ETSU doctor selected as medical dean

By Michael Kennedy
Reporter

Dr. Lester R. Bryant, chairman of surgery at East Tennessee State University, has been selected as the new dean of the School of Medicine, Marshall President Dale F. Nitzschke announced yesterday.

Nitzschke met with Gov. Arch A. Moore, Jr. to discuss the hiring of Bryant as an exception to Executive Order 1-85 which placed a freeze on state hiring and purchases.

"I certainly appreciate Governor Moore's action in making this an exception to the hiring freeze," Nitzschke said. "The School of Medicine dean position is of key importance to Marshall University. I'm also pleased with and appreciative of the cooperation and assistance we received from the Board of Regents staff throughout this process."

Bryant is expected to assume the position about July 1, Nitzschke said. He will succeed Dr. Robert W. Coon, who is retiring after holding the position since 1976. Like Coon, Bryant will also be Marshall's vice president for health sciences.

According to Nitzschke, Bryant was Marshall's first choice for the position. The search committee set up to look for the school's new dean had previously narrowed the field to three candidates.

"Because he was one of the first department chairmen appointed at the East Tennessee School of Medicine, he is also familiar with the special problems of a developing medical school," said Nitzschke.

Bryant said the size of the community and the size and youth of the school were major considerations in his decision to come to Marshall.

"The School of Medicine is still a young school where I will have an opportunity to help it develop, help it reach its maximum potential in a reasonable number of years," he said.

Bryant has been professor and chairman of surgery at ETSU since 1977. Previously, he held positions at Louisiana State University Medical Center, the University of Kentucky College of Medicine and Medical Center, and the University of Cincinnati.

'Academic team' possible by fall

By Burgetta Eplin
Staff Editor

Guidelines for the proposed "Academic Team," a program designed to create the academic parallel of an athletic squad, will be ready within two weeks and possibly could be implemented by fall 1985, according to David Gilmore, executive assistant to the president.

Gilmore said most of the details already have been decided by university officials, though nothing has been officially recorded as the "Academic Team" guidelines.

Members of the 'A-Team' will be given full scholarships and possibly be required to live on campus, in return for maintaining quality grades and representing the university at community, cultural and educational events. "They will be a team," he said, with the visibility and opportunities given an athletic team.

The program will cost "hundreds of thousands of dollars," Gilmore said, but the money will come primarily from private sources, with no state scholarship funds being used.

Twenty students a year will be inducted into the 'A-Team,' making it possible to have 80 students in the program at one time. The university will actively recruit top students from all over the country and also accept applications. Gilmore said recruiting won't be difficult because Marshall has teaching alumni across the nation and could easily develop a network in which news of good students would travel.

"Teacher recommendations will be a large part" of recruitment, Gilmore said.

Criteria that will be considered when choosing 'A-Team' members are grade point average, character, leadership, and a well-rounded education, Gilmore said.

The university reserves the right to revoke 'A-Team' membership if students "don't keep their end of the bargain," he said.

"Recognizing the primary purpose of a university — academic excellence" is the purpose behind the program, Gilmore said.

"It's easy to get side-tracked with the more visible things."

Court OKs back pay claim

By Randy Vealey
Staff Writer

A Marshall University assistant professor is one step closer to receiving almost $8,000 in back pay in response to a grievance she filed last year.

The West Virginia Court of Claims recommended Tuesday to Governor Arch Moore's office that $7,886 in back pay be awarded to Janet Dooley, assistant professor of journalism.

The Governor's office will submit the claim to the 1985 West Virginia Legislature for approval to include in its 1985 operating budget. The attorney for the West Virginia Board of Regents did not contest the award.

The recommendation by the court is in response to a complaint Dooley resolved through Marshall's grievance procedure.

Dooley said the court's award was "down to the penny" of what she had requested as recompense for her grievance.

State law requires that claims of back pay, such as Dooley's grievance led to, must be reviewed by the Court of Claims before they may be awarded. Dooley's grievance asked for a promotion from instructor to assistant professor plus five years back pay at a retroactive status as an assistant professor.

Nitzschke notified Dooley Dec. 4 in a letter that she was in fact an assistant professor and had been for five years. He also said he would recommend his approval of her back pay to the BOR.

Dooley's claim that she was paid at a lower salary than advertised although she met the qualifications for the position advertised was agreed to by all concerned parties. "Nobody objected to anything at the Court of Claims," she said.

"Of course I'm glad. But I'm still not planning on having it (the award) in my hand for awhile though. It still has to be approved in the Legislature's budget," she said.

Poll finds education in W.Va. inadequate

CHARLESTON — Fewer than a fourth of the state's residents think education quality at West Virginia's schools and colleges is better than is available in other states, according to a statewide poll released Wednesday.

education quality at West Virginia's schools and colleges is better than is available in other states, according to a statewide poll released Wednesday.

And West Virginians are overwhelmingly willing to pay more taxes to improve the quality of their local public schools, the latest West Virginia Poll shows.

A plurality of respondents to the poll prefer an increase in taxes on business and industry or on sales to finance public school improvements.

Most state residents also believe that public school teachers should be permitted collective bargaining rights for wages and benefits, the poll shows, and a slightly smaller majority said law should require counties to negotiate with the instructors.

The West Virginia Poll is a scientific survey of public opinion sponsored by The Associated Press, the Charleston Daily Mail and WSAZ Television 3. It is conducted by Ryan-Repass Research Inc. of Charleston. Telephone interviews were conducted with a random sample of 503 West Virginians between Jan. 28 and Jan. 30.

Steel company agrees to control leakage from site

CLARKSBURG — Sharon Steel Corp., which left tons of hazardous waste behind when it closed its Fairmont coke works in 1979, has agreed to a consent decree ordering it to control leakage from the site, officials said Wednesday.

The decree, signed by U.S. District Judge William Kidd, requires Sharon to obtain a state permit setting limits on the pollution in water running off the plant's grounds.

The plant, part of the industrial empire of financier Victor Posner, closed in 1979 after what government officials described as years of flagrant pollution. Sharon was facing $300 million in federal pollution fines, but the Environmental Protection Agency agreed in 1982 to drop the fines if the steelmaker handled the waste cleanup itself.

Alde says Moore planning war against New River flies

CHARLESTON — The Moore administration is working on a program to combat black fly infestation along the New River, says gubernatorial aide Mike Fotos.

Gov. Arch Moore's program probably won't be started this spring, however, Fotos said.

"The governor has said it's time we had an administration that did something active to address the problem," Fotos said. "Tourism is a very high-priority item to us. He's very interested in doing something about the black fly."

Community leaders in towns along the river have complained that black flies are driving tourists from the area. The pesky insects swarm along the river front during the summer.

Dr. James Amrine of West Virginia University has proposed spraying a bacteria on the river to kill the insects' eggs, but there has been some opposition to the idea for environmental reasons. Amrine insists the spray is safe for fish and water fowl.

Stockman testimony meets no comment

WASHINGTON — The White House declined to comment Wednesday on Budget Director David Stockman's congressional testimony that military leaders care more about their pensions than they do about national security — a statement Stockman said would probably get him "in hot water."

"The president is deeply appreciative of the sacrifice and contribution of the men and women in uniform," White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters.

"I point out to you that Stockman, in his testimony yesterday, said he was expressing a personal opinion probably not shared by the president. Other than that, I will have no comment. Try as you might, you will not get a comment."

Speakes said his own statement represented "the president's views."

He declined to answer when asked if Stockman would remain in his job, but cautioned reporters they should not read any implications into that refusal to comment.

Vigilante pleads innocent

NEW YORK — Bernhard Hugo Goetz Wednesday pleaded innocent to charges of illegal weapons possession in connection with the shootings of four young men on a subway train last December.

Judge Stephen G. Crane reduced Goetz' bail from $50,000 to $5,000 cash and set a hearing for Feb. 27.

Hundreds of protesters demonstrated outside the courtroom, chanting slogans which could be heard inside, such as, "Bernhard Goetz, you can't hide, we charge you with genocide."

The hearing took a bit more than 15 minutes. Goetz said one word; when asked whether he was in fact Bernhard Hugo Goetz, he replied, "Yes."

A grand jury had charged the 37-year-old Goetz with three counts of illegal weapons possession, declining to indict him on attempted murder charges.

Meanwhile, a second lawsuit has been filed against Goetz in connection with the shootings. Troy Canty, 18, filed a $5 million suit alleging Goetz shot him "without just cause or provocation."

Amadeus, A Passage to India each receive 11 nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Amadeus," the drama of Mozart's tormented final years, and "A Passage to India," the saga of natives vs. their British rulers in 1920s India, scored a front-running 11 nominations apiece for the 57th Academy Awards Wednesday.

"The Killing Fields," a story of an American correspondent and his native assistant during the Cambodian war, and "Places in the Heart," a young widow's struggle to keep her farm and family in depression Texas, followed in the Oscar nominations with seven each.

All four films were nominated for best picture of 1984, along with "A Soldier's Story," a murder mystery among black soldiers at a World War II Army camp.

"Amadeus" contributed two best-actor nominations for its players — F. Murray Abraham and Tom Hulce.

Finns will return missile fragments

HELSINKI, Finland — Finland said Wednesday it will return to the Soviet Union wreckage of a wayward Soviet target missile that crashed into a frozen lake in Finnish Lapland on Dec. 28.

The Finnish Foreign Ministry said the debris would be sent to the Soviet Union by train by the end of the week.

President Mauno Koivisto and the ministry acceded to a Soviet request to return the parts one day after Koivisto came back from a round-the-world vacation trip. The president has the final say in Finland's foreign policy and in its delicate relations with its Soviet neighbor.

The Finns asked the Kremlin to compensate them for the "direct costs" of retrieving the missile fragments. Divers and helicopters working under extreme weather conditions recovered the missile debris in a remote area near the Soviet border in the bed of a 40-foot lake.

Finnish Air Force experts were still examining the missile's nose, engine, main body, tail and guidance system at a main depot in central Finland.

But Maj. Lars Olof Fredriksson said smooth handling of the incident was more important than continued scrutiny of the wreckage, which was found to be from an unarmed, jet-powered aerial target at least 15 years old.

Pravda director to confirm Chernenko illness via TV

ROME — The state-run Italian television network said Wednesday it had interviewed a leading Soviet journalist who confirmed that Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko is ill.

The state-run television network, RAI-1, said that Viktor Afanasiev, director of the Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, "confirmed the illness of Chernenko" during an interview.

The network gave no other details, nor did it provide exact quotes, but said the interview would be broadcast later Wednesday (at 5 p.m. EST) on a special late-night news program.

Conflicting reports arise from Israeli truck bomb

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanon's state radio said Wednesday that more than 100 Israeli soldiers were killed or wounded in a truck bombing in south Lebanon, but reporters in the area and Israeli military sources said the report was false.

Apparently the report arose from confusion over an apparent suicide car bombing on Tuesday that Israeli officials said wounded 10 soldiers of the occupation force near the Bourj Al-Shemali Palestinian refugee camp outside the southern port city of Tyre.

A second attack Tuesday in the same area injured two more Israeli soldiers, according to the military command in Tel Aviv.

Nabih Berri, a Shiite militia leader who is Lebanon's state minister for south Lebanon, also used the figure of more than 100 killed or wounded, referring to the Tuesday attack in a speech Wednesday.

But reporters in south Lebanon denied the casualty toll was that high and said there had been no truck bombing at all Wednesday. Israeli officials in Tel Aviv and in Lebanon insisted that the truck bombing Tuesday had injured only 10 soldiers.

Opinion

New academic team deserves high score

While university athletes get much attention, scholarships, and the opportunity to represent Marshall outside the campus, scholars on campus go virtually unnoticed and mostly unrewarded.

See related story, Page 1

Refocusing attention on academic excellence, the primary purpose of a higher education institution, is why the university is in the process of creating an "Academic Team," according to David Gilmore, executive assistant to the president.

Now is certainly the time to emphasize academics in education and reward those who excel, while placing athletics in the background. President Reagan continues to propose cuts in student aid, and as higher education institutions begin to feel the economic strain more severely, having an academic-oriented student base will be essential.

Considerable emphasis is placed on athletics due to its high visibility, revenue-making potential and its place in student recruitment. The "A-Team" program also could be a recruiting tool, helping Marshall to be recognized as an academic-oriented university and bringing a following of quality students.

The Parthenon supports this attempt to recognize and reward academic excellence.

However, these prospective team members must be made aware of what they are getting into. They will be on display, having their academic performance evaluated and possibly criticized, just as athletes' performances are subject to public evaluation.

Gilmore said positive reinforcement between members of the 'A-team' would help combat any additional pressure they may feel. Counseling by mentors (faculty members on release time to serve as advisers and coordinators of the project) also would help the members cope with problems.

He said concern about faculty not wanting to give these labeled A-students poor grades would be unfounded. Marshall faculty are "sticky" about grading and academic excellence and have an obligation to themselves, he said.

At this time of proposed domestic budget cuts and high emphasis on athletics, any attempt to promote and reward academic excellence should be supported.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

When snakes trip.

Recht decision cannot be ignored

Today, education is at the crossroads to the future. While history tells us education has received this kind of scrutiny and criticism in the past, (for example in 1957 after the Russians launched Sputnik) the social and economic ramifications surrounding educational reform are greater today than at any time in our history.

Guest Commentary

Much has been written about the Recht decision in West Virginia. The essence of that decision is that all of West Virginia's children are entitled to equal educational opportunity regardless of their county of residence. Through state equalization, "poorer" counties are expected to provide the same quality of education as "richer" counties. In my opinion, this is a most significant judicial decision — one with national implications. The intent of the Recht decision is equal educational opportunity. I believe a sound educational system is the cornerstone for the revitalization of West Virginia's economy. I hope the West Virginia Legislature will look beyond the initial cost of implementing the Recht decision to the ultimate cost of not implementing it. We will never attract new industry to the state unless we can provide an educated labor force. We are currently failing in that essential mission. It is only through public support that we can ever hope to demonstrate to those in decision-making positions in industry that West Virginia is indeed an environment for economic growth and prosperity. It really is time for the legislative leadership to put aside inflammatory rhetoric and to make education the bipartisan priority of all West Virginians.

The College of Education at Marshall University is also responding to the implementation of the Recht decision and the West Virginia State Department of Education's Master Plan.

We have a variety of writing subcommittees evaluating our present teacher training programs and designing new programs to meet the intent of the state plan. Faculty in the College of Education are using their best collective professional judgement and deciding what competencies are necessary to produce quality teachers. The key word here is quality. We want Marshall University's College of Education to be known as the best College of Education not only in West Virginia, but in our part of the country.

We are determined to offer to West Virginia's young people the finest teacher education and professional preparation in our region. How will that affect the teaching profession in general? I'm afraid that's only one small step. Education is in trouble and we need the help of the community and the Legislature so that we can attract the very best and the very brightest to the teaching profession.

We must also provide assistance to teacher preparation programs. Colleges of Education must no longer be considered the stepchildren on university campuses. We must get a greater share of the resources in recognition of the added costs of preparing quality teachers. Furthermore, we must be allowed the flexibility to seriously and rigorously examine what we do, with the freedom to become more responsive and proactive to the challenges and changes of American society in the 1980s and 1990s.

We at Marshall University's College of Education are ready to accept these challenges. We are up to the task.

Allen A. Mori,
Dean, College of Education

Mori became dean of Marshall's College of Education in October and was formerly an education professor at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Event two years in the making

12 states will recruit teachers at MU consortium

By Cheryl Persinger
Reporter

Helping teachers get jobs is the most important reason for the upcoming teachers' recruitment consortium, according to Linda D. Olesen, assistant director of Career Planning and Placement.

The consortium, to be held at Marshall March 6, is a group of representatives from about 100 counties and school districts from 12 states, Olesen said. "I've been here for two and a half years, and it is something I've wanted to do."

The consortium is open to all seniors enrolled in the College of Education, off-campus student teachers, and alumni.

Olesen said there will be approximately 150 recruiters, and 200 students, and this should give potential teachers an opportunity to interview with a greater number of school systems in a more concentrated period of time.

The consortium is not a sudden process. "This concept has been building for two years," she said. "It was formalized last spring. Then, when Dr. Allen Mori, dean of the College of Education, came on the scene the project was solidified. I think it was just perfect timing."

The project required a lot of time on the part of the Career Placement Center, Olesen said. The registration deadline for all participants is Feb. 11, but the actual consortium is not until March 6.

"We hope to make this an annual event," Olesen said. "For the past 12 years the consortium has been held in Charleston, but response from area counties has been tremendous. I can attribute some of that support to Ohio." Ohio will be represented by 28 school districts. The personnel coming to recruit will be conducting interviews, and hiring on the spot, she said. Other states that will be represented are Maryland, Delaware, Florida, Kentucky, Texas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, and Louisiana, as well as the District of Columbia.

Dean Mori said he contacted representatives in Nevada, but they were unable to attend. "They promised to keep our students in mind for future positions," he said.

Recruiting will be conducted in the W. Don Morris Room.

Olesen said that all students are officially excused from teaching assignments in order to participate in the program. "It is set up, so that each student will be able to interview with 15 different schools. Students who don't get their first choice of schools can add to their schedules the day of the consortium."

She said cancellations or time changes will be possible.

Olesen said she expects this first consortium to be a success. "It would not be a success without the help of the Computer Center staff, College of Education, Student Affairs, Student Center staff, and of course, the students enrolled in the teachers' education program."

Disabled students need help in emergency evacuations three volunteers in each of their classes to help in the case of an evacuation."

"We have the responsibility to provide the means for evacuation, but the students have the responsibility to know where the exits are and have an idea of how to get out."

Teachers need to think about how their mobility-impaired students can get out in case of an emergency.

Stephen Hensley

"We need to be aware of these problems in advance," Stephen Hensley, assistant dean for student development, said. "Teachers need to think about how their mobility impaired students can get out in the case of an emergency. This is important at the beginning of the semester in order to be prepared."

The Huntington Fire Department advises students in wheelchairs to transfer to a straight-back chair to be carried out. The department also recommends handicapped students to go to a clear stairwell and wait for department personnel assistance.

Hensley said, "Disabled students and their teachers should find two or

According to Hensley, disabled students in Smith Hall have two choices during evacuation; they can be carried down the stairs or try to take the unreliable elevator. Hensley added most disabled students are independent and capable of getting themselves out.

Penney Hall, Spencer junior, said "If you're on the second or third floor, evacuation is fairly easy because you only have two or three flights of stairs to go down. In the taller buildings like Towers that have 10 or more stories it would be harder to carry someone down. Most disabled students live on the first floor of the dorms but have friends on the upper floors and there's always a risk while they're visiting."

Superdance

Registration continues through Friday

By Ellen M. Varner
Staff Writer

Registration for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Superdance is being conducted in Memorial Student Center through Friday, according to Tammy Rice, Student Government Association vice-president.

Sponsored by the SGA, registration for the Superdance is from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. weekdays in the student center lobby, Rice said. The dance will begin in the Don Morris Room of MSC at 7 p.m. Feb. 22 and last until 7 p.m. Feb. 23.

"We are working with the Hall Advisory Councils in each of the residence halls, and are planning to set up tables in the lobbies for registration," Rice said "However, we have no dates set at this time."

A registration fee of $2 must be paid before obtaining a registration packet and a minimum of $15 donations must be presented at the time of the dance, Rice said.

"If you don't have the $15 in donations, you can still dance by paying a $2 fee. However, you will not be eligible for the prizes," Rice said.

Not revealing the grand prize, she said some of the prizes include a computer, a weekend get-away trip at the Charleston Marriot, and an audio-visual system.

Prizes for the first, second and third place winners will be awarded based on the total amount of donations brought in by the individuals, Rice said.

"Other prizes will be awarded every hour based on contests," she said.

Rice said there will be two main contests for groups and organizations, such as the Greeks, based on the total number of people dancing for their group and also the most volunteering and dancing.

"Presently, we only have about 22-23 people registered to dance and we need a lot more!" she said.

Rice said they also will need a lot of volunteers during the dance.

"We will have no problem finding a job for anyone who wants to help out-doing errands, preparing food and judging contests are just some of the things to do," Rice said.

Anyone interested in volunteering can call the SGA office at 696-6435.

Parents surveyed on change

Visitation policy meets opposition

By Rebekah J. Greene
Reporter

A request by the Residence Life Office for a parents' survey of the proposed change in the 24-hour visitation policy was opposed Tuesday by the Student Senate Adviser Dr. Joseph M. Stone and several student senators in the Senate meeting.

Stone and the senators said they believe the parental survey was an administrative stalling tactic.

Stone said changes have been made in the past, such as allowing beer in the residence halls, without polling the parents of students who live there.

"Maybe Residence Life should also survey Huntington ministers on their opinion of this change," he said.

Residence Life Director Don E.

Robertson was at the meeting and answered questions concerning the matter.

"The ultimate decision concerning this lies with Student Affairs and Residence Life," Robertson said. He added their combined recommendation would be sent to President Nitzschke for approval.

Assistant Residence Life Director Gary F. Kimble said the reason for the additional survey is because "the university has an image to protect in terms of recruitment."

Senate President Robert W. Bennett, So. Charleston senior, suggested a senate-sponsored forum to discuss this issue with Residence Life and the Vice-President of Student Affairs, Dr. Nell C. Bailey.

In other action, a new off-campus senator was sworn in; the Senate agreed to partially subsidize a campus crime watch program, and decided not to fund a trip by the Marshall University Geological Society.

By a vote of 8-0 and six abstentions, Bill 27, which provides up to $100 to the Campus Crime Watch Program, passed first reading and will be subject to final senate approval next week.

The M.U.G.S. bill, to provide $300 for transportation costs for a field trip, was unanimously defeated.

"Basically, I feel this bill was defeated because the Senate felt that the amount requested for this trip did not benefit enough students to warrant its passage," said Bennett.

Sen. James A. Davis, Higginsville, Mo. junior, was sworn in as the newly appointed off-campus senator.

News briefs

Elevator in Smith still not working

The cause of the broken elevator in Smith Hall is being determined by the Otis Elevator Company, according to Harry E. Long, director of plant and administrative operations.

The elevator, which has been inoperative since Monday, is the only means for handicapped students to get to the upper floors of Smith Hall.

As of Wednesday morning the cause of the elevator being broken was unknown, but repairs were being made, Long said.

Tests prove prof who fainted OK

Dr. Nicholas C. Kontos, associate professor of economics, fainted during his 9 a.m. class and was taken to the hospital for tests. "I went to class. I felt nauseated. I passed out," he said.

Kontos said tests, including an electrocardiogram, revealed no abnormalities, but doctors suspect stomach or digestive system troubles. He said he feels fine and has had no further medical problems.

Voice recital set for music senior

Kevin Hardy, Charleston senior and candidate for a Bachelor's Degree in music education, will present a voice recital Friday at 8 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall.

He will sing a program of Schumann's "Dichterliebe I-V" and Vaughan-Williams' "Songs of Travel I, II and III".

Hardy has participated in the Symphonic Choir, Black Mass Choir and Opera Workshop.

The program is open to the public and free.

Unpaid tickets no longer ignored

The city of Huntington will no longer ignore delinquent MU parking tickets, according to Bonnie Lytle, assistant director for parking and administrative services.

Standard procedure is that after seven days MU Public Safety sends the names on all unpaid parking tickets to the city. The city is then in charge of collecting. Until last semester little action had been taken, she said.

Notices were sent out last semester to those people holding delinquent tickets; after seven days those people were subject to warrants. No warrants have been issued so far, but, according to Lytle, the city "will take further action against those who ignore the initial mailings."

The city will send out "hot sheets" and cars on these lists are subject to towing or immobilization until the tickets are paid.

Crime Watch Program may soon be implemented

By Pammie Chandler
Reporter

Long-term dreams of establishing a Campus Crime Watch Program may become a reality for the Student Government Association before the end of the spring term.

Student Government President Mark Rhodes said, "This is just an example of how long it takes to put a plan into action. The idea originated more than a year ago."

Crime Watch was the brainstorm of Twin Towers East's Hall Advisory Council when Rhodes was serving as a residence hall senator. During his campaign for SGA president, he pledged to further the idea and to gain funding for it.

"With SGA sponsoring the Crime Watch Program, there is a larger ability to expand the program. We have gained HERF funding of $800 for communications equipment," Rhodes said.

Campus Crime Watch will consist of student volunteers equipped with walkie-talkies and some form of identification. They will be stationed throughout various sections of campus.

The students will have no formal authorization but will be in direct contact with University Security, which will act as a base station.

"Campus Crime Watch will give students a sense of security by their mere visibility. We hope to emphasize the time before, and just following night classes," according to Rhodes.

The program will aid security in becoming more visible, serve as a deterrent to potential criminals and provide students and faculty with a sense of safety.

"We hope the program will establish a more cooperative relationship between students and public safety," Rhodes said.

The Student Government Association, in conjunction with the Criminal Justice Department, will be recruiting interested students to help with Crime Watch.

ROTC scholarship applicants triple, patriotism cited as factor

By Michael Kennedy
Reporter

The number of students applying for ROTC scholarships has more than tripled this year, according to Lt. Col. Harry B. Beam, chairman of the Department of Military Science.

Beam said 28 applications for four-year scholarships have been made so far this academic year compared to seven or eight for a similar period last year.

He attributes the increase to a resurgence of patriotism he said was caused by America's performance in the 1984 scholarships may be awarded to Marshall students on a national basis.

This year 4,774 scholarships will be given out by Army ROTC: 1,450 four-year, 1,485 three-year, and 1,839 two-year scholarships.

The scholarships pay for tuition, books, fees and $100 per month for spending money.

Any student may apply for the scholarships as long as he or she has two years of college left, either undergraduate or graduate. Applicants need not be ROTC cadets, and filling out an application for a scholarship requires no commitment.

Both of those events (the winning performance by the U.S. at the 1984 Olympics and the successful invasion of Grenada) caused young people who were somewhat concerned about what they saw in the media about the Iranian crisis to renew their patriotism.

Lt. Col. Harry B. Beam
chairman of Department of Military Science

Olympics and the successful invasion of Grenada in 1983.

"Both of those events caused young people who were somewhat concerned about what they saw in the media about the Iranian crisis to renew their patriotism," said Beam. While he said the state of the economy "certainly has something to do with" the increase in scholarship applications, Beam said that economic considerations alone would not be likely to produce good cadets.

One four-year and eight two-year scholarships were awarded to Marshall students last year, and at least four more will be awarded this year at the department's discretion. More

"The only commitment is if they accept and receive a scholarship," said Beam.

To be competitive for a scholarship, Beam said, students should have a minimum grade point average of 2.5, although the rule is not ironclad.

Maj. David V. Soulsby, assistant professor of military science, served last year on the national board that selects scholarship recipients.

"We had everything from a guy with a 4.0 at MIT (Massachusetts Institute of Technology) to a guy with a 2.0 at Georgia Southern," he said.

Beam said those who apply for scholarships should know by mid-summer whether they have been awarded one.

Involvement, awareness goals of BUS

A brown bag seminar and leadership workshop are two new programs this semester sponsored by the Black United Students (BUS).

The first brown bag session, "Landlords and Tenants-Your Rights," is scheduled for 12:30-1:30 p.m. today in Memorial Student Center. Charles Scott, attorney for Marshall University students, will lead the discussion.

"The lunch will be held weekly to discuss the problems of students," BUS President Wadina Daniels said.

The leadership workshops are seminars that will deal with topics to be announced. Students from six colleges are participating in the first workshop on the weekend of April 13.

Another program sponsored by BUS is the Black Awareness Week in March.

"This week is to promote famous blacks and to celebrate being black," Daniels said.

Events scheduled for Black Awareness Week include performances by different black celebrities, a dance and a stepshow—a group of Greeks illustrating their togetherness through the use of dance steps.

Calendar

The Escalade (student publication) will be accepting papers for the 1984-85 edition until Feb. 29 in Harris Hall Room 415. For more information call Dr. Howard Slaatte in the Philosophy Dept.

Herd looks to get even with 'Dogs tonight

By Paul Carson
Staff Writer

The Henderson Center floor will be no place for the faint of heart tonight as The Citadel invades Huntington for a grudge match with the Thundering Herd.

The Herd's excursion onto the Bulldogs' turf Jan. 30 resulted in a 92-87 defeat, one of MU's few league losses on the road this season. And according to Coach Rick Huckabay, it was not a pretty sight; neither on the court or off.

The second year Marshall coach said in addition to the team's performance on the court, the behavior of The Citadel crowd could hardly be mistaken for family entertainment.

He said signs were displayed in McCalister Field House that night bearing slogans ranging from ridiculous comments about Tom Curry to vulgar comments about himself.

"But that's their fans," Huckabay said. "We've got class fans. I can't believe they would ever lower themselves to that level."

He said he hesitated to mention the Herd's treatment at The Citadel because he does not want other teams to be treated in Huntington as the Herd has been treated there and elsewhere on the conference road.

Coming off of Monday's blowout victory at Furman, however, Huckabay and company may need little incentive, as the Herd continues its steady improvement behind freshmen Skip Henderson and Tom Curry.

Henderson continues his assault on the league's freshman of the year award. The Cartersville, Ga., guard has scored in double figures the last 10 consecutive games, and tallied 25 in the last three.

Curry appeared to come into his own against the Paladins, scoring 20 points and dominating the game in the early going as the Herd built a 20-point lead it never relinquished.

Huckabay said Curry's improvement has been steady and will continue. He said the attention bestowed on the blue-chip freshman since his arrival in Huntington has slowed his progress, but hardly stopped it.

"Has he felt the pressure?" Huck asked rhetorically. "Why do you think he plays so well on the road. He wants to play good in front of the home crowd so bad, he tries too hard."

Recruiting starts long before the name goes on the paper

By Greg Stone
Staff Writer

The whole process starts when the athlete is a sophomore or junior in high school. College coaches watch him from the stands at summer basketball camps, scribbling down his name from the back of his jersey.

By the time he is a senior, if he is fortunate enough to still hold the interest of the school, the coaching staff will call him on the phone about two times a week and come to his house for a visit.

No matter how you go about it, the bottom line is, the kid is going to be playing for people.

Dan Bell

They will watch the kid intently during that final senior season of high school. These are the ways of the recruiting game.

Marshall University goes about recruiting in much the same way.

According to assistant basketball coach Dan Bell, the telephone calls, letters, and appearances at games are vital in developing a relationship with the player.

"No matter how you go about it, the bottom line is, the kid is going to be playing for people," Bell said. "As a coach, you have to get to know the player and make him feel comfortable around you. We control a large part of their life, so it's vital that we know them."

However, getting to know them has its boundaries. The only time a coach can visit a prospect is between Sept. 1 and Oct. 15. All other times the coach is prohibited from doing anything but talking to the player by phone. If he goes to watch a prospect play, he is not allowed to speak to the recruit. Also, increasing crackdowns by the National Collegiate Athletics Association have made it dangerous for college coaches to even think about giving an athlete money or any other "fringe benefit."

"The NCAA pretty well mandates what we can and can't do," Bell said. "It's the same way with grades. The NCAA will not allow us to sign a player with a grade point average below 2.0. So, things are pretty well taken care of when it comes to looking at a player's grades when recruiting him."

Marshall made waves this past recruiting season when it signed, among others, Skip Henderson, touted as one of the best guards in the country, and Rodney Holden, who was courted by Tennessee and Alabama.

"The fans in this town are absolutely

Tammy Wiggins, Dunbar sophomore, is averaging over 13 points a game. That total ranks her in the top ten in the Southern Conference in scoring.

Although quiet on the court, Wiggins makes noise in the SC

By Kennie Bass
Sports Editor

She's the quiet one.

You won't see Tammy Wiggins jumping around and slapping high fives too often on the basketball court. You also probably won't see her yelling and urging her teammates on to victory.

What you'll see her doing is being "the most consistent player on our team over the long run, from game one to game 21," according to Lady Herd Coach Judy Southard.

"Tammy has grown a lot," Southard said. "Last year she was a drifter. She'd do something spectacular and then she'd lay back and coast. She isn't doing that any more. I think Tammy Wiggins could be, maybe should be, recognized on a national level for the things she does for our program.

"She's just a very competitive person. This year she has decided to use all of her athletic ability."

Wiggins said she doesn't quite agree with that.

"I don't think I'm playing as well as I can play," she said. "It seems like I'm still drifting in and out sometimes. I don't know what it will take for me to really kick it in, I haven't figured that out yet."

When Wiggins does kick it in, the rest of the Southern Conference may have a problem. She already ranks high in four of the five categories of SC statistics. Her 13.7 scoring average is eighth, her .530 field goal percentage is second, her .644 free throw percentage is sixth and her 7.3 rebounding average is tenth.

"I like to make things happen," she said. "I like to do the things I know how to do. I don't do things to please the crowd, I just take them as they come. I really don't like to talk about me, I'd rather talk about somebody else on the team."

When she does talk about the other members of the squad, she says positive things about her teammates.

"Karla May is a good point guard, a good leader," Wiggins said. "She gets you going. Karla is great at picking the team up when things get us down.

"(Forward Karen) Pelphrey is a great shooter, and Ty (guard Tywanda Abercrombie) plays some tough defense. When we're all working together and playing smart I don't think anybody can beat us."

Southard draws comparisons between Wiggins and the smaller Abercrombie.

"Tammy and Tywanda are very much alike as players," Southard said. "They are both fast, quick and they leap well. They complement one another very well. Together they our heart and soul. Their court personality is such that they make things happen."

Other than winning the Southern Conference, Wiggins said there were some things she would like to do this season.

"I want to play hard all of the time, and continue to score and rebound," she said. "I'd like to be a co-leader, like Karla does. I'd like to be able to set an example by the way I play."

Recruiting

crazy about basketball," Bell said. Take Rodney Holden, for example. Alabama and Tennessee were recruiting him, but we got him to realize that they are basically football schools. They normally draw about 5,000 fans a game, unless it's a big conference game. Here, this is a basketball town. You know anytime you take the court, you're going to have 10,000 screaming fans in the seats. Our fans take to the players."

Bell said in evaluating a recruit that court manners are important.

"We pay special attention to the way the kid handles adversity," he said. If a coach takes him out, we don't want to see him throw a towel or pout down on the end of the bench. If the kid is having a rough time out on the court, or his team is losing, we want to see how he reacts."

One thing is for sure. No matter how many potential Herd cagers decide to continue their athletic careers here or elsewhere, the Marshall coaches will still be sitting in the stands this coming summer, watching young basketball campers and scribbling down names from the backs of jerseys.

Recruits to visit campus

Football Coach Stan Parrish has shown his expertise on the football field and now he will try to prove himself once more off the field during the last week of recruiting for the 1985-86 football season.

A total of 15 hopeful recruits will be visiting the Marshall campus this weekend and Parrish will be satisfied to sign at least 10-12 of those visiting.

One visitor that has already made Parrish's day is Keith Henderson, the all-everything, 6-foot-3, 215-pound tailback from Cartersville, Georgia. He is the younger brother Marshall basketball player Skip Henderson.

"He is a long-shot but I am hoping he will receive a warm welcome at Marshall during his stay. I am just happy that he chose Marshall as a possibility," Parrish said.

Winfield's Mike Barber and Iron-ton's Steve Willis have verbally committed to Marshall.
