Election results

One seat ends in tie after counting problems solved

By Connie R. Miller
Reporter

After a day's delay, Student Government solved the computer listings glitch and announced the winners of Wednesday's senate elections.

In the residence hall race, Sheryl Coles, Charleston sophomore, won a seat with 264 votes; Julia Howell, Charleston sophomore, with 233 votes; and John Shawkins, South Charleston freshman, with 196 votes.

In the commuter race, Tom McChesney, Huntington junior, finished first with 115 votes. Jennifer Lynn Pelfrey, Huntington senior, and Judy Mullarky, Huntington sophomore, will join him in the senate. They finished with 109 and 93 votes, respectively.

Running unopposed in the University Heights constituency, Jaqueline Akunne, Huntington graduate student, won with 13 votes.

In the off-campus race, Kelly Quinn, Clarksburg junior, finished first with 59 votes and James Morehead, Huntington senior, took a seat with 51 votes.

A tie between John Sammons, Paintsville, Ky., sophomore, and write-in candidate Kurt Branham, Kenova junior, will force a recount of off-campus ballots to determine the third off-campus winner.

Most challenged ballots were caused by conflicts in the student's constituencies, Election Commissioner Alvie Qualls, Huntington graduate student, said.

Student body President Andy Brison, South Charleston senior, said the outdated computer print-out used by Student Government in the elections was authorized by Dr. Nell Bailey, vice president/dean of student affairs.

It came from a list the registrar's office gave the computer center after April registrations, Brison said.

Registrar Robert Eddins, said, "Local addresses are not worth the paper they are printed on."

"All official university communications are conducted between the school and the student's permanent address," Eddins said. "Student failure to report local address changes after April registration is the reason the university's information is incorrect."

The referendum question asking whether students would be willing to pay an additional $3 on their student activity fees for concerts in the Henderson Center passed, 510 to 214.

The $3 increase in student fees would be a one-time thing, solely for the purpose of buying a floor covering for the Henderson Center.

Stadium: Nitzschke optimistic; Parrish not

By Rebekah J. Greene
Special Correspondent

Although Marshall President Dale Nitzschke has made a community appeal for funds to help launch construction of a new on-campus football stadium, grid coach Stan Parrish said he is not optimistic one can be built in the near future.

In a luncheon meeting of the Quarterback Club Wednesday, Nitzschke spoke of the possibility of constructing the new facility. But he said he couldn't predict anything. "There's no doubt Marshall needs a new stadium but it cannot interfere with existing capital improvement projects, such as the Fine Arts Center and renovation of Old Main," Nitzschke said.

"This whole business would go a whole lot easier if someone would donate the initial two to four million dollars," Nitzschke said. "Since we have a winning football season, the old adage 'strike, while the iron is hot' applies."

However, Parrish, who followed Nitzschke to the podium, said, "My reaction? It'll probably be a long time before we get a new football stadium."

"We need it but I can't lose sleep over it. I've got too many other things to worry about," he said.

Nitzschke urged Quarterback Club members to actively search for the initial outlay of funds to get the ball rolling.

Last year the West Virginia State Legislature put together a $15 million bonding package to fund university capital improvements. Nitzschke said he is aware of many legislators who have intense interest in the stadium, but added, "What they do legislatively is their business."

He said although no formal stadium proposal had been given the Board of Regents, three samples from architects have been drawn and no alternative site has been found. Merchants located within the proposed site, which is located east of campus and bounded by 20th Street, Third Avenue, 4 1/2 Alley and a boundary line west of Danco, Inc., have opposed the stadium being built there.

Nitzschke said the BOR has authorized Marshall to obtain property for the stadium and he said he told athletic Director David Braine to prioritize the development of a creative funding proposal using both private and public monies.

Nitzschke said he definitely believes there is enough support for Marshall to have the stadium built. And he added although the $2 million to $4 million initial outlay would get things going, not getting it won't stop work on the funding proposal.

Marshall pulsates in southern state's lifeblood, Truman says

By Pam King Sams
Wire Editor

"Marshall University is one of the life bloods and successes of southern West Virginia," said Sen. H. Truman Chafin, D-Mingo, at the weekly meeting of higher educators, businessmen and politicians.

Chafin, who is the chairman for the judiciary committee, said he is a "great supporter of higher education and Marshall University" and will do everything he can in the next session to promote MU.

"When people are educated, it makes them more independent. They can then ask the questions 'why don't we have good roads in southern West Virginia?' and 'why don't we have better education?' and make demands for this," he said.

Chafin said southern West Virginia was putting a lot of money into the state through coal revenues, but wasn't getting it's "fair share" in return.

"We had to have effective legislators to carry the ball, but we also need you people to tell us what do," he said.

"The delegates are there for you. We want to talk to you and do good things for you. But you have to give us your ideas," the senator said.

Chafin sites one reason for Marshall's and Huntington's lack of representation as that the WVU people and Charleston businessmen make more contact with the legislators than Marshall and Huntington businessmen do.

But he complimented President Dale Nitzschke in his efforts during the last legislative session and in preparing for this one. "Marshall is on the move in the right direction, but the people of Huntington don't respond enough.

"But I believe this place (Huntington) is starting to grow and Marshall is the cornerstone," Chafin said.

Some of the Huntington representatives at the meeting agreed they needed "scolding" for not working enough with the legislators, but also pointed out how they have contributed to the cause through representatives and committees.

Chafin said he will "fight the war for higher percentages of higher education money" but he does not know yet how the senate will respond to the BOR suggestion of a 46 percent increase in higher education funding.

Cabinet looks at pay equity issue

A revised policy statement of the Increment Weather Policy and Pay Equity Interviews for classified staff were discussed Thursday in the President's Cabinet meeting.

The new weather policy requires all administrative and classified employees to either take an annual leave day or report to work on days when school has been called off for students and faculty due to bad weather, said Gloria Rickman, president of the Classified Staff Council and staff representative on the President's Cabinet.

In the old policy, there were three levels of school closings, Rickman said. In the first, only faculty and students were excluded from class; in level two, staff members who were not part of essential services (those parts of the university that remain open no matter what the weather conditions — such as the cafeteria) were excluded. Level three concerned major disasters such as tornadoes.

The new policy eliminates these levels and employees who do not report to work must either take a sick or annual leave day or a day without pay.

Rickman said the decision to change the policy came after a dispute last winter between staff members who reported to work and those who did not during a level one closing. Some staff members who reported to work were upset because President Dale Nitzschke agreed to pay those who had missed, Rickman said.

"The whole thing raised such a controversy because the employees who reported to work were saying that it wasn't fair to give the ones who didn't a 'free day,'" Rickman said.

State Pay Equity Interviews of Classified Staff by members of the Public Employee Pay Equity Task Force also were discussed at the meeting by Rickman.

The Pay Equity Program is a national program designed to establish an objective pay scale for all state employees based on merit points for job worth, Rickman said.

Political scientists gather downtown

The West Virginia Political Science Association will begin its 19th annual meeting 10 a.m. today at the Holiday Inn-University, 1415 Fourth Ave. in Huntington.

Marshall is host school for the two-day meeting, which will feature a lecture by Dr. Philip Converse, who is best known for his pioneer work in forecasting election outcomes.

Additional programs include discussions of local and national political topics and an evening banquet.

Perlman to play at Keith-Albee

World renowned violinist Itzhak Perlman is finally coming to Huntington. Sponsored by the Marshall Artists Series, the Israeli-born virtuoso will perform at the Keith-Albee theater at 8 p.m., Oct. 21.

Perlman's recital is the first program for the Baxter division series events.

Perlman was a childhood polio victim and now wears heavy leg braces and walks with crutches. He studied under Ivan Galamian and Dorothy Delay at the Julliard School in New York after completing his initial training at the Academy of Music in Tel Aviv.

MU looking for first win ever over Paladins

By Jim Weidemoyer
Sports Editor

For the second consecutive week the Thundering Herd of Marshall will attempt to do what no other football team in the school's history has done. Beat this Saturday's opponent.

Last week it was Western Carolina and this week it is the Purple Paladins of Furman.

Marshall has never beaten the ninth-ranked Paladins in nine tries and Herd Coach Stan Parrish said he realizes this Saturday's 1:30 p.m. task at Paladin Stadium will not be an easy one.

"Furman has been the king of the league for a long time. To win we're going to have to play our very best and our hardest," Parrish said.

The seventh-ranked Herd's undefeated record, 5-0-1, is on the line along with its chances for the Southern Conference championship. Furman, 4-1 overall, is 2-0 in the conference while the Herd is 1-0-1.

"We've been practicing on a positive note all week. We're playing for first place in the conference," said Parrish. "Like every game for the last month, this is an important game."

The Paladin offense features a run-oriented style of play which has averaged over 300 yards a game on the ground. But the sparingly used Furman passing game which is paced by senior quarterback Bobby Lamb, who has completed 36 passes in only 62 attempts, has totaled 10 touchdowns.

On the receiving end of half of Lamb's completions has been senior wide receiver Chas Fox. Fox, who has scored eight touchdowns, was drafted in the sixth round of the United States Football League draft by the New Jersey Generals last spring but opted instead for one more year of college eligibility.

In the Herd-Paladin clash last year at Fairfield Stadium, the powerful Furman offense amassed 498 total yards, 380 on the ground, but Parrish said he hopes to remedy that with the aggressive style of defense his unit has displayed in the first six games.

"I don't think that last year's game will play any factor with our defense's attitude. We've got almost all new people this year," said Parrish. "I think they are confident going into the game. They respect Furman and they know it's going to be a challenge."

"We must stop their running game. We're going to have to apply a lot of pressure. How much pressure we get will be the key to our success," said Parrish.

Kickers aiming for SC sweep

Marshall's soccer team goes on the road this weekend to play two Southern Conference rivals, Virginia Military Institute at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Appalachian State at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The Herd is 0-1 in conference play and 1-3 on the road overall. The conference records of Appalachian and the Keydets are 2-0 and 0-2, respectively.

"We can't afford to lose a Southern Conference game," Herd Coach Jack DeFazio said. "A record of 5-1 will win the conference, but a record of 4-2 will not. We need to prove ourselves, and a sweep is what we are looking for this weekend."

The first game will be the pivotal challenge, according to DeFazio, as the Herd plays a much improved Keydet team. The Herd beat VMI four times in the last two seasons. He said that after losing a close away game against Virginia Tech on Sunday, the character of the team was tested and improved.

"The players are hungry for a victory and they are looking at the VMI game as a way to destroy their next opponent," DeFazio said. "This was the feeling on the bus ride (after the Virginia Tech game) and in practice, which was lacking last season."

Appalachian beat Marshall 4-0 this season at Fairfield Stadium two weeks ago but DeFazio says he thinks the element of surprise may be in his favor.

"Appalachian might be overconfident because we played without Andy Zulauf and Greg Ogle, our two top goal scorers, in the first game," said DeFazio. "We did not play our game, we just dressed and showed up."

Parrish's decision settling for tie was gutless one

And the question continues to bounce around campus.

Should Stan Parrish have gone for the win instead of the tie in the Herd's game with Western Carolina?

Parrish said he sticks by his decision, and would make it again if he had the chance.

Well, that's commendable, but if he did, he would be making a bad decision twice.

A tie in college football, or anything else for that matter, is a waste. A tie proved we played equal with the Catamounts. Who wants to be equal? This is the team that started a fight at the end of last year's contest. This is the team that drubbed us 30-0. This is a team that Marshall has never beaten.

I wonder if the Marshall faithful would have been quite as excited if Western Carolina had put together a last-minute drive and scored to tie the Herd. The rhetoric that flowed after Marshall's score might have been slowed a bit if the situation were reversed.

Parrish is quick to point out Marshall still doesn't have a loss in the conference. I hate to break it to you Stan, but we only have one win out of two games in Southern Conference play, too.

Parrish also mentioned that since WC beat us last year, a tie is a victory of sorts. Stan, we were beaten by almost everybody for 20 years. Does that mean we face 20 years of ties before we can start going for the win? (If a tie is so great, why did we slide four spots in the national rankings?)

Parrish has also said he seriously questioned if the Herd could make a two-point play. He mentioned less than 30% of those conversions work.

Did anybody see the extra point? The ball was almost snapped into Wayne County. If Bobby Ulliman hadn't made an outstanding placement of the ball...well, you get the point. Nothing in football is certain. Marshall could have blown the extra point and lost anyway.

Parrish said if his team finished the season with five wins, no losses and six ties he would be proud because Marshall would be undefeated. He's got to be kidding. What if Marshall finished a year 0-0-11? The Herd would still be undefeated, but I doubt if we'd win the Southern Conference, or qualify for post-season action. (Unless of course they start up the Deadlock Bowl, better known as the Waste of 60 Minutes Bowl.)

This week the Herd goes up against Furman. I wonder, since we've never beaten the Paladins before, would another tie be considered another "victory."

My dad had a theory about coaches who go for ties. It didn't include moral victories, conference standings, being overmatched by the other team, percentages for success or anything else. He had just one word for coaches who go for ties.

Gutless.

Three-month countdown launches 'Evita'

by Kimberly Harbour
Impressions Editor

Sept. 30, 1985:

Twenty-seven actors, two directors and an accompanist have assembled in Old Main Auditorium for a 6:30 p.m. rehearsal of Evita! It has been three months since the Marshall production's original conception, three weeks since the cast selection and only three rehearsals since the arrival of the guest artist, Beth McVey, to play the lead.

More than the time element of eight days lies between that rehearsal and Wednesday's opening performance. In that time a group of individuals had to work together to form a cast, solve problems and present a show.

The opening scene begins. The actors, now characters, sit in rows on benches to suggest an Argentine movie theater. As a chorus of disappointed "Ahhs" communicates the movie's interruption, Dr. Elaine Novak, professor of theater and Evita! stage director, substitutes for a recorded broadcast as she announces that "Eva Perone, spiritual leader of Argentina, has passed into immortality."

There is silence.

"React!" Novak demands. Actors comply, perhaps a little self-consciously. Some begin to cry, others comfort, but one seems to stare off in the distance with a slight smile.

"Charles, don't smile! You wouldn't be laughing if the your country's first lady died. Think!" she again demands, but quickly turns her attention to another detail of the production. "Bring in the coffin."

Dwayne Johnson, the Winfield junior who plays Che, later explained about acting for musical theater.

"Roles in musicals require just as much acting as in plays. Most people don't realize that.

"Someone came up to me last night and said, 'You know, you don't have a pretty singing voice, but I like to hear you sing because you act through your voice.' It didn't bother me for him to say that because I know I don't have that 'classical' voice. I hope I can bring something else to the role. Acting through the music — that's the secret," he said.

But back at the rehearsal, another inappropriate grin and reaction brought on a lecture by the musical director, J.D. Folsom.

"Let's get serious. You have to think of each rehearsal as a performance because we're now at the point where we have to decide if this is going to be an amateur production or a professional one."

Oct. 7, 1985:

This is the second dress rehearsal, two days before opening night and only the second time the show has been performed with the orchestra.

With 15 minutes left to curtain the scene and lighting director, Bruce Greenwood, tests one of the lead's microphone. "Hello? Hello?" he asks, but then breaks into song. "Hello Mother. Hello Father. Here I am at Camp Granada."

Evita! landmarks the use of vocal sound enhancement in a Marshall theatrical production, a fact Greenwood admits was necessary, but regretful.

"It's a shame we can't develop the human singing structure to where it could be heard without processing it, without dehumanizing it. Why can't singers compete with 24 musicians playing loudly? It's not the same as real life, but we had to do it — and it works."

Places have been called for the rehearsal. The dissonant tones of orchestra mix and blend and finally harmonize. It is time to begin.

Although Folsom had vowed not to stop the rehearsal unless "it is going terribly," the evening's mock performance is interrupted time and time again — a trumpet player gives the wrong cue, a microphone malfunctions or part of the curtain gets caught on a light fixture.

This rehearsal ends at 12:45 a.m. that night.

"A bad rehearsal can be depressing," commented Johnson. "You'll make mistakes one night and you'll find yourself thinking the next night, 'Oh God, this was where it happened. I can't let it happen again.'"

"Sometimes it makes the next rehearsal that much better because the entire company approaches it with the idea, 'An audience is going to be out there tomorrow. We have to do it right.'"

Dwayne Johnson, left, Beth McVey and Gregory Rinaldi, above, play the leads in the Departments of Music and Theater presentation of the musical depicting Eva Peron's life, "Evita!," as it continues tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. and at 2 p.m. on Sunday in Old Main Auditorium.
