Former chancellor looking for answers

By Richard Sullivan
Staff Writer

Charleston - Leon Ginsberg answers a lot of questions these days with "I don't know."

He said he still isn't sure exactly why he was forced to resign Tuesday as chancellor of the Board of Regents.

He said he doesn't know if or why Gov. Arch Moore wanted him to quit the job he held for almost two years.

He said he doesn't know where his next paycheck is coming from or even in which profession he'll earn it.

"I didn't get any statement of reasons or causes from the board," Ginsberg said Thursday afternoon. "Apparently it's based upon a belief, and it's apparently stated in a resolu-

Dr. Nitzschke made it clear that he had no intention of supporting me or the BOR or anything else that might lose. He was on the side of whatever was going to win.

tion passed by some of the presidents — maybe all of the presidents — that higher education was suffering because of an impasse between Gov. Moore and myself, which apparently resulted from two different programs for higher education — the board's and the governor's.

"If Gov. Moore had said, 'I don't want you to be chancellor and I will cause higher education to suffer if you continue as chancellor,' my response would have been 'goodbye.'"

Much of the conflict that resulted in his resignation stemmed from friction between the Legislature and the governor, Ginsberg said. "The governor and the Legislature are frequently at odds, and the BOR would be in the position of siding with the Legislature.

"It's the executive arm of the Legislature. That's the way I finally figured it out. I didn't understand that before I took the job." That function of the BOR has irked West Virginia governors, who "want to do all the work with the Legislature," he said.

Ginsberg said he's learned a little more about being a politician from the experience.

"I am not as skillful an administrator or politician as several of the presidents are, and certainly not as skillful as Dr. (Dale) Nitzschke," Ginsberg said, referring to Marshall's president.

"I open my mouth and talk when I probably would be better off not. Pushed to the wall, I will usually say what I think is correct and right and do what I think is correct and right.

"Dr. Nitzschke, I think, made it clear in many comments in your paper that he had no intention of supporting me or the BOR or anything else that might

Brison wants panel created

Parthenon advised not to participate

By Cami Enoch
Reporter

Student Body President Andy Brison has asked that his complaint of being misquoted in The Parthenon be heard by a campus grievance panel, but the School of Journalism director said staff members may be advised not to participate in the grievance procedure.

Brison's complaint states that The Parthenon misquoted him and wouldn't print a retraction, even though the policy of the campus daily states any factual error will be corrected. According to Brison, a quote was attributed to him that should have been attributed to someone else.

The quote, "There is no such thing as rape in West Virginia, it's termed 'sexual assault,'" should have been attributed to Joe Stone, senate adviser, Brison said.

Dr. Deryl R. Leaming, director of the School of Journalism, said the faculty and adviser of The Parthenon may advise students and staff involved not to participate in the grievance hearing because the Board of Student Publications already decided to let the former Parthenon editor, Edgar Simpson, take necessary action. Simpson offered Brison space in the paper to air his complaint.

A lawyer from the National Scholastic Press Center, an organization to defend the rights of student journalists, also advised The Parthenon not to participate in the hearing, Leaming said.

"The Parthenon, as a group, receives student funds and falls under grievance policy," Brison said. "As long as I'm here, I will continue with the grievance."

Med School may receive new office complex

By Gina Campbell
Reporter

Marshall University's School of Medicine stands to gain a new diagnostic and office complex if Cabell Huntington Hospital succeeds in its bid for release from city and county ties.

The hospital is attempting this week to have legislators repeal the act which incorporated the public hospital in the 1940's under the auspices of Huntington and Cabell County.

Representatives of the hospital have announced their intention to incorporate as a private hospital, if Huntington's City Council and Cabell County officials accept their proposal to release the institution from its public obligations.

By the proposed agreement, city and county governments would receive $3 million.

The two governments would then use that money to build a new diagnostic and office facility for the medical school.

Dr. Jack H. Baur, associate dean for clinical affairs at the School of Medicine, said that "the building is an important goal for the school. We need more practice facilities than are available at John Marshall Medical Services."

The building now used, located at 1801 Sixth Avenue, was once the C&O Employees Hospital. Baur said the School of Medicine rents the building, sold to the state in 1976, from the Board of Regents for $1 a year.

Baur said negotiations at this point are preliminary. Even the site for potential facilities is undecided. City authorities have stated preferences for building the complex in the proposed superblock downtown, while University officials want to build on campus, close to the existing facilities.

Corrections

It was incorrectly reported in a story on Page 6 of Thursday's paper that a campus police officer lost a weapon during an arrest attempt early Sunday. CORRECTION: what he lost was a speed loader used to load bullets, not a weapon.

Because of a reporter's error, a story on Page 7 of Thursday's Parthenon stated that services of the Human Performance Lab would be offered free to students throughout February. CORRECTION: the Human Performance Lab will continue to offer its services free to students throughout the semester.

Huck prepares Herd mentally for Furman

By Melissa K. Huff
Sports editor

The old adage winning isn't everything may be cliché, but Head Coach Rick Huckabay is applying that principle coming out of a 81-68 loss to Davidson and into Saturday's away game with Furman.

Players respond more to other players than to coaches words.

Rick Huckabay

“I don't mind losing games like that because it was a great learning experience ... we didn't play bad they just played better. Their techniques of offense were the things I try to get our players to do and I think it just dawned on them 'Oh, that was what we want to do,’” Huckabay said.

Huckabay is applying the philosophy of seeing is believing to prepare the team for a string of home games which began Monday night against Davidson and will continue with Furman, The Citadel, West Carolina and University of Tennessee-Chattanooga.

He said he is showing the team films of its 68-58 January win over Furman as well as its Southern Conference Championship victory last year over Virginia Military Institute and a film of Indiana Head Basketball Coach Bobby Knight discussing “how to keep from losing a ballgame.”

The key to the mental preparation is confidence building, Huckabay said. But perhaps the best lesson the players will have this week has already been taught.

“Players respond more to other players than to coaches words,” Huckabay said. Therefore, he said he hopes some of Davidson's good fortune and offensive skill will rub off on the Herd. Davidson shot 68 percent on the floor and surged late in the game through the efforts of 6-foot-7 forward Gerry Born and 6-0 guard Derek Rucker. Furman has a record of 8-13 overall and 3-8 in the Southern Conference as of Thursday morning while the Herd is 16-7 overall and 14-7 in the Southern Conference.

A win Saturday is crucial to building Herd confidence on the road, Huckabay said. The team will be minus the services of senior Guard John Amendola, who is sidelined with a severe ankle-sprain. Jeff Guthrie is not 100 percent recovered from a stress fracture in the lower fibula, Huckabay said.

Tentative starters for the Herd are 6-7 forward Rodney Holden; 6-9 forward Guthrie; 6-2 guard Skip Henderson, 6-1 guard Norman Ray and 6-9 center Tom Curry.

Curry, a sophomore, leads the Herd in points scored against Southern Conference teams with 157 points followed by Henderson, with 154. Holden, as leading rebounder, has an average of 9.7 rebounds against conference teams.

The Paladins, under the direction of first-year coach Butch Estes, will lead-off with 6-1 guard Shawn Reid, 6-2 guard Dave Conrady, 6-6 center Joey Brooks, 6-5 forward John Castille and 6-6 forward Eric Moore.

Castille leads the Paladins in rebounds with an average of 10 percent while Brooks leads in scoring, bucketing 59 of 95 attempts for an average of 62.1 percent.

Marshall defeated Furman last season in both games by a margin of 67-60 at Henderson Center and 90-62 away. Marshall leads the series 12-9.

Tip-off time is set for 3 p.m. in the Greenville Memorial Auditorium, Greenville, S.C. The Herd will again be in action Monday night against The Citadel at McAlister Field House in Charleston, S.C. at 7:30 p.m.

Month-long celebration kicks off this Saturday

By Linda C. Knopp
Reporter

Talks on black male-female relationships and how to be more assertive will be presented Saturday in Memorial Student Center as part of black history month.

Dr. William Parker, vice chancellor of minority affairs at the University of Kentucky, will discuss black relationships at 10 a.m. and Dr. Francine McNairy, dean of academic support services, Clarion University in Pennsylvania, will talk on being assertive at 2 p.m.

Black history month is being sponsored by the Minority Student Office to educate people about the achievements of past and present black people, according to co-chairman of black history month Deidre R. Jones, South Charleston sophomore.

The month-long celebration was started by Carter G. Woodson, a nationally known educator, to commemorate black accomplishments, she said.

Marshall University's theme for the nationally celebrated month is "The Spirit of Black America" with individual themes for each week.

Speakers and activities have been scheduled to for each of the weekly themes.

A tribute to black performers will be observed Feb. 15 with old and modern black movies being shown in MSC Alumni Lounge from 5 p.m.-midnight.

Broadway singer, dancer and comedienne Jennifer Lewis will perform Feb. 20 at 8:30 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall as part of a tribute to black women in entertainment.

A black history month test will be given Feb. 21 at 6 p.m. in Corbly Hall Room 105. Prizes of $100, $75 and $25 will be awarded.

A study guide for the exam is available at the reserve desk of James E. Morrow Library under SWK 480, according to co-chairman of black history month Sheryl P. Coles, Charleston sophomore.

Nancy Starks, a magistrate from Kanawha County, will conclude the month with her presentation Feb. 27 at 8 p.m. in Smith Hall Room 154 on blacks in politics.

Coles said the turnout at last year's activities was good overall, but they wanted to get more students involved this year. All activities are free to Marshall students and are open to everyone.

"We would like to have both black and white students take part," Kenneth E. Blue, associate dean, director of special projects, student affairs, said.

Campus newscast rolls this weekend

MU Report, a student-produced news program, airs its first program of the semester Saturday at 12:30 p.m. on WPBY Channel 33.

"The half-hour programs are composed of five or six segments dealing with news events in and around Marshall University," said Bos Johnson, associate professor of journalism and adviser to MU Report.

This series of news programs is produced each spring semester by the students in Journalism 351 News Broadcasting II.

The 10 programs will run each Saturday during the semester with the exception of March 8 and 13; when WPBY pre-empts its regular programming to conduct fund-raising.

lose. He was on the side of whatever was going to win. And I think that's what he did."

Ginsberg said he doesn't like Moore's idea of replacing the BOR with appointees of the governor. "The virtue of something like the BOR, with citizen members and the like, is that it insulates higher education from the Legislature and from the governor. At least it's supposed to."

A job as a tenured professor of social work at West Virginia University is still there for him if he wants it, he said.

He said he moved out of his office Tuesday and hasn't been back. The BOR, he said, treated him "not kindly, or gently, but fairly."

Broadway show, 'Noises Off' is satire on acting

By Eric Fossell
Reporter

"Noises Off," a Broadway show coming to the Keith-Albee Theater Monday at 8 p.m., is about a British acting troupe touring through England performing a sex farce called "Nothing On."

The comedy, written by British playwright Michael Frayn, ran for two seasons in New York and is still running in England. "It's a brilliantly constructed piece of work," actor Noel Harrison said.

Harrison plays Lloyd Dallas, the director of "Nothing On." He has been featured in several television series and numerous theater productions. He has also been a successful singer, musician and athlete.

Harrison's athletic prowess undoubtedly works to his advantage in "Noises Off." Director Michael Blakemore said no cast has been able to rehearse for the play longer than three hours before becoming totally exhausted. "Once you get going, it's like a car out of control. Effects that take a moment on the stage have required days of rehearsal," he said.

Despite the 32-week, 77-city tour of "Noises Off," Harrison said an actor who loves what he's doing will not suffer from burnout. He said he is motivated to perform well every night because there are people seeing the play for the first time.

Featured in the cast with Harrison are Patricia Kilgarriff, Hugh A. Rose, Carolyn Porter, Moultrie Patten, John Renshouse, Lydia Laurans, Mary Portser and Berry Cooper.

Women, politics not so unusual

By Linda C. Knopp
Reporter

A person must have a thick skin and a sense of humor to be a politician, Pat Hartman, former delegate of the West Virginia Legislature, said Wednesday in a women's center lunchbag seminar on women in politics.

Hartman said she became interested in government in her high school civics class and finds politics fun and rewarding. Politicians cannot be effective unless they enjoy it, she said.

Although she said there are not really more women running for offices now than when she first ran for the state Legislature in 1976, more of them are winning, which is bringing more women into positions of power.

Huntington City Councilwoman

Betty Barrett said that being a woman in politics was not really different than being a woman in any other field though.

One problem both women said needed to be addressed was the use of terms like chairman, but they did not like words such as chairperson either. They said that some things in the language just needed to be changed.

"You just have to have a little bit of fun with it," Barrett said. "That's where the sense of humor comes in." Most people do not mean anything by it; they just do not realize what they are saying, she said.

Hartman said there has been some changes in the Legislature since she went in, and now women are not put down as much.

"I am appalled at the amount of money spent on politics," she said. In West Virginia there is no limit on the amount of money that can be spent on a campaign, but no one person or company can contribute more than $1,000 to a campaign, she said.

Barrett said she found the close-contact method was the best way for women to campaign. She knocked on doors in her district and found people very receptive—especially the women.

Hartman said the most important support came from the family, though, because politics is so time-consuming. She took two years off from her delegate position, but now she is ready to go back.

"I didn't lose my enthusiasm," she said. "I just got tired."

Barrett and Hartman said that Cabell County has also had a good record of getting women in political offices.

Speech team battles with words

By Leslie H. Knight
Reporter

Marshall University's individual events speech team will compete in a tournament Saturday at Ohio University at Athens.

In each of the two tournaments Marshall has competed in this semester, individual events team members qualified for the National Forensics Association Championship by reaching the final level of competition.

"I was very pleased with our showing in these tournaments," Coach William Denman, professor of speech said. "We have beaten several teams from schools with some of the top individual events programs in the country."

The Marshall IE (individual events) team placed fifth in a 19-school tournament hosted by Morehead State University on Feb. 1. Senior Barbara Brant placed second in informative speaking and dramatic interpretation.

In the novice category, Jane Fridetzky, senior, placed first in extemporaneous speaking and fifth in persuasion. Dennis Taylor, freshman, earned a second-place ranking in novice impromptu speaking.

The team placed second in overall competition at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington Jan. 24-26. Team member Andy Eddy, senior, placed first in impromptu speaking, second in dramatic interpretation-duo, second in pentathlon and fourth in extemporaneous speaking. Susan Snodgrass, senior, placed sixth in dramatic interpretation, and Tim Dolin ranked sixth in the poetry interpretation competition.

In the debate team competition, Emily Stewart, freshman, and Kerri McDaniels, freshman, reached the quarterfinals at the Wilmington tournament.
