The date rape dilemma: a growing concern

By Bonny Rushbrook
Reporter

It's Friday night and some girlfriends ask you to go to a local bar. After a few minutes, you each find a man to hang around with. You have something to drink and things get a little hazy. After awhile, you want to return to the dorm, but your friends are long gone. The guy you've been talking to offers to walk you home. On the way back, he remembers something he left in his room and suggests you come along. He assures you nothing will happen. It does.

Acquaintance rape, or date rape, occurs in more than half of all rape cases, according to Eugene F. Crawford, assistant director of public safety. The victim is assaulted by someone she knows or trusts, such as a boyfriend or a neighbor. Most victims know their assailants, at least slightly, he said.

Crawford will present a rape prevention program at 5 p.m. today in Twin Towers West. The program, featuring the video "Someone You Know," is targeted toward freshmen women, but is open to all members of the Marshall community.

"The object is to make ladies aware," Crawford said. "We feel very strongly that a lot of sexual assaults could be avoided if ladies were aware of how not to place themselves in situations where rape can occur."

Some program objectives include educating women about the seriousness of date rape and the long-term emotional and psychological problems for its victims, Crawford said. In addition, it teaches the difference between rape and sex, and attempts to enlist the support of men in eliminating acquaintance rape.

Crawford suggested using the "buddy system" where one friend agrees to watch out for the other one in situations involving alcohol and drugs.

Crawford said the program also can be very beneficial to men. He said men need to be aware of what constitutes a rape situation.

Organization strives to keep pace with the needs of modern-day students

By Allyn L. Shaffer
Reporter

Changing needs of Marshall students forces student organizations to re-examine means of obtaining and retaining the modern student.

One of these organizations is the Student Organization for Alumni Relations — formerly the Student Alumni Association.

Jeffrey G. Reed, Glenville senior and president of SOAR said, "Today's Marshall student is not the typical 18-year-old of yesterday." Reed said most students then lived on campus, attended classes, didn't work, and socialized to fill up their extra time. "Today's student is becoming more and more involved in extra curricular activities, therefore, we have to work with them to better organize their personal schedules. We work around their schedules so we can take everyone into account," Reed said.

Dr. Nell Bailey, vice president of student affairs, said "The Marshall student body is a carbon copy of our society." Bailey added that a large segment of the student body is returning students.

"With all the strings pulling at their time and all the different hats they're wearing, we have to work hard simply to get them in our organization," Reed said. "Once we get them there, we work twice as hard to meet their needs."

On today's organizational roster, one is finding more returning students and non-traditional students, Reed said. These students only have a limited amount of time, so they want to use it wisely and make sure their extra curricular activities will benefit them.

"Marshall's organizations have an obligation to their members and potential members to change as their needs change and not remain stagnant," Reed said.

One way SOAR is attempting to do this is to offer committees and activities that will not only benefit the student now, but also in the future.

SOAR tries to meet at a time beneficial to everyone even though, Reed admits, they are not successful 100 percent of the time.

"We have members submit their work and class schedules. If their schedules are hectic, we lighten their committee load."

SOAR members are required by constitution to be on three committees and to keep one office hour per week.

Kelli S. Thompson, Williamson sophomore, said "Even though I can't attend the meetings due to my class schedule, special arrangements have been made so that I may still be a part of the organization. I receive a copy of the minutes from each weekly meeting and any other literature made available at the meetings."

Aid defeated; contras delay peace talks

MIAMI — Contra leaders announced Monday they will delay peace talks with Nicaragua's Sandinista government in the wake of congressional rejection of their aid package.

Contra director Alfredo Cesar said neither the rebels nor Roman Catholic Church leaders mediating the negotiations would be able to attend a meeting scheduled for Wednesday in Guatemala.

The delay will be for only "a few days or a couple of weeks," said Cesar, who added that Wednesday's meeting date had been tentative in any case.

Private funds can never replace the aid (turned down by Congress).

Contra Director Alfredo Cesar

The Contra leadership also announced a formal fund-raising drive that has already received $500 from presidential candidate Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and $400 from Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

But Director Adolfo Calero said "private funds can never replace the aid" turned down by Congress.

The money raised in the United States would be used only for non-lethal aid, the Contra leader said, adding they will seek aid for weapons elsewhere.

"We will go to third countries and people living outside the United States" for funds to buy weapons, said Calero, but added no other nations have yet been approached.

The leaders said all contributions will be funneled through two non-profit foundations in Washington, which will abide strictly to U.S. law.

Calero dismissed comments by Panama's military strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega that he had been approached with a plan to lead an invasion of Nicaragua with U.S. support.

"I have never met Mr. Noriega or any officer under his command," said Calero, denying there had ever been any plan to invade Nicaragua or to train Contra troops in Panama.

New student grant rules reviewed; financial need determines aid

CHARLESTON — The state Board of Regents' grants council has recommended a change in the way grants are awarded to students attending West Virginia universities and colleges.

If approved by the board, the change would cut off money for 1,000 students currently receiving grants and turn the funds over to 1,000 new applicants, officials said.

John Thralls, the board's director of student services, told board members at last week's meeting that the council recommends awarding grants based more on financial need than academic standing. About 6,000 students share the $5.4 million available for grants each year. More than 18,000 apply every year and 9,000 qualify, leaving a gap of 3,000 students who qualify for grants but don't receive them.

Ex-Mingo official pleads guilty, to tax evasion after alleged bribe HUNTINGTON — Former Mingo County Commissioner Rastie Runyon Jr. pleaded guilty Monday in U.S. District Court to one count of tax evasion in connection with the alleged sale of the sheriff's office in 1982, assistant U.S. Attorney Joe Savage Jr. said.

Runyon, 59, of Borderland pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge Charles H. Haden II to filing a false federal income tax return in 1983.

He admitted that he failed to report $6,000 in illegal payments made to him or on his behalf as a result of his role in the sale of the sheriff's office in 1982.

Candidates campaigning heavily; New Hampshire to be next stop

DES MOINES, Iowa — The 1988 presidential contenders, hoping for an Iowa victory that would propel them from the pack, campaigned through the state Monday in advance of precinct caucuses, prior to leaving for New Hampshire, site of next week's first presidential primary.

Gary Hart was up early to thank his supporters against the backdrop of polling which showed him slipping badly into the back of the Democrats' seven-man field. Late polling indicated Richard Gephardt, Paul Simon and Michael Dukakis had the best chances among the Democrats.

Bob Dole, the Republican front-runner in Iowa, and Democratic long shot Jesse Jackson both planned to work late, greeting people as they arrived at two of Monday night's 2,487 caucus meetings. Vice President George Bush, in the unaccustomed role of underdog to Dole, was planning to leave Iowa for New Hampshire.

(Note: Caucus results were unavailable due to The Parthenon's deadline.)

Drug deal ends in fatal shootout; officials believe it was a set-up

LOS ANGELES — An undercover drug buy that ended in a shootout that killed federal drug agents and two heroin dealers was a robbery set-up by the Thai dealers, authorities said.

The gunfight broke out when agents tried to buy two pounds of heroin, but the alleged drug traffickers apparently wanted only to steal the $90,000 being used for the set-up, Guevara said.

May date set for pullout of troops from Afghanistan says Gorbachev

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Monday the Kremlin has set May 15 as the date to begin pulling its troops out of Afghanistan if U.N.-sponsored talks on the conflict result in a settlement.

Gorbachev said the withdrawal would be completed within 10 months. He said the date for beginning the pullout was based on the assumption that negotiations in Geneva between Afghanistan and Pakistan will result in an agreement no later than March 15.

It was the first mention by the Soviet leader of a specific date for the withdrawal of the estimated 115,000 Soviet troops now in Afghanistan helping the Marxist government battle a Moslem insurgency.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said in Kabul last month that the Soviet Union hoped to end its involvement in Afghanistan this year.

The Kremlin sent troops and military hardware into Afghanistan in December 1979.

Lightning strikes German plane; crash kills all passengers aboard

MUELHEIM, West Germany — A commuter airliner burst into flames and crashed during a storm Monday, killing all 21 people aboard, police said.

Witnesses said a lightning bolt struck the twin-engine turboprop airliner and that a wing fell off just before the aircraft crashed in a rural area near Muelheim, about seven miles north of Duesseldorf airport.

Let's make time for today's rape seminar

Kudos to Eugene F. Crawford, assistant director of public safety, and others in the Office of Public Safety for providing a much needed service to the Marshall community.

A rape prevention program will be offered by Crawford at 5 p.m. today in Twin Towers West.

The program, which features the video, "Someone You Know," is targeted toward female freshmen, but anyone may attend.

Rape is a serious crime that happens far too often on college campuses.

Although there were no sexual assaults reported on campus in 1987, it doesn't mean rape never happens here. In fact, one sexual assault already has been reported on campus this semester.

According to statistics compiled by the West Virginia Department of Public Safety, there were 360 sexual assaults reported in West Virginia in 1986. Charleston led with 58, followed by Huntington with 44.

Most frightening, however, is the fact that acquaintance rape, committed by someone the victim knows and trusts, occurs in more than 50 percent of all reported sexual assaults.

Crawford says he hopes to teach those attending the program the seriousness of acquaintance rape and the long-term emotional and psychological problems suffered by its victims.

We urge all Marshall students, faculty and staff members to attend this program.

Rape should not be part of anyone's college experience.

Conference officials misguided

To the Editor:

I attended the Feb. 4 Marshall University vs. Virginia Military Institute basketball game and was absolutely outraged at some of the conduct on the court. The men in the black and white shirts were obviously not officials — maybe they were escaped convicts. Sorry about that last comment, I withdraw it. My most sincere apologies to any convicts who might have taken offense.

The Southern Conference officials are notoriously inept in both football and basketball, but what I saw during the game was incredible. Tom Curry was used as a human punching bag during most of his playing time and, while this was virtually ignored, when Tom got physical in any way he was charged with the foul.

On one particular play, Marshall guard Skip Henderson realized that he could not move on the base line and as he attempted to pass the ball back into play he was forcefully pushed out of bounds. In "real" basketball Marshall would have retained possession but in SC (Special Combat) basketball the ball was turned over to VMI. At one point, Andy Paul Williamson was called for traveling when he was knocked to the floor by a VMI player.

Does this mean that if we field John Spellacy, Bill Mendoza and other football players that only football rules would apply? If this is so, the officials missed a clipping call on the play against Andy Paul.

Marshall is not the only victim of incompetent officials. Most Southern Conference schools suffer the same abomination where officiating is concerned. But HALLELUJAH! I have the answer. The usual reason given for the poor officiating is that the conference cannot pay enough to hire decent officials.

Therefore I propose that each fan who attends a Southern Conference athletic event donate a quarter to the Official's Fund. In the event of Marshall basketball games this would raise around $2,000 for each game. With this money we might be able to hire capable officials and thereby ensure fair competition. (I understand Lt. Calley works cheap.)

In conclusion, I want to apologize to any competent officials I might have misrepresented in this letter, but those same officials should be leading the fight for decent officials in order to lift the stigma cast on their profession by the "imposters" who wear the official's uniform.

The only people who can correct this loathsome situation are the commissioner of the conference, presidents of the conference schools, and the athletic directors of the schools.

If all else fails, Marshall should treat the conference like many of its West Virginian students treat the state — put up with the Southern Conference only long enough to graduate to bigger and fairer things.

BOR gets homework from state legislators

By Virginia K. Crowe
Special Correspondent

The Board of Regents may have plenty of information gathering to do after Thursday's budget hearing with the Senate Finance Committee.

Several senators wanted different kinds of information and analysis concerning higher education after an hour-long budget request presentation by BOR Chancellor William Simmons. Simmons promised each senator the information as soon as possible.

The first question posed to the BOR came from committee chairman Earl Ray Tomblin, D-Logan, who asked if there would be any savings in combining West Virginia State College and West Virginia College of Graduate Studies. Simmons said he could see no advantage in terms of cost saving, however, the programs would have to be reviewed.

Large faculty turnover rates were the concern of Sen. Bruce O. Williams, D-Wyoming. Simmons said the actions the BOR had taken this year to lessen turnover rates, such as the $50 surcharge in student fees to fund a five percent faculty increase, were "short range solutions to long range problems." He added the turnover rate varied for each institution.

West Virginia University President Dr. Neil Bucklew told the committee WVU had a 10 percent turnover rate which was twice the normal rate.

Finally, Sen. John M. Karras, R-Ohio, expressed concern about the cost of educating out-of-state medical students and if there was room for any more.

"I'd hate to think we're doing a good job for someone in Pittsburgh," Karras said.

Sen. Oshel B. Craig, D-Putnam, told the BOR he would like to see Marshall's Science Building taken care of in the next year. Craig was told the BOR had $7 million ready to be bid this summer which should completely renovate the first two floors.

Craig also said the BOR should take steps within the next 18 months to buy the land for Marshall's stadium.

Jackson, Bush choices for upcoming election

By Vina Hutchinson
Staff Editor

Jesse Jackson would win the Democratic nomination and Vice President George Bush would win the Republican nomination if the results of an informal survey conducted on Marshall's campus proved true.

Of 101 students questioned last week, Jackson gained 20 votes, while Bush garnered 15.

Democratic candidates and the number of votes they received include: former U.S. Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, 15; Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, 11; former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, nine; U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and U.S. Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, tie at four; and U.S. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, two.

Other Republican candidates include U.S. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, 12; and Alexander Haig, six. Marion "Pat" Robertson, Pierre "Pete" du Pont of Delaware, and U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York each tied with one vote.

Dr. Simon D. Perry, chairman of the Department of Political Science, said he wasn't really surprised with the results. "With regards to the age group polled, Jackson has more support among young voters on college campuses," he said. "Many have bought the idea that Jackson is not to be considered a serious candidate but many, including professors, believe he's qualified. Some are attracted because of his basic liberalism and stand on international issues, others because he's an underdog."

Perry said name recognition also was a factor among the Democratic candidates. "Some of those candidates are not well-known. Those with better education would know the names."

On the Republican side, Perry said Haig is not a viable candidate. He said the race is between Bush and Dole and Bush probably will get the nomination.

Staff writers Angela Lester and Anissa Henderson contributed to this story.

Spring enrollment figures up

Enrollment for the spring semester shows an increase over last spring's figures but the increase is less than 1 percent, according to Robert A. Eddins, registrar.

The number of students enrolled this spring is 10,651 which is an increase of 80 students from last year, Eddins said.

The figures reflect an increase in each of the four undergraduate classes but a decrease at the graduate level, he added.

Specific figures for each class and each college have not been released, but Eddins said a full report should be available sometime within the next few weeks.

Although the number of full-time students has increased almost 4 percent, Eddins said the number of part-time students has decreased approximately 5 percent. These figures are still preliminary, but are very close to the final official figures, he said.

Seminars give students different "Alternatives"

By Dan Adkins
Reporter

The second in a six-part series of Alternatives seminars designed to help students deal with drinking problems and low self-esteem will be at 3 p.m. today.

Carla Lapelle, director of Student Health Education, said her office organized and is sponsoring the information seminars mainly to help students who don't think highly of themselves to be more positive, while at the same time help students who have drinking problems.

"The seminars serve as an introduction for students to get an idea on how to approach getting more information about socializing without drinking," Lapelle said.

She said the biggest excuse people give for drinking too much is they don't feel comfortable meeting new people at parties unless they have had a few drinks. "People can't seem to socialize with people they don't know until they have had something to drink, which is an indication of low self-esteem."

The seminar today will cover self appraisal and acceptance, with the main point of interest being for students to take a look at themselves and like what they see, Lapelle said. "We tend to be our own worst critics and we do it unnecessarily. This seminar will be an hour of discussion on how to improve one's self-esteem."

Registration is required for the Alternatives seminars, which are conducted at 3 p.m. Tuesdays. Students can register by calling Student Health Education Programs at 696-2266.

Italian trip offer for students includes classes, food and fun

By Melinda Martin
Reporter

Students from colleges and universities in West Virginia will have the opportunity to study in Italy from May 30, to June 27.

"The program has been designed by West Virginia faculty and administrators for West Virginia students and is primarily intended for students completing their freshman and sophomore years of college," said Dr. Clair Matz, professor of political science and director of Marshall's Center for International Studies.

The trip is open to all majors. During their stay, students will be required to take six-credit-hour classes. A "Contemporary Italian Culture" course will include 12 language lessons in "survival Italian". Students will be given exercises on asking directions and salutations in Italian. The course may fill a sociology or political science requirement. There will be two 3-hour elective courses to choose from: "Masterpieces of Italian Art" will be taught by Karen Rychlewski, professor of art at West Liberty State College and a comparative marketing course "International Business: The Italian Environment" will be taught by professors from Rome.

Students will reside and take classes in a converted monastery in Sassone. The monastery is located near a commuter railroad which is about 20 minutes from downtown Rome. There will be double room occupancy with a bath in each room. Typically in European lodgings, the bath is located at the end of a hall. There will be recreational activities such as tennis courts and swimming pools.

According to Dr. Matz, Italy has recently been neglected by tourists. Most people travelling Europe visit England or France. He added that since the value of the dollar has been falling, it is cheaper to stay in Italy. No other countries will be toured during the one month trip but there will be week-end excursions around Italy.

The trip is sponsored by West Virginia FACDIS (Faculty and Course Development in International Studies), an alliance of all West Virginia colleges and universities. The cost is $1,820. That includes airfare from New York, room and board, train pass, two weekend excursions, and airport transfers.

'Matewan' a hit with Marshall students

By Jeffrey A. Young
Reporter

The movie "Matewan," which was filmed in West Virginia, is a hit with students who have seen it and is doing well in Huntington despite a late start.

Derek A. Hyman, vice president of the Greater Huntington Theater Corporation, said the movie is getting favorable reviews and attracting large audiences. "The movie opened well," he said, "It's been around for a couple of months but this is the first time it's been in this area." He added that the movie will be showing for another two or three weeks. In an informal survey of 23 students

Monday, only three said they had seen "Matewan," but many said they intended to see it.

Martin S. Brock, Huntington freshman, saw the movie in Charleston and liked it. "I think it's about time they made a movie about it," he said.

David A. Bias, Martinsburg sophomore, said it was the best movie he had seen in two years. "I thought it had the intensity of 'Platoon' with the twang of 'Coal Miner's Daughter'," he said.

The movie got good marks on historical accuracy from Frances S. Hensley, associate professor of history. "In terms of the outline of the story, the conflict between the miners and the owners was very accurate."

Rape: It can happen to anyone, by anyone

Don't keep quiet, report sexual assaults, public safety officer advises victims

By Bonny Rushbrook
Reporter

The most vulnerable age for sexual assault is 14 to 19 years and this group also is the most silent in reporting it, according to the assistant director of public safety.

Eugene Crawford said, "Women don't want the publicity or the stigma attached to it."

Crawford, who presents a rape prevention program for women on campus, encourages women to report a sexual assault.

"Even if they do not intend to prosecute, we may be able to apprehend the assailant and prevent another sexual assault or even possibly a murder," he said. "If a man will rape, he'll repeat."

The Office of Public Safety also offers an escort service for anyone on campus after dark who would feel safer with an escort to her destination, Crawford said. The service is offered from dusk to dawn anywhere on campus. He added it could extend farther if the situation warranted.

Crawford offers these tips for women to protect themselves:

--Be aware that rape can happen to you.

--Learn rape prevention strategies, practice them and be prepared to use them even on someone you trust.

--Avoid dangerous or uncomfortable situations, such as leaving a party or getting into a car with someone you hardly know or don't trust.

--Don't reveal personal information about yourself.

--Don't deny your instincts or intuition. If you're uncomfortable, get out of the situation quickly.

--Beware of men who display a violent temper or won't take no for an answer, even in non-sexual situations.

So the story goes . . . a tale of two halves

Marshall held on to its first place Southern Conference slot after Saturday's first half scare from the East Tennessee State and put its winning streak on the line Monday night against Davidson.

Assistant Sports Editor

A Tale of Two Halves. That would be an appropriate title for a book written about Marshall's basketball game with East Tennessee State Saturday at Henderson Center.

The first few chapters of the book could tell of an ETSU team that jumped ahead of the Herd with a 6-0 lead which turned into a 46-33 lead by the end of the first half.

The final chapters of the book would tell of a suddenly inspired Marshall team that stormed back and outscored the Bucs 44-26 in the second half, snatching a 77-72 victory from the only team to defeat the Herd in conference play this year.

Thanks to that second half, Marshall remained in first place in the Southern Conference with an 8-1 mark, 17-5 overall. The Herd carried that record into Davidson Monday night to play the second-place Wildcats, who lost to VMI Saturday to drop to 7-3 in the SC. Marshall also added on to two winning streaks. Before Monday night's game, the team's winning streak was at seven games, and its home streak is at 23, the second longest in the nation.

From the game's beginning, both streaks were in trouble. ETSU darted to a 6-0 lead before the Herd knew what hit them.

The second half was a different story.

The Herd started the second half with an 8-0 run that ended on a thunderous slam by Tom Curry. At this point, the crowd of 8,922 was back in the game, and although MU was still trailing, MU had the momentum.

Marshall grabbed its first lead on a jumper by Skip Henderson that made it 62-61 with 6:59 remaining. The Herd never trailed after that even though the game remained close.

Henderson led Marshall with 29 points, while Curry was the only other Herd player in double figures with 18.

Lady Herd's win gives ETSU double whammy

By Leith Murray
Assistant Sports Editor

Marshall's men's basketball team may have set the stage by defeating East Tennessee State Saturday afternoon but the Lady Herd took the final bow the same night.

Aggressive defense and the regained shooting touch of point guard Kim Lewis propelled the Marshall University Lady Herd basketball team to a 82-63 victory of the Lady Buccaneers.

Lewis finished as the leading scorer with 20 points. She shot 9-19 from the field and connected on her only three-point attempt. Sharon Deal was a dominant force throughout the game grabbing 12 rebounds, seven on the offensive glass, before leaving midway through the second half after striking her head on the court.

The Lady Bucs were able to keep the game close in the first half behind the play of senior Katie Beck. Beck finished with 17 points and 19 rebounds. The Lady Herd entered the half leading 34-31. Marshall played a little sloppy the first half, which may be attributed to a week layoff. "This has perhaps been the most difficult period during my coaching career at MU because it is hard to keep a team motivated playing once a week," Head Coach Judy Southard said.

The Lady Herd opened the second half with a 7-2 run to extend its lead to eight. Jenelle "Spud" Stephenson helped the run, connecting on two consecutive three-point field goals. However, at the 17:15 mark of the second half the Lady Bucs put on a 9-0 run of their own to tie the game at 42.

Coach Southard called time out. During that time out Southard said she talked to her squad about the importance of aggressive defense.

After the time out, the Lady Herd responded to Southard's talk with a 15-0 run to take a commanding 57-42 lead. For the second consecutive game the Lady Herd confused its opponent, switching defenses each time up the court.

Marshall improved its first place record in the Southern Conference to 5-1 and its overall record to 13-6 while the Lady Bucs fell to 0-5 in the conference and 4-12 overall.

The Lady Herd now plays four away games before returning to the Henderson Center Feb. 28 to host the Lady Mountaineers of Appalachian State University. "If we are going to win the regular season title we have to win on the road," Southard said.

SC ticket sellout expected this week

Marshall should sell its 2,400 Southern Conference Tournament tickets by the end of this week.

James D. Woodrum, assistant ticket manager, said sales are about the same as last year, with student sales a little heavier. Additional tickets will be acquired from the Southern Conference and other schools who do not sell their share if MU sells all of its tickets.

Ticket sales for the March 4, 5 and 6 tournament in Asheville, N.C., began Monday morning for students and members of the Big Green Scholarship Foundation.

Ticket sales for the reserved student section will continue through this week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the ticket office in the Henderson Center.
