nothing but disrupt the Greek system."

Forty-seven exemptions were granted this year, according to Ray Welty, manager of Housing and Conference Facilities.

"It's my understanding that the exemption program was not meant to be a permanent policy," Welty said.

"We have to have that money to pay our bills each year," he said.

"If we look at Buskirk Hall, which is a medium-priced hall with a 19-meal plan, those 47 exemptions are $114,000 that we're not getting," Welty said.

"There are approximately 1,600 students in the residence halls. One way you could look at it is that each resident is paying for this program with $70 out of his own pocket."

"The people who are paying for this are the people in residence halls who might have to forgo some improvements," he said.

Students have a right to decide where they want to live, according to Sen. Anne Harman, president-elect of the Panhellenic Council.

"By the time you're a sophomore you should be able to choose where to live," she said.

Harman, who is also vice president of Alpha Xi Delta sorority, said that the extra five or six people living in the house can make the difference when it is time to pay the bills.

Harman said sororities with mortgages would be hurt the most by the elimination of the exemptions.

"We (Alpha Xi Delta) don't have any mortgage payments," she said, "but as far as electricity and utility bills, we need those six or seven extra girls."

Stewart said the IFC and Panhellenic Council have set up a joint committee to work against the plan.

He said the housing office acted unfairly when they made the plan.

"They never asked us about it. They never even consulted with Panhellenic or IFC," he said.

"It will hurt the fraternities in the long run, but the fraternities don't ask for them (exemptions) as much as the sororities," Stewart said.

"I'd say some of the sororities would hang around for two years and then they'd lose their houses."

Henderson expansion possible, says Snyder

By Paul Carson
Special Correspondent

Athletic Director Lynn J. Snyder remains reluctant to divulge definite plans regarding a bill that would raise $15 million for Marshall athletic facility renovation and construction.

The bill, which would provide the money by selling bonds, awaits the governor's signature. When questioned on the possible expansion of the Henderson Center with the money, Snyder said because of the basketball program's recent success and good future prospects, additional seating in the two-year-old structure was a possibility.

Although not ruling out bonds as a method of financing, Snyder said repayment of bonds through ticket sales, as the bill outlines, should be a last resort.

Snyder said Marshall could not support the sale of $15 million in bonds and that alternative financing would be explored before committing to the sale of bonds.

However, he said he was not hinting bonds would never be sold, only that they should be the last resort.

He said his position on bonding to pay for any Henderson Center expansion was the same as for construction or renovation of football stadium facilities. It should only be used as a last resort after all other avenues have been explored, he said. Snyder suggested a statewide bonding referendum as an alternative method of financing. He said although the state economy is hurting, he said he believes West Virginia will have to pass a statewide bond issue in the near future providing for facility construction for higher education.

He said it is realistic to hope for new football stadium funding by following normal university procedures which includes placing stadium construction on the existing priority list.

Challenger files for Wise's seat

CHARLESTON—Nicholas A. Ciccarello Jr. of Charleston filed Thursday as a Democratic primary challenger for the 3rd District U.S. House seat held by Rep. Bob Wise, D-W.Va.

Ciccarello's filing foreshadows a contest with Wise in the June 5 primary election. Wise has not yet filed official entry papers as a candidate for a second term but is expected to do so.

Until he resigned this month, the 49-year-old Ciccarello headed a company that provided management services to trade and professional organizations, including the West Virginia Utility Contractors Association and the state Society of Professional Engineers. He held the title of executive director of the utility contractors' association until his resignation March 15.

Levy outcome protested

BUNKER HILL—Hundreds of students staged a two-hour demonstration outside Musselman High School on Thursday to protest voter rejection of a bond levy that would have paid for construction of a new building, a Berkeley County schools official said.

Don Anderson, deputy county schools superintendent, said 200 to 250 students of the total 1,100 marched outside the school starting at 8 a.m. and returned to classes about two hours later.

"Some of the better students decided, 'let's walk with a sign saying how disappointed we were,'" Anderson said.

Voters on Tuesday rejected 4,483 to 4,401 the proposed $12 million bond issue that would have funded construction of a new Musselman High. A more expensive school bond measure had been rejected five months earlier.

Anderson said Thursday's protest was peaceful, although police were at the scene to prevent blockage of traffic around the school. He said the students wanted "some way to show their feelings, how disappointed they were in the adult population."

U.S. reps observe Salvadoran vote

WASHINGTON—At least 14 members of Congress will be part of an official U.S. delegation to observe Sunday's presidential election in El Salvador, congressional sources said Thursday.

One source, declining to be quoted by name, said the delegation would leave Saturday and would also include representatives from industry and the clergy.

Senators selected for the official observation panel were identified as Pete Wilson, R-Calif.; David L. Boren, D-Okla.; Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky.; Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and William V. Roth Jr., R-Del.

Among those appointed to the panel from the House were Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas; and Reps. Solomon P. Ortiz, D-Texas; Kika de la Garza, D-Texas; John P. Murtha, D-Pa.; Tom Loeffler, R-Texas; Olympia Snowe, R-Maine; Bob Livingston, R-La.; Dick Cheney, R-Wyo.; and at least one other whose name was not known.

Meese asks for inquiry

WASHINGTON—Edwin Meese III, his nomination as attorney general increasingly under fire, asked Thursday for a special prosecutor to investigate his affairs.

"Because of unsubstantiated charges that have been widely publicized by those who oppose my nomination to be attorney general, I feel that there must be a comprehensive inquiry that will examine the facts and make public the truth," Meese wrote Attorney General William French Smith.

President Reagan said he supported Meese's decision.

"I know that an impartial, prompt and thorough inquiry will demonstrate the high level of integrity and dedication which have marked Ed's long career of public service," Reagan said in a statement made public by the White House.

UNESCO, police seek source of fire

PARIS—The director-general of UNESCO said Thursday a fire that gutted a wing of his organization's headquarters was "criminal" in origin and asked employees to cooperate in a police inquiry.

One UNESCO official estimated the blaze caused more than $625,000 damage and affected about 100 offices on seven floors of the eight-story building.

The fire caused no injuries but destroyed an undetermined number of documents. UNESCO officials said the blaze began in an archives storage area, but denied that any classified documents had been destroyed.

Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, the top official of the United Nations agency, told assembled members of his staff he had requested a "painstaking inquiry" by French police, firefighters and prosecutors into the Wednesday night blaze.

Henri Lopes, an assistant director-general, said at least 40 percent of the documents "were comparatively old" and could be replaced by use of a central file where copies are kept.

Mitterrand visits U.S.

WASHINGTON—Francois Mitterrand, the Socialist president of France, was welcomed to the White House by President Reagan Thursday at the start of an eight-day visit expected to underscore close French-American cooperation despite differences over economic policies, Central America and the Middle East.

Mitterrand's White House arrival was heralded with mass marching bands, trumpeters and a 21-gun salute in ceremonies on the South Lawn.

After conferring with Reagan, Mitterrand was to address a joint session of Congress and attend a state dinner in his honor. This is the first full day of his trip to the United States.

The meeting comes, one official said, as relations between the United States and France are at their warmest in recent times.

MU still losing

The Legislature recently passed a bill providing for athletic facilities construction at Marshall University and West Virginia University. It allows the Board of Regents to sell $15 million in negotiable bonds or notes for construction at Marshall and $7.5 million for construction at WVU. The bill awaits the approval or veto of Gov. Jay Rockefeller.

With all the recent publicity surrounding the alleged deterioration of Fairfield Stadium and the Big Green's push for a new stadium, this legislation would seem like a blessing from heaven. If construction of a new football stadium is funded by the sale of bonds that will be paid off through ticket charges, then this will not affect projects regarded as priorities on the university's construction list. If the bonds are sold, the football program will have its stadium and everyone will live happily ever after.

At least that's the way it happens in fairy tales. However, I'm inclined to believe the legislators were living in a fairy tale world when they wrote the bill. Either that or the bill is an attempt to make Marshall think it is getting twice as much as WVU, when in fact it is receiving nothing.

Think for a moment how these bonds would be paid off. Considering interest and principal, it would take approximately $24 million over a 20 year period to pay off $15 million worth of bonds, according to Athletic Director Lynn J. Snyder. And this is the most conservative estimate available. If the bonds are to be paid off only through ticket charges, prices could be doubled and Marshall still would default. In fact, Marshall could charge more for season tickets than the Cincinnati Bengals there would be a bond default.

What rubs me the wrong way is that this won't be a problem at WVU. WVU already charges pro football prices for admission to see the Mountaineer games and a $7.5 million expansion of Mountaineer Field won't be any problem to pay off with 60,000 seats at the prices they are asking to watch the 'Eers play.

Is this a fact that the Legislature inadvertently overlooked? If the potential to pay off these bonds is considered, then $7.5 million in bonds for WVU to pay off through ticket sales will be well worth the investment. However, when Marshall's ability to pay off the principal and interest on $15 million worth of bonds is considered, the proposition seems worthless.

So on the surface it may appear that MU is no longer getting the short end of the stick in the funding battles for athletic facilities. But a careful examination of the legislation would indicate to me, at least, that Marshall is, indeed, getting a bad deal again.

Students Speak

What function should Student Government perform?

Bob Carl,
Moorefield
graduate student

I don't think that Student Government is taken seriously enough by the students because the Student Government doesn't take the job seriously enough itself. As far as functions go, the Student Government needs to become more active in addressing student needs, whatever they may be at the time.

Glenn Endicott, Wheelersburg, Ohio,
senior

They should provide services to fill students' needs, such as book trading like other universities have. The current things they've been doing are fine.

Mary Rurak,
Weirton
graduate student

Student Government should be the voice of the student body to the administration of the university. It should be a place where concerns about academic, social and cultural affairs are presented and discussed. It should represent the entire student body equally to the people who affect student life at Marshall.

Andy Skirpan,
Huntington senior

They should be more active and get the students involved in campus affairs. I think they ought to work on their public relations, because half the students don't know what's going on.

(Students were interviewed randomly and photographed by Dona Young)

Our Readers Speak

Why are you reading this letter?

Did you choose to of your own free will? Or were you determined to read this by a chain of events that began before you were born?

You can decide for yourself.

Student Government is sponsoring a series of debates, the first of which will be on the subject "Free Will vs. Determinism." Dr. Donald Chezik, chairman of the Department of Psychology, and Dr. James Laux, assistant professor of speech, will debate this Tuesday at 2 p.m. in Corbly Hall Room 105.

Student Government seeks to provide learning experiences for students, and that is why we are beginning this series of debates, which will cover issues from abortion to freedom of the press to nuclear arms to legalization of marijuana.

But we need student attendance and participation to make this series a success.

Dr. Chezik and Dr. Laux are informed and experienced debaters, and they will be discussing a subject which is relevant to everyone.

No student should go through college without hearing a few good, thought-provoking debates, and that is what Student Government will be providing with this series.

More educational activities and a better academic environment here at Marshall are what we're after. I hope as many people as possible attend this debate and help kick off this series successfully.

Sincerely,
Richard Sullivan

Students file for SGA elections

Eight students, including the student body vice president and four student senators, filed Thursday to run on the presidential and vice presidential ticket for the April 5 Student Government Association elections.

Sen. Sammi S. Parrish, Huntington sophomore, and her running mate Sen. Mark F. Underwood, Huntington sophomore, were the first pair to enter the race for the top posts.

Two residence hall, two off-campus, four commuter and the University Heights senate seats also are up for election.

Filing for residence hall senate positions were Richard G.

Incumbent Lynn King, Huntington sophomore, was the only person filing for the University Heights position.

Gov. kicks off voter drive

By Robin Ratliff
Staff Writer

Gov. Jay Rockefeller kicked off his student voter registration drive yesterday by signing a proclamation declaring March 25-31 student voter registration week.

"The governor should be commended in his effort to promote governmental participation in the election process. Today is just the beginning for students across the state to become involved in voter registration, in order that we may have a stronger voice in our government," Joseph Trembly, Vienna sophomore, said.

The governor was detained was for approximately 30 minutes before the ceremony began.

"I felt that this was such an important event that I would hope that the tardiness of the governor would not be a reflection on his sincerity to voter registration and the people of this state," Trembly, a vice-president of Young Democrats, said.

"The governor exhibits in this, a false sense of student leadership even though he hasn't met our needs in the past," Ken Caldabaugh, Wheeling senior and another vice president for Young Democrats, said. "The governor's tardiness graphically represents his insincerity."

English qualifying exam scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday

The qualifying examination for English Composition will be given for the last time this semester Saturday at 9 a.m. in Corbly Hall 353.

Students taking the exam will have two hours to complete their compositions. Students must bring their Marshall I.D.'s, dictionaries, paper line-guides, and pens. No prior registration is necessary.

A list of topics will be given to students before the examination, and they may choose from those topics listed under each student's major or minor fields.

Results of the examination will be available in the dean's office of each student's college in about one month.

Young Democrats host McGraw

By Michael Fanning
Staff Writer

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Senate President Warren McGraw will be out to prove his record of support for higher education at today's "Election '84 Awareness Series," sponsored by Marshall Young Democrats, Larry George, McGraw's local campaign coordinator, said.

McGraw will speak at noon in the Alumni Lounge at Memorial Student Center. In addition to discussing his political views McGraw will respond to a charge by Greg Icenhower, Young Democrats president, that McGraw is not known as a strong supporter of higher education.

"One reason we wanted to bring McGraw here," Icenhower said, "is to see if he could identify the extent of his support of higher education."

Although McGraw wasn't available for comment, George said McGraw has a proven record of support for higher education.

McGraw's position as senate president has kept his support for higher education quiet, said George.

As president, George said, it would be inappropriate for McGraw to advocate or oppose any bills introduced in the senate or express his views.

Nevertheless, George said McGraw helped provide the leadership to pass a bill, which authorizes a $15 million bonding authority to provide funds for renovating or constructing Marshall athletic facilities.

McGraw also was instrumental in passing a 7.5 percent across the board faculty pay increase, George said.

"It is essential for gubernatorial candidates to show support for higher education," Icenhower, Winfield sophomore, said.

IT'S SPRING! And, as you know, in the Spring our fancy lightly turns to thoughts of... PERCUSSION ENSEMBLE CONCERTS.

This year's SPRING SWING THING will feature guest soloist Ed Soph, formerly the drummer with the Stan Kenton and Woody Herman bands. Ed will be performing on a number of tunes, but his Biggy is a Drum Set Concerto. Yep, that's right, a concerto for a drum set. Not one of those old boring piano or violin concertos, not on your life. We're talkin' Drum Set Concerto.

But that's not all. The first 500 people thru the door will also get a chance to hear selections from Mexico, the Orient, Latin America and musical tributes to Woody Woodpecker (one of the most famous percussionists ever) and the Pinball God, Zeftag.

Parrish eager for spring football practice

By Tom Alulse
Staff Writer

Yes, there is sports after Marshall basketball.

Just ask first-year head football coach Stan Parrish, who is eagerly awaiting spring drills which begin Monday at Fairfield Stadium.

Eighty-five players will be under Parrish's tutelage and the scrutinizing eye of the Marshall head coach and his crop of assistants.

"In a nutshell, we'll see who can play and who can't play," Parrish said.

The Herd will practice from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the stadium. Friday will be a scrimmage day, Parrish said, if so desired.

Spring practice culminates April 27 with the annual Green-White game scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Fairfield Stadium.

All practices are open to the public.

The Herd, 4-7 in 1983 and coming off its best season since 1976 in terms of victories, returns nine starters on offense and eight on defense.

"The kids are pretty excited about what we're going to be doing," Parrish said.

That's throw the football.

Parrish, who came to Marshall from Purdue where he was the Boilermakers' quarterback coach, favors traveling the air route when moving the football and plans to equip the Herd with a controlled passing attack via different offensive formations.

"Throwing the football is fun," Parrish said, "it's sort of like shooting a basketball."

Marshall will have both of its starting receivers back from last fall, Billy Hynus and Brian Swisher, but Parrish will have to find a replacement for MU's all-time leading rusher, Larry Fourqurean.

"We lost an outstanding tailback," he said. "We'll have to find out what the running backs on campus now can do."

Robert Surratt, a junior college transfer who will be back for another season, amassed 381 yards (70 carries) and scored five touchdowns to back Fourqurean. He will enter spring practice as the No. 1 tailback.

Randy Clarkson, who accumulated 171 yards and scored a touchdown, begins the spring as the starter at fullback.

Fullback Mike Cacioppo, a junior college transfer who rushed 153 yards last season on 51 attempts, left school because of academic deficiencies.

Swisher caught 32 passes for 560 yards and three touchdowns last year to lead Herd receivers, while Hynus was a distant second with 20 receptions and 255 yards.

"We'll find out what our receivers can do in our structure and, probably more than any other position, we'll have to see what the quarterbacks can do," Parrish said.

Carl Fodor, who shared playing time with Dan Patterson and Tim Kendrick last fall, opens spring drills at quarterback.

The Weirton sophomore passed for 802 yards and four touchdowns in 1983, completing 60 of 127 attempts (47.2 percent), and threw eight interceptions.

Fodor has last fall's entire starting offensive line back for protection along with tight end Ken Conway, who caught 11 passes for 89 yards.

The defensive line also remains intact. Linebacker Terry Echols, the Herd's leading tackler, has completed his eligibility and the defensive secondary will be without starters Eugene Pertee and Glenn Bates, an all-conference choice last season.

Pat Velarde, the nation's leading punter among Division I-AA schools in 1983, is also gone.

"The defensive secondary is an area we'll really have to evaluate," Parrish said.

"We hope to find the top 44 players to begin the fall with and walk out next fall and be a winning football team."

Tracksters go outdoors

Ten teams in relays

Ten teams will compete Saturday when the Marshall University men's track team hosts the Early Bird Relays at the MU track.

The competition begins at 10 a.m. with field events, which will conclude by 12:30 p.m., followed by the running events.

Marshall Coach Rod O'Donnell said the team's outlook for its first outdoor meet of the season is good but Marshall's lack of depth may hurt the squad's chances of a high finish.

Last year the Herd lost to West Virginia by only two points but O'Donnell said he felt the Herd will probably not do as well this year against WVU because of lack of depth. O'Donnell said he hopes for Marshall to finish among the upper three teams.

Other teams participating are Kent State, Ohio University, West Virginia State, Glenville State, Ashland College, Rio Grande and the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown.

Marshall, short on all-important sprinters, will have to depend on the field team for points and that means shotputter Shaun McWhorter, O'Donnell said.

McWhorter will be the top shotputter at the meet, and he throws better outdoors, O'Donnell said.

Golfers travel to Duke Classic

By Michael Fanning

Staff Writer

Marshall golfers will stroke through a tough course against stiff competition this weekend at the Iron Duke Classic tournament in Durham, N.C., according to Joe Feaganes, team coach.

Herd golfers will compete against 24 teams at the tournament. The strongest of the teams, Feaganes said, will be Wake Forest, North Carolina, South Carolina, Furman and Duke.

Feaganes said his team would be fortunate to place eighth or tenth against the high-caliber tournament competition.

"You don't have to win to do well," Feaganes said. "So if we finish tenth it would be a good showing."

Competing for Marshall at the Iron Duke Classic will be Gary Rusnak, Mike Tennant, Ty Neal, Mike Voltz and Kelly Maxwell.

Women's track team opens season

By Linda L. Jones

Staff Writer

Of the 16 women competing on Marshall's women track team, Saturday's meet will be the first college-level meet for eleven of them.

Arlene Stooke, women's track coach, feels she will know how the team will do this season after the first meet because so many of the women are new.

The outstanding Marshall tracksters for this meet, according to Stooke are three-year track member Paula S. Boone, who will compete in discus, shot put and javelin; Diana Calhoun, who will compete in hurdles and sprints and is a two-year track member; and Jaki Copeland, who runs the 400-meter and 800-meter dash and is a first-year track member.

"It is unusual to participate in a women's sport for four years," said Stooke, who sees very few women stay with it.

Since track is mostly a walk-on sport, interests and priorities change and the women leave to do other things, Stooke said, although those with scholarships usually remain on the team the four years.

As for the walk-ons who do stay with it, "It's true enjoyment for those people," Stooke said. She said she feels the ones who stay do so for personal satisfaction.

Lady Herd's season: one full of memories

By Kennie Bass
Staff Writer

One slogan on a women's basketball practice shirt declared, "We Remember, 10-19, 1982-83."

They certainly did.

Marshall University's Lady Herd showed it had a very good memory by almost reversing its final won-loss record from last year to this. The squad went from 10-19 to 18-10, attaining the first winning record for the program under head coach Judy Southard.

The year started well. MU rattled off wins over Concord, West Virginia State and West Virginia Tech (2) to have a 4-0 record. It also won the Marshall Thanksgiving Invitational.

But then the Lady Herd ran into a roadblock in the form of 6-7 West Virginia University center Georgeann Wells. Marshall led the Lady Mountaineers at halftime, but couldn't hold on for the win.

Southard's team rebounded from the loss to get wins over Glenville and North Carolina A&T to run its record to 6-1. But then the slump hit. MU dropped four games to Morehead, Virginia Tech, Radford (Va.) and McNeese State (La.). The Lady Herd snapped out of its doldrums, however, in the second round of the Central Florida Holiday Classic, beating Okla-holma City and Western Carolina to finish fifth in the tourney.

Marshall's record was now 8-5, but the "real" season was just beginning.

MU dropped its first Southern Conference game to East Tennessee State, but was able to bounce back with wins over Appalachian State, South Carolina and Western Carolina. The win over South Carolina was described by Southard as her biggest of her career.

Now 11-6, the team traveled to Chattanooga, where it lost to the Lady Mocs. Marshall then came back to the Henderson Center where it beat nationally-ranked NAIA team University of Charleston, Western Carolina and UT-C.

At the time, the Lady Mocs were ranked 18th in the nation among Division I schools. MU, now with a 14-7 record, traveled to Johnson City, Tenn., where it was beaten again by ETSU.

The Lady Herd then beat Appy State and headed off to Greenville, N.C. to play in the Lady Pirate Classic at East Carolina.

Marshall defeated ECU in the first round and then played 10th-ranked Cheyney State (Pa.) in the finals.

MU trailed by just one at the half, but couldn't keep up with the Lady Wolves the final 20 minutes and lost.

Playing its last regular season home game, Marshall was able to defeat Kentucky State to end the season at 17-9.

In SC tournament play, MU beat Furman to reach the final four, but was defeated in the semifinal round by ETSU, finishing third in the SC.

It was the season of Karen Pelphrey. She led MU in almost every offensive category, including a scoring average of 25.1 points a game -- eighth in the country.

Pelphrey scored a record-breaking 48 points one game and broke the single-season record, and the career scoring record.
