MENTAL AWARENESS WEEK

Center offers depression screening

By Shawna Edmonds
Reporter

Depression is not something to be ashamed of because many people have problems, says Linda Stockwell, a counselor at the counseling center.

As a part of Mental Awareness Week and National Depression Screening Day, the Counseling Center is sponsoring a screening at the Memorial Student Center today for anyone who thinks he is suffering from depression.

"The purpose of the screening is to increase self awareness about depression, and to encourage people to take part in the counseling services," Stockwell said.

Anyone who has a feeling or suspicion that he is not as happy as others should take the time to have himself screened, she said.

Stockwell said there are three types of depression: major depression, dysthymia and bipolar depression, and 6 to 10 percent of the population suffers from one of the three.

With dysthymia, people can be down, but can still force themselves to keep going. She said often people with dysthymia are depressed because of something bad that has happened in their lives.

People who are incapable of completing everyday activities may be suffering from a type of depression known as major depression and should seek help immediately, Stockwell said. This type of individual, no matter how hard she tries, is inhibited from functioning by the depressed state.

Bipolar depression is the third type of depression. That is the diagnosis for someone who has mood swings, Stockwell said.

The type of individual with bipolar depression may be very productive in her manic or high stage and suicidal in her depressed stage, she said.

A student with bipolar may attend class for a certain period of time and is very productive while there. Other days, the student may miss a lot of class, closing herself off from everyone.

Catherine Woodward, a graduate assistant in counseling, said the screening will have individuals take a simple exam that will help them determine whether or not they may need to seek help.

"It is important for people to get diagnosed and to come in to the counseling services for counseling," Woodward said.

Anyone who thinks he/she has depression, or just wants to talk to a counselor, may call the counseling center at 696-3111.

Speaker encourages African-American pride

By Alk Wah Leow

"You should be proud to be as black as the Ace of Spades," said Dr. Na'im Akbar amid cheers and some squirms of discomfort Tuesday night in Don Morris Room, MSC.

A clinical psychologist at Florida State University, Akbar is a pioneer in the development of an African-centered approach to modern psychology.

"As African-Americans, we were robbed of our manhood and womanhood when we were enslaved," Akbar said.

"Slavery was an institution to destroy normal aspirations because African-Americans today have no aspirations, because as time went on, their only aspiration was to escape slavery."

According to Akbar, in order for African-Americans to restore their manhood, "we must know who we are."

"Blacks were brought to America as slaves and we were not supposed to succeed. But we have," Akbar said. "Look at Martin Luther King Jr., Elijah Muhammad and Thurgood Marshall. They are good recent examples of miracles."

African-Americans must have the courage to stand up for what they believe, according to Akbar. "We have to stop giving authority to people that insult and humiliate us."

MEETING

SGA: Tailgate a success

By Courtney S. Sisk

The first student government-sponsored tailgate party Saturday was a success, but SGA executives said during Tuesday's meeting they hope the next one has more student participation.

"We had approximately 20 students there, and we all had a really good time," said Kristin Butcher, student body president.

"There probably would have been more students there, but it was Parents' Weekend and a lot of students changed their plans to accommodate their parents."

The goal for the next party, set for Oct. 15, is to increase awareness about the party and encourage more students to attend.

"This is something that has the potential for success, if students participate," Butcher said. "The next party will be broadcast live by Bubba 97.1, and Subway has agreed to donate food."

Another event SGA is planning in conjunction with Student Activities is the post-

Ito directs barb at Howard Stern

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Howard Stern may rule the airwaves, but Lance Ito lays down the law in L.A.

Outside of his courtroom, the judge in the O.J. Simpson case directed a friendly barb at the bawdy broadcaster who has regularly lampooned him, the New York Daily News reported Tuesday.

"I'm going to send Howard an autographed picture," Ito said, "and I'm going to write on it, 'Howard: Enjoy the show, just don't get arrested in L.A.'"

Crosby awaits liver transplant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Crosby Stills and Nash are canceling the rest of their 25th anniversary tour while David Crosby awaits a liver transplant.

Doctors are evaluating him for the operation, Crosby's management company said Tuesday. A spokeswoman said no further details were available, but doctors give him a good chance for a complete recovery.

Crosby, 53, is "an old warrior," Stephen Stills said.

And Graham Nash said they have every reason to think the band will tour next summer.

The band has been on tour since early June and is releasing its first studio album in four years. The tour was to have wrapped up this month.

Former contestant issues challenge

NEW YORK (AP) — The real "Quiz Show" contestant who lost his title to a tipped-off opponent returned to the scene of the crime — NBC's Studio 6A — and demanded a rematch.

Some 40 years after the fix on the show "Twenty-One" was exposed, Herbert Stempel said he wants to play Charles Van Doren again.

He issued his challenge Tuesday on "Late Night With Conan O'Brien," which is taped in the same studio where Stempel was set up to lose to Van Doren.

"I would like to play Charles Van Doren anywhere, any time and any place for charity," said Stempel, who is played by John Turturro in "Quiz Show." "I would like to play him right here on your show." A rematch is unlikely. Van Doren has kept a low profile since the scandal and has not cooperated with filmmakers or writers.

'NYPD Blue' star sued for palimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Palimony my butt, David Caruso's publicist says.

The departing "NYPD Blue" star never agreed to share his earnings with his former girlfriend, Stan Rosenfield said Tuesday. "Show me the paper it was written on," he said.

Paris Papiro has slapped the carrot-topped actor with a $4 million-plus palimony suit, saying Caruso promised to share his earnings. Rosenfield said the suit is without merit and should be dismissed.

Caruso made his name as a tough detective who bared his heart and bottom on the ABC series. Now he's leaving the show after four episodes this season to pursue a better-paying film career. His replacement is former "L.A. Law" star Jimmy Smits.

The first lady of country music unveiled a line of jewelry, The Tammy Wynette Collection Tuesday.

The jewelry is named for her songs and she says the pieces represent the emotions in her songs.

O Mother Sun!

A New View of the Cosmic Feminine

By Patricia Monaghan

Patricia Monaghan has extracted magical stories from many cultures and hundreds of sources indicating a world-wide cult of the sun goddess. No Apollo-in-skirts, this goddess is a shaman and a weaver, a voluptuous lover and a tender mother. This stirring, engaging book offers exciting new material to readers hungry to know more about the goddess.

Dancing women shamans in Korea-fierce Inuit myths of incest and dismemberment-riveting new visions of ancient monuments and sacred sites: the scope of this groundbreaking book is beyond compare.

Patricia Monaghan is one of the pioneers of the women's spirituality movement. Her book of Goddesses and Heroines, first published in 1980, was one of the earliest sources of goddess material and remains the most comprehensive dictionary of the subject. She is also the author of Seasons of the Witch and Working Wisdom. She lives in Chicago.

Monaghan will be appearing at

Teams offer to refloat ferry

TURKU, Finland (AP) — Salvage teams from several countries have swamped investigators with offers to refloat the ferry Estonia or retrieve bodies trapped in the vessel on the Baltic seabed.

The Estonia sank off the southwest Finnish coast last week, killing more than 900 people.

The ferry lies 180 to 280 feet under water, making any attempt to haul it up or retrieve bodies difficult.

"We've had all sorts of offers from companies in Scotland, the Netherlands and Norway," Tuomo Karppinen, a member of the accident investigative commission, said Tuesday.

"However, we cannot make decisions on retrieving the bodies or refloating the ship.

Those will happen at a much higher, political level," he told The Associated Press.

He did not say how the salvage teams proposed to bring up the bodies, or

"There's a good case for floating the vessel but we are talking in sums upward of $100 million. At the moment, there's a fifty-fifty chance of it happening."

how much money they might be asking for the job.

The Estonia sank with nearly 1,000 people aboard while traveling from Tallinn, Estonia to Stockholm, Sweden, on Sept. 28.

Only 137 of those on board were saved. Most of the dead were Swedes.

A Swedish member of the nine-man commission, Olof Forssberg, said his government was under pressure to find the lost bodies.

"I think we should do everything in our power to refloat the ferry," Swedish Prime Minister Carl Bildt said Tuesday.

Bad weather may delay any major action at the site until next year.

Ingvar Carlsson, who will replace Bildt as head of the Swedish government Friday, said efforts should be made to bring up the wreck.

But investigators say the cost could be prohibitive.

"There's a good case for floating the vessel but we are talking in sums upward of $100 million," Karppinen said. "At the moment, there's a fifty-fifty chance of it happening."

A Norwegian salvage vessel was bound for the accident spot, some 70 miles south of Turku, Finnish radio reported.

Kari Lehtola, a Finnish member of the commission, said it was too early to say whether salvaging the vessel was feasible.

Mass suicide claims 48 lives

CHEIRY, Switzerland (AP) — The bodies of 48 members of a religious sect, many with plastic bags tied over their heads and their hands clasped in prayer, were found today in an apparent mass suicide.

Police discovered the bodies in the smoking ruins of a farm and three ski chalets in southern Switzerland.

Twenty-three bodies, all adults, were found at a farm in the canton of Fribourg, northeast of Geneva, police said.

One man was in the farmhouse with a bullet wound to the head, and 21 others were in a concealed underground chapel lined with mirrors, where they had apparently suffocated themselves with plastic bags, police said.

Undersea earthquake shakes Russian-held islands, kills 16

TOKYO (AP) — The region's strongest quake in a quarter-century rocked the Pacific seabed, devastating a chain of Russian-held islands, sending Japanese coastal residents fleeing for high ground and scaring even quake-jaded Tokyo, 600 miles to the south.

Cargo planes carrying rescue workers and equipment from Moscow and Siberia were heading for the remote Kuril Islands north of Japan, where as many as 16 people were reported killed.

The undersea quake Tuesday night, with a preliminary magnitude of 7.9, was centered about 100 miles east of Japan's northern coast near the Kurils.

Dozens of aftershocks, some as powerful as magnitude 6, rattled the region this morning, but no new damage or injuries were reported.

Clinton faces dilemma with U.S. personnel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, who made ethics in government a major campaign issue and promised an administration as diverse as America, is in a dilemma on both counts.

Ethical blunders are claiming more and more of the people he brought into his government.

And with nearly every personnel change he makes, his administration is looking less like America and more like the Washington establishment.

The dilemma intensified this week when Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy resigned — effective Dec. 31 — in the face of allegations he improperly accepted gifts.

A second Cabinet member, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros, is embroiled in a controversy over payments to a former mistress.

Haitian coup leader in exile Aristide closer to power

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — With one coup leader in exile, ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide appears a step closer to returning to power.

Aristide pledged in a speech before the U.N. General Assembly on Tuesday to return by Oct. 15 and called for reconciliation among Haitians.

"We say yes to reconciliation, no to violence, no to vengeance ... yes to justice," said Aristide, a Roman Catholic priest, who is Haiti's first democratically elected president. He was ousted in a 1991 coup.

Tuesday's departure of coup leader Michel Francois may ease Aristide's return.

Francois masterminded squads of "attaches," or army auxiliaries, responsible for many political killings. He, army chief Raoul Cedras and chief-of-staff Philippe Biamby will surrender power by Oct. 15 under an agreement negotiated with former President Carter.

"It is an important step toward the re-establishment of democracy and peace. ... The others (Cedras and Biamby) should follow his example," said Port-au-Prince Mayor Evans Paul.

In what could be another promising sign, a feared paramilitary leader Tuesday claimed a conversion to pacifism.

Emmanuel Constant, leader of the paramilitary group the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti, which has tortured and killed pro-democracy activists, urged Haitians "on every side" to put down their weapons and renounce violence.

But Constant's sincerity was in doubt: FRAPH is considered responsible for much of the terror waged in Haiti over the past year. And violence on Tuesday showed Aristide's peaceful resumption of power is far from assured.

U.S. troops who came to Haiti to pave the way for Aristide's return found themselves in the delicate position of protecting Constant, one of Haiti's most notorious figures, as he addressed reporters outside the presidential palace. Constant just days ago was one of Aristide's — and Washington's — most despised enemies.

"No more violence," Constant said. "The future of our beloved republic is at stake."

New look, equipment has band 'feeling the thunder'

Like their motto, Director Baruch Whitehead and the MU Marching Thunder are certainly "feeling the thunder" with a variety of innovations for the 1994 season.

New to the band this year are uniforms, personnel and an array of instruments — mellophones, piccolos, baritones and pit percussion devices.

The uniforms, which were purchased for the band courtesy of the Marshall University Foundation at a cool $75,000, outfit 180 band members.

Whitehead said the instruments were purchased thanks to the support of the community and President J. Wade Gilley and cost approximately $32,000.

"We could never accomplish any of the things we want to do without the support of the foundation and the community," Whitehead said.

A veteran music teacher, Whitehead began his training in classical oboe studies at the Cincinnati Conservatory.

After receiving his master's degree in oboe performance at the University of Florida, Whitehead began teaching band at a high school in Trenton, Fla. Then he taught handicapped students in a musical therapy program.

After completing this he moved to Huntington to take over the marching band.

"Music is a great outlet for artistic desires. We all have that inside of us," he said.

"Not only does music provide social activity, but understanding the mechanics of music make it a very academic activity as well."

Whitehead said he is in charge of selecting most of the songs, but he is open to suggestions.

"Many times the students bring in pieces of music that they like and I'll listen to them," Whitehead said.

"Sometimes that works out great, Or other times I'll hire someone to arrange a piece. Most of the time I purchase pieces directly from a company."

The same thing applies to the actual halftime show. Whitehead will hire a drill writer to choreograph the band's movements and formations, but in the end Whitehead has the final say on what works and what doesn't.

At first glance, one might think the band only performs at football games. For the Marching Thunder however, halftime is only the beginning.

The band begins practice during the months of April and band camp is conducted two weeks before school starts.

This is where students learn the half-time show, with the actual work writing the show beginning a year in advance.

"It takes dedication and a lot of energy to march all day in the hot sun," Whitehead said.

In addition to football games, the band performs throughout the community at several functions.

"We go to different competitions and perform shows for high school kids," Scott Ramey, a band member, said.

"Once we even got a standing ovation."

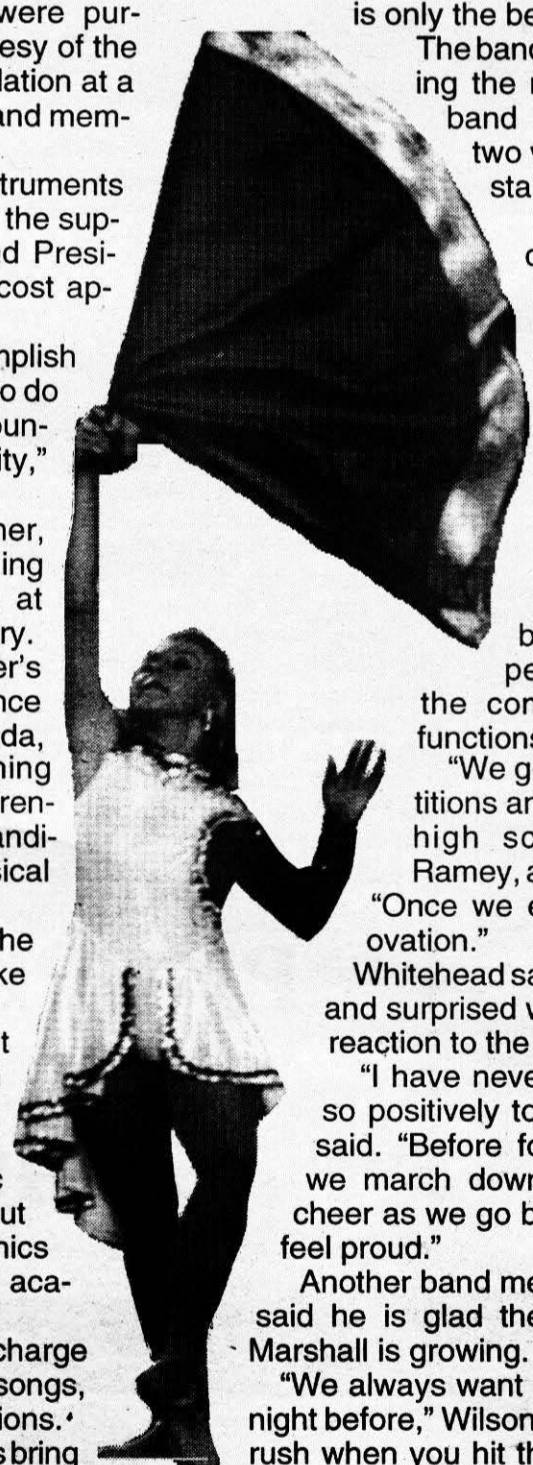

Whitehead said he is both pleased and surprised with the community's reaction to the band.

"I have never seen people react so positively to a band before," he said. "Before football games when we march down the street, people cheer as we go by. It really makes us feel proud."

Another band member, Chris Wilson, said he is glad the music program at Marshall is growing.

"We always want to do better than the night before," Wilson said. "It's just such a rush when you hit that last note and the crowd gets on their feet."

Whitehead said anyone can join the band and auditions are conducted for the band and color guard in April.

(Right Top) Drummers Chris Wilson and Arthur LeMasters provide the beat for "The Sons of Marshall" while in the stands. The band performs from a reserved section in the stadium to keep students' enthusiasm high. Speciality horns incorporate a unique sound for the Marching Thunder. our children," Akbar said. "We should have our own institutions, conduct our own research on what affects our people.

"African-Americans need to pool their resources and end their dependence on others. We need to learn self-reliance," Akbar said.

"Last but not least, we have to learn to love ourselves," Akbar said. "Loving blacks doesn't mean hating whites. You have to love your neighbor as yourself," he said.

"People can take your manhood but only you can restore it," Akbar said.

Akbar said many African-Americans have no sense of continuity beyond slavery. Slaves were not allowed to continue their cultural and social traditions.

"As a result, African-Americans assume the traditions and heritage of others," Akbar said.

"Slavery robbed our manhood by instilling fear and dependence. Slaves were intimidated and humiliated publicly."

According to Akbar, many women slaves were raped by their white slave owners. The results can be seen in scores of black men and women who have lighter skin and don't look like "authentic" Africans.

Akbar earned his Ph.D., M.A., and B.A. in psychology from University of Michigan.

"I decided to concentrate on African-centered psychology because for years we learned about what made Euro-Americans neurotics but there were never any theories that explained what made black people the way they are," he said.

As the result of the work he is doing at Black Studies Program at Florida State University and other speaking engagements throughout the world, he has motivated many black students to learn more about their history.

"There are more students enrolled in black history classes, more participation in black fraternal organizations and churches," Akbar said.

"My mission is to plant the seeds of curiosity among the young so that they will be motivated."

Sandra Clements, coordinator of educational support services, said, "Dr. Akbar hits the mark in terms of what young college-educated African-Americans have to do. Only with knowledge can we begin to change."

"Young African-Americans need to get a better understanding of themselves in order to better themselves," said Kenneth E. Blue, coordinator of African Americans Students Program.

Course to help with LSAT

By Terri Borden
Reporter

Finally, a review course for the LSAT is available at Marshall.

Some students dread taking tests, and admission into all law schools depends on LSAT scores and GPA.

Richard Hensley, director of the continuing education division of the Community and Technical College, said, "this course was coordinated in response to frequent requests."

One student in particular, John A. Proctor of Huntington, has been instrumental in the development of this course. Proctor is a graduate student.

Students wishing to take this test come from varied educational backgrounds. The LSAT is designed to test a student's preparedness for law school, not their knowledge of law.

Hensley said, "the preparation classes will offer instruction in all areas of the test, with a focus on analytical reasoning, reading comprehension, logical reasoning and writing."

Tamela Jerrell, instructor with the Division of Business Technology, will facilitate this course. To ease the student's anxiety, Jerrell will introduce question types and test strategies.

Practice exams and simulated materials, prepared by Cambridge Educational Services, will be used to reinforce these teachings.

The five-week course begins Oct. 25 and will run 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Registration must be completed and the fee must be paid by Oct. 18.

The fee for the course, which includes materials, is $200. Marshall employees, students and graduates will receive a 10 percent discount.

LSAT test dates are Dec. 3 (deadline Nov. 1) and Feb. 11 (deadline Jan. 10).

"We're planning to have a cookout and DJ in Tent City across from the stadium immediately following the game," Butcher said.

The development of 4th Avenue into a college street is another project on which SGA is working. The project was part of the platform Butcher and Vice-President Greg Ferrell presented to the student body when they ran for office.

"We will begin distributing surveys to students next week to find out what new retail stores they would like to see on 4th Avenue," Butcher said.

In other business of Tuesday's meeting, a bill giving Alpha Epsilon Rho $215 was ta-

A bill allocating $400 to the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA) to help pay for registration fees of their national convention passed the first reading.

A bill giving $400 to the Wilderness Adventure Club to purchase camping equipment passed the first reading.

A bill requiring SGA to publish or post their monthly expenses, so the student body will know on what their student fees are being spent, was tabled until the bill can be revised.

Sen. Shannon Miller, College of Fine Arts, was named senator of the month, and Sen. John Armstrong, College of Education, was given a special recognition award.

Pannell's an integral part of the Herd's 5-0 season

By Chris Johnson
Reporter

William Pannell has started every game on the offensive line for the Thundering Herd this year.

That's a nice accomplishment for someone, who this time last season, was learning to play on the other side of the ball.

Pannell, a 6-4, 295-pound junior from Altavista, Va., came to Marshall as an offensive lineman. After starting the first game of the 1993 season at left tackle, he was red-shirted so he could learn the defensive tackle position.

Due to some injuries to other Herd linemen (more namely 6-6, 360-pound Buck Manning), Pannell was switched back to his more familiar offensive position during the summer and earned a spot in the starting lineup.

"I was glad to move back, I love playing on the offensive line," Pannell said.

When the Altavista High product showed up for practice this summer, he was an inch taller and 25 pounds heavier.

"I've worked really hard to get in shape and when the fall started, I really hit the weights," he said.

He also said his new size and work ethic helped a lot in returning to a starting role.

This ethic has drawn praise from defensive coordinator Mickey Matthews.

"William Pannell is probably our best athlete on either side of the line," Matthews said before the season started.

Playing on the offensive line isn't as glamorous as the quarterback or running back positions but the junior knows it comes with the territory.

"It bothers me a lot that we don't receive much credit outside of the team because we are the ones who create the holes for running backs and protect the quarterback. But I know our teammates appreciate us," he said.

Pannell said it was great to play on a winning team even though at times it is hard to keep the intensity level at a constant rate.

"Our intensity level was way down during the West Virginia State game, the fans were not into the game at all," he said.

Pannell added that the fans play a key role in keeping the football team pumped up. "It really get's us going to come out and see a big crowd that is in to the game, we have the best fans in the Southern Conference."

When Pannell was being recruited one of the major factors in his decision to come to Marshall was the new stadium. He said he came here to look around while it was being built and was impressed. Pannell also said that he was told that graduating would be stressed.

Since Pannell has been here the Herd has played in three consecutive national championship games and is currently 5-0.

"I spent a lot of time thinking about winning the Southern Conference this summer," he said. "That is my main goal."

Pannell mentioned he doesn't have many individual goals, but he said he would like to be considered as one of the best tackles in the conference. Another goal is he's more concerned with is bulking up.

"Size isn't that important but I would like to be at 300 pounds next year, I think that would add to my game," he said.

Pannell isn't the only person in his family to play football.

He has a third cousin who happens to be Charles Haley, an all-pro linebacker for the Dallas Cowboys.

Pannell said he doesn't know him well. "I saw him at a family cookout this summer, he was flaunting all of his money."

"It bothers me a lot that we don't receive much credit outside of the team because we are the ones who create the holes for running backs and protect the quarterback. But I know our teammates appreciate us."

Campus watch offers escorts

By Brett A. Smith
Reporter

Students walking on campus alone at night might have noticed some very dark areas. Don't get nervous, because it is easy to get an escort.

Just dial HELP on any phone on campus, including the emergency phones. The campus watch will come to the rescue.

The watch is a group of over 100 volunteers. They have other functions, as well.

Sam Dameron, a criminal justice professor, is one of the groups' leaders.

"A lot of what they do is a deterrent," Dameron said. "Together with the MUPD, they make better coverage of the university."

The American Criminal Justice Association, the Marshall Police Department, the Student Government Association and the criminal justice department are the group's sponsors.

The criminal justice department offers internship credit for volunteering.

The watch is on patrol from 8 to 10:30 p.m. Sunday, and 8 to 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The shift of five is designed so anyone leaving night class or the library, when it closes, will have an escort available if they need one. A typical watch will have an average of five escorts a night.

"This does include both males and females. Anyone could be mugged," Dameron said.

The campus is divided into five different areas for equal coverage. The watch members are coordinated by the shift dispatcher for the MUPD. She knows where each watch member is at all times.

When a watch member is not doing an escort, he or she will be on foot patrol, looking for anything or anyone suspicious. They do not attempt to stop a crime, but will report it to the Marshall police through the radio each watch member carries.

The campus watch has reported a crime in progress, resulting in the suspect being apprehended.

The rest of their equipment includes a campus watch jacket, special I.D.s, a whistle and a flashlight. The radios were given to the program by acting president Gould.

The watch has been patrolling consistently since the spring of 1990. Anyone with the patrol for a semester receives a T-shirt and after one year, a hat.

Joe Carpenter, a senior from Glasgow W. Va., has been with the watch program for three years. He is now one of the shift supervisors.

The reason he said he joined was for a criminal justice internship. After being on patrol for a while, he enjoyed it and decided to stay.

Voter registration drive brings new faces to the polls

The voter registration drive sponsored by SGA, College Republicans and Young Democrats registered 58 new voters. The new voters are eligible to vote in the November 1994 elections.

The polls in November will have 58 new faces casting their votes, thanks to the voter registration drive Sept. 26 through 29.

The event was sponsored by Student Government Association, College Republicans and Young Democrats.

Sen. John Armstrong, College of Education, said he was happy with the number of students who registered.

"If I had been more organized, it would have been even better than it was," Armstrong said.

"Considering it was thrown together, it came off a lot better than I expected.

"We had an especially good turnout the first and the last day.

"The two days in between were a little slow, I think because of scheduling conflicts and other things coming up."

Armstrong said he hopes the event will become an annual tradition.

"If there is someone who is willing to work on it and keep all the groups involved interested in it, there's no reason voter registration can't be done every semester," he said.

"It was truly a learning experience for me to organize the forms, get notaries to authorize the ballots as students registered, and do the other work involved."

Armstrong said extra absentee ballots are available in the SGA office for students who weren't able to register.

"Students can mail the ballots to the courthouses in their home counties, but they will not be able to vote in November's election because the last day to register to vote in that one is Oct. 8," he said.

"But at least students can be registered for the next election."
