■ HOMECOMING WEEK

Activities to begin with magic show

By Jason Philyaw
Reporter

"The Thunder Rolls" was the title of a popular country song by Garth Brooks. It is also the theme for the 1994 Homecoming at Marshall.

The theme takes in the Thundering Herd football team rolling toward another playoff berth and also includes Homecoming week activities.

Activities begin Monday with a special appearance by illusionist Craig Karges.

Karges will be performing at 9:15 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall and combines the skills of a psychologist, a psychic and a magician.

He was named 1994 American Campus Entertainer of the Year and has made appearances on "Larry King Live" and "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno."

Tuesday afternoon on the Memorial Student Center Plaza, students can participate in a popular form of country dance-line dancing.

This year's Homecoming festivities will not include the annual dance or parade, but the week is packed with a variety of events. Highlighting the week is a magic show, a block party and the Homecoming game between Marshall and The Citadel.

at Marshall will assist students who want to learn how to dance.

Students can vote for the Homecoming Court Monday and Tuesday at locations in the student center lobby, Corbly Hall and in Twin Towers. The court will be announced Wednesday.

Thursday has been designated "Spirit Day." Everyone is encouraged to wear green and white.

Also Thursday, at 7:30 p.m. in the student center Alumni Lounge, Chautauqua scholar Ann Saville will portray Eleanor Roosevelt, giving historical perspective on her influence in West Virginia.

Friday's activities include a block party, inductions to the Athletic Hall of Fame and an alumni reception. The block party will begin at dusk on 18th Street behind Twin Towers and Hodges Hall and is open to everyone.

Friday at 6:30 p.m. the annual induction dinner for the Athletic Department Hall of Fame will take place in the W. Don Morris Room.

The Marshall University Alumni Association will present "An Evening With Friends" reception 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. Friday in Erickson Alumni Center.

Saturday's attraction will be the Homecoming game with The Citadel at 1 p.m. The Homecoming queen will be announced during halftime of the game.

The Alumni Association will have "Lunch-Under-the-Tent" from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. inside Marshall's Lefty Rollins Track.

The Student Government Association and the Office of Student Activities are sponsoring a Homecoming party beginning at 4 p.m. inside the track. The party is replacing the annual dance.

The Alumni Association is also co-sponsoring a Homecoming Dance for alumni only Saturday night at Holiday Inn Gateway.

The Black United Students' Organization (B.U.S.) will sponsor a dinner/dance at Holiday Inn University after the game. A post game step show will be at the former Douglass High School.

Sunday wraps up the week-long festivities with the annual alumni baseball game at St. Cloud Commons. The Alumni versus Alumni game begins at noon followed by the alumni versus the 1994-95 Marshall team.

Play portrays struggle of black male's lives

By Julla G. Lilkendey
Reporter

A play described as an "eye opener" about African American males will be presented at 7 p.m. Monday at the Joan C. Edwards Playhouse in the Fine and Performing Arts Center.

"Our Young Black Men Are Dying and Nobody Seems to Care" is being sponsored by the Office of Multicultural Affairs and the African American Students Program Office. It deals with the struggles of the African-American man.

"It is an eye opener that will give all people the perspective of the attitudes of African-American males," said Kenneth Blue, associate vice president of multicultural affairs and coordinator of African-American Students Program.

He said he thinks it is the nature of our society to not care about African-Americans.

"For some historical reasons, black individuals feel their worth is not being considered," Blue said.

"There are a lot of general feelings about African-Americans, stereotypes, things that are not necessarily true."

The original musical play by James Chapman has been recently noted by Village Voice as one of the best plays in New York. It portrays the young African-American men in America today and the issues they face.

Chapman geared it to express the realness of everyday problems read in the headlines and the tragedies of inner-city neighborhoods.

"Our Young Black Americans Are Dying and Nobody Seems to Care" is absolutely superb," said a viewer at Youngstown University.

"Never have I seen such a large audience so thoroughly captivated by a series of scenes."

"It is a powerful and moving presentation," said Anessa Hamilton, coordinator of Greek Affairs. "It shows the struggles African American men face on a daily basis."

■ CLASS POLICY

Today is W-day

By Michelle A. Tveten
Reporter

Today is the last day to withdraw from a class without any consequences.

Roberta Ferguson, assistant registrar, said today is the "last day to withdraw with a W grade for a full-one term course."

She added the W grade indicates the student has withdrawn, regardless if the student is passing or failing, from a class without being penalized.

To withdraw, students need the instructor's signature,

Ferguson said.

Monday students who withdraw from a class will be given a WP or WF. "The instructor will assign a WP if you are passing or a WF if you are failing," Ferguson said.

After today, students who want to withdraw from a class need both the instructor's signature and the dean's signature, Ferguson said.

The last day to drop a class is Nov. 11, Ferguson said. After that a student can not withdraw from a single class. After that date the only option is to withdraw from the university.

Scientists use technology to recreate iceman's face

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 5,000 years ago, he lay down in the Tyrolean Alps and died. Three years ago, his frozen and exquisitely preserved body emerged from a glacier and made worldwide headlines.

Now, scientists report they have used X-rays and modern technology to create highly accurate replicas of the skull of the "iceman."

The accomplishment should help scientists study the iceman and recreate the man's face, the researchers say.

The replicas should reveal for the first time just how the iceman's facial bones were slowly distorted by pressure from the glacial ice, said team member Horst Seidler of the University of Vienna.

In prior X-ray studies of the skull, "no one saw the iceman's skull is truly deformed," Seidler said. With the help of the copies, researchers now can reconstruct "a nearly true face," he said.

One analysis has revealed that the part of the iceman's face between his upper teeth and the top of his nose was pressed toward the rear of his head, for example.

That misled Seidler and colleagues in their earlier interpretation of how the upper teeth originally met the lower teeth, Seidler said.

The iceman, covered with leathery orange-brown skin, is kept frozen at high humidity to mimic the glacial conditions that preserved his body.

Researchers who want to examine it are limited to about 20 minutes every two weeks.

Austrian researchers decided to make copies of the skull so that scientists could study details of the skull at leisure without disturbing the iceman, said radiologist Dr. Dietzer zur Nedden of the University of Innsbruck.

"It's impossible to take all the measurements, it's impossible to see inside the mummy because you can't destroy it," he said in a telephone interview.

He and colleagues report their work in the October issue of the journal Radiology. They used a technique, called stereolithography, that is also used at a few medical centers to make models of body parts.

The body part models are useful for building hip replacements or planning complex surgery to fix misshapen skulls.

To copy the iceman's skull, it was kept at about 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

Copperfield helps Houdini rest in peace

NEW YORK (AP) — It's no illusion — workers are repairing Harry Houdini's vandalized gravesite, thanks to the magic of a $10,000 donation from David Copperfield.

Houdini's mausoleum was vandalized five months ago.

"I was shocked by the senselessness of the incident," Copperfield said Wednesday by phone from Den Haag, Holland, where he's on tour. "What a terrible act of violence, to disturb the final resting place of such a great American legend."

Workers plan to replace the grave markers and benches and reset the 1,000-pound granite covers above the remains of Houdini and his wife.

TV detective now keeps up with 11 children

LITHONIA, Ga. (AP) — Taurean Blacque might need some detective skills to keep up with his adopted children — all 11 of them.

The bachelor, who played Detective Neal Washington on "Hill Street Blues," began adopting nine years ago when a black adoption festival asked him to be its celebrity spokesman. He now has eight boys and three girls ages 3 to 16.

"I told them if I was going to tell people to adopt, then I wanted to know what it was like," Blake said.

Fifteen months ago, Blacque moved his family from Los Angeles to an eight-bedroom, two-story house on a two-acre wooded lot in Lithonia, an Atlanta suburb. He said crime and earthquakes made California too dangerous.

"I wanted them to grow up in an environment of trees and grass," he said. "Not concrete and buildings."

Lucas wants enduring films

NEW YORK (AP) — George Lucas says Hollywood has turned to the dark side.

"The system will only accept certain things now," the filmmaker said. "The only pictures that are 'go' pictures are ones that a lot of intelligent directors look at and say, 'Well, this is a piece of junk, but I've got to work.'"

He says movies like "Star Wars" endure because they transcend age.

"It deals with basic values that people cope with," he said.

"It's not some cynical, relentless action fest. It's not hip. It's not flash. Just a great film."

Violence continues in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Random violence has increased the pressure on President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to assemble a government and regain control of Haiti, which has been under virtual U.S. stewardship since Sept. 19.

Wednesday, at his first news conference since his return, Aristide blamed his right-wing foes for the violence, saying, "There is a campaign of manipulation aiming to tarnish the image of the government."

"We condemn all types of violence, vengeance and plundering."

Hours later, a stick-waving mob threatened to attack the home of Joseph Nerette, Haiti's provisional president immediately following the coup, for the second time in a week. U.S. soldiers responded to Nerette's call and provided security.

An angry crowd also threat-

"We condemn all types of violence, vengeance and plundering."

President Aristide

ened to attack the local Red Cross, demanding it hand out emergency food stocks, but dispersed after director Dr. William Fougere refused.

The violence follows other incidents earlier this week — the most notable taking place Monday, when the interim army chief's home and 14 other buildings were torched in the coastal town of Gonaives.

At the news conference, Aristide said he was "still consulting" on his appointments for prime minister and other key posts. The Constitution requires the president to confer with Parliament leaders before naming a replacement for caretaker Prime Minister Robert Malval.

Aristide's choices of cronies and controversial figures for key posts got him in trouble last time he was at the helm.

Rene Preval, his original prime minister and a like-minded populist, was a left-leaning baker with little experience in politics. Justice Minister Bayard Vincent was a self-proclaimed former Macoute, the terrorist squad of the Duvalier era, while Foreign Affairs Minister Denise Jean-Louis, an anesthesiologist, was a close Aristide friend with no political experience.

Wednesday, Aristide said he intended to assemble a cabinet encompassing all classes, a difficult task in a largely impoverished society been dominated by a small elite since independence from France in 1804.

Gulf build-up may cease

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is considering formally halting deployment of thousands more troops into the Persian Gulf, now that Saddam Hussein has shifted forces that once threatened Kuwait, officials said Wednesday.

Some 26,000 U.S. soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines are in the region, including those on board the aircraft carrier USS George Washington and 16 other Navy ships.

Five thousand Army troops and 2,000 Marines are in the Gulf, a number far short of the 33,000 ground troops that had been told to deploy to the scene.

Although about 250 warplanes and support aircraft are there, nearly 700 warplanes had been ordered readied to fly after the crisis began nearly two weeks ago when 70,000 Iraqis massed near Kuwait.

Oct. 13, Defense Secretary William Perry said some 30,000 ground troops would be sent.

The departures of hundreds of U.S. aircraft and their crews, as well as thousands of Marines and Army troops, were halted as it became clear the Iraqi troops had begun to withdraw.

"It doesn't look like many of them will go anywhere," one senior military officer said Wednesday of the U.S. forces remaining on hold.

Tuesday, Pentagon spokesman Dennis Boxx said at a briefing that two brigades of Saddam's top Republican Guards had moved north of the 32nd parallel and back toward their garrisons.

Remnants of a third brigade remained near Nasiriyah, but "the indications, by and large, are positive that they are in fact moving out of that region," Boxx said.

At the briefing, the spokesman also acknowledged that none of the F-117 "Stealth" fighters and B-52 bombers that had been selected to fly into the region had reached the Gulf.

lies getting together, building this image of reconciliation through the next cabinet," he said.

Malval, a businessman appointed by Aristide from exile, never was the president's choice. He was favored by U.S. diplomats who saw him as a moderate in the long-running conflict between the right-wing military and the leftist priest-president toppled in 1991.

Analysts said Foreign Minister Werleigh is the leading contender to replace Malval.

Agents take documents

CHARLESTON (AP) — Federal agents raided the business offices of a Parkersburg industrialist and took documents, The Charleston Gazette reported Thursday.

More than 30 agents took documents Wednesday from the offices of Arrow Industries and Knapp & Associates, an accounting firm for Arrow Industries, the Gazette reported. It did not cite its sources.

Arrow Industries, a concrete business, is owned by Paul R. Burge, the Gazette reported.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Kelley Ambrose in Charleston confirmed an investigation is under way by the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service.

Ambrose said no arrests were made Wednesday but declined to discuss the raid further.

U.S. Magistrate Jerry Hogg would not say whether he issued search warrants.

Israel considers reaction to attack

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — As Israel recoiled from its deadliest attack in 16 years, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin convened his Cabinet Thursday to consider a new crackdown on Palestinian militants.

Ministers met at the Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv Wednesday, a day after a suicide bomber blew up a rush-hour bus in the heart of downtown Tel Aviv, killing 20 people.

"I don't want to be next," read signs carried by anti-government protestors who crowded the streets of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem Wednesday night, hours after the attack.

Clinton supports Cuomo, Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — Blending the roles of chief executive and Democratic campaigner in chief, President Clinton is supporting two icons in tough reelection battles, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Clinton brought a New York audience to its feet Wednesday with word that he'd approved the state's request for a waiver of federal welfare rules. "The most important thing I have to announce," he called it. Cuomo, in a tense race for a fourth term, joined in the applause.

Wednesday, Clinton arranged to sign the federal aid-to-education law at a ceremony outside Boston, with Kennedy looking on.

Regions flunk pollution tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air quality is improving, but 43 metropolitan regions, home to nearly 100 million Americans, have smog-causing pollution that flunks federal health requirements, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Many of those regions will not pass for another 10 years, but EPA officials said other cities with less severe pollution may meet the standards in the next few years.

The EPA's annual assessment of urban air pollution, released Wednesday, showed 48 of 91 regions that had unacceptable air because of ozone in 1990 have since complied.

Student Senate offers chance to get involved

▲ Issue: Students need to get more involved in the decision-making process at Marshall.

Applications for Student Senate positions are due Tuesday. Candidates must turn in their applications at the Student Government Association office by 4:30 p.m. There will be a mandatory meeting for all applicants that evening at 9:15.

Nine Student Senate seats are open. Two seats are available for the College of Liberal Arts, one for the College of Business, two for the College of Science, two for the College of Education, one for the Graduate School and one for the Community and Technical College. Students will elect their representatives Nov. 2.

Ten applications had been filed as of Tuesday's SGA meeting.

More students need to get involved with their school. Marshall is home to many students for four years, and even longer for many others. Students should take an interest in that home.

Join organizations. Take part in school-sponsored programs and special events. But most importantly, get involved in the decision-making process.

Even students who aren't comfortable with the idea of, or have time for, the responsibility that a Student Senate position would entail can still take part in the decision-making process. Students can attend SGA meetings or even contact their college's representative to share their ideas and opinions.

Too often students complain about various aspects of campus life. Yet those same people, when pressed, mutter they don't get involved because their opinion wouldn't matter anyway.

If you think Marshall has unfair policies, isn't meeting the needs of students or that you could do a better job of running the school, don't complain — get involved. Or if you think Marshall provides its students with a quality education, has programs and facilities that make MU the great school it is, or has specific policies that you would like to see continued, get involved and keep those positive programs going.

Representing other students and oneself as a member of Student Senate is a way for students to make their opinions count.

Don't just sit there — get involved!

Where have Statesman's values gone?

It's that time of year again. The alternate newspaper on campus, The Statesman (or the "Hatesman" as I lovingly refer to it), is back to try to persuade students that there is some type of liberal conspiracy on campus.

The first fall issue has a picture of the Lambda Society's Student Center poster advertising National Coming Out Day, and asks "What's wrong with this picture?" I think the answer is obvious: that there has to be a day to encourage gays and lesbians to fight against bigotry and discrimination.

I, too, must ask the question "Where have our values gone?" in response to the rise in anti-gay violence, homophobia, and ignorance that seems to encompass our nation.

The "Hatesman" makes one of the biggest contradictions it has ever printed on the second page. Its statement of purpose says that

JIM MCDERMOTT

"In reporting the news, The Statesman is objective. It aims for accurate presentation of all the facts, but is not impartial." Can someone tell me how something can be objective but not impartial?

Obviously, the paper is indicating that writers will give you some of the facts in their stories, but will leave out other viewpoints that contradict the conservative values they hold so dear. This can be witnessed in the Advertising Policy a little further down the page: "No ads that conflict with The Statesman's statement of purpose will be published."

Who would want to believe anything in such a newspaper?

Furthermore, the "Hatesman" is mean-spirited, and attacks the personal character of others without any just cause. The infamous "Susan Jackson Award" given each issue to "the most biased" professor on campus is just one example of the crude mentality the paper's editors possess.

It's enough to make me want to start up my own award in honor of one of its regular columnists: The Robert W. Painter Award. This would be given to the person on campus with the most homophobic, close-minded attitude or quote of the week!

However, I won't select the candidates each week, dear reader. I'll let you do that by yourselves - just pick up a copy of the "Hatesman." There are plenty of candidates to choose from.

No doubt, I will soon be the recipient of a Susan Jackson Award sometime in the near future. I hope I get one - it means I'm doing something right in this world.

Image misrepresents real Morrison

Although it has been twenty years since his death, Jim Morrison remains a celebrated hero.

As lead singer of The Doors during the late '60s, he rocked the world with his sultry voice and theatrical performances. His strong, sensual and poetic lyrics brought new insight and awareness to a generation starved for change.

His immense popularity originated not only from his music, but also from the "Lizard King" image he created. It is this image that has been played upon by others to feed the fire of the currently burning "Morrison myth."

Sadly, the myth betrays Morrison and only represents a part of his true self. In fact, Jim Morrison's memory has never received the roundness and fullness it deserves.

WENDY KREIGER
GUEST COLUMNIST

The most widely circulated aspects of Morrison's life include his early drug usage, polygamy, excessive drinking and rock lifestyle.

Contrary to popular belief, these aspects do not solely define Morrison's substance.

What has not been so highly publicized is that Morrison was extremely intelligent, articulate and well educated.

He graduated from UCLA with a degree in cinematology and was a voracious reader. The subjects that most interested him were philosophy, sociology, psychology, mythology, literature and poetry.

He was an eloquent speaker, creative writer, artist and poet. Some of the poems he produced were incredibly potent and electric, while others were filled with great tenderness and emotion.

In addition, Morrison was very witty, charming and had a great sense of humor. A strong magnetic aura surrounded him, drawing people to his charismatic personality.

Through deduction, one can only conclude that the true essence of this legendary hero has been unfairly veiled.

The myth surrounding Morrison has given far too much credit to the image, while not enough to the man.

To bring justice to the Lizard King's memory, all parts of him need to be remembered equally.

As the old saying goes, "There is more to him than meets the eye."

Forum to discuss business concepts

By Michelle A. Tveten
Reporter

"The Quality Forum X", a national video conference created to increase customer satisfaction through the application of quality principles, will be Tuesday, Oct. 25, at the Research and Economic Development Center at 1050 Fourth Avenue.

"Quality 2000: The Next Decade of Progress" will be the theme of the program.

Larry Kyle, director of Marshall's Research and Economic Development Center, said the program will inform participants about quality principles, concepts and technologies at some of the country's largest companies.

"This video conference has been designed for anyone who wants to create and maintain a quality organization," Kyle said.

Some of the speakers will include: Alex Trotman, chairman of Ford Motor Company; Stu Arnold, publisher of Fortune Magazine; David Luther, president of the American Society for Quality Control; and John Pepper, president of the Proctor and Gamble campaign.

Kyle said each speaker will tell "how they've used total quality concepts to improve their business or organization."

The program will concentrate on three areas, Kyle said.

These areas are: milestones reached in the quality field the past 10 years; how quality principles can help in the future; and the commitment to quality by businesses and organizations.

The program will be held Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

There is a $25 registration fee which will include lunch.

Kyle said, "anybody that is trying to improve the quality of any type of organization" is invited to attend the program. He added the quality concepts can be used in both personal and professional life.

The video conference is expected to be watched by 200,000 professionals throughout North America.

A free workshop presented today from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Research and Economic Development Center is designed to help new business owners.

Lucht: Student installment plan should be reviewed

MARTINSBURG (AP) — Senate Education Chairwoman Sondra Lucht says lawmakers should review a year-old installment payment plan for college students while higher education officials should advertise it more.

Lucht, D-Berkeley, said

Wednesday a report released by the college and university systems did not shake her faith in the plan, which she helped enact last year.

However, "I think we need to look at it," both from the point of how many students are participating and how many are not making their payments, Lucht said.

The program lets students pay their tuition in three installments instead of all at once.

Fewer than 5 percent of the students in the State College System and fewer than 2 percent of the students in the University of West Virginia System participated, said James Sutherland, director of finance and facilities for both systems.

Participation ranged from 1.6 percent at West Liberty State College to 16.29 percent at Concord College and from 1.29 percent at Marshall University to 1.5 percent at West Virginia University.

Herd in preparation for second season

With a mark of 9-13 overall and 4-3 in conference, sophomore Kelly Boerstler (No. 2) and senior Denise Lane (No. 6) attempt to block the competition and help the team rise to the top.

After a tough weekend against conference opponents, the volleyball team took a week off from play to prepare for the second half of its schedule.

Marshall, 9-13 overall, 4-3 conference, will begin its second season Saturday against conference foe Davidson, 6-18, 2-5.

The Herd's match this weekend will be the second meeting for the two schools. Marshall defeated Davidson earlier this year in its first conference match.

Steadman said she is excited about playing the rest of the conference games.

"We have seen every team in the conference at least once now," she said. "Our team knows we can play with any team in this conference."

The Herd was in action last weekend with conference matches against Appalachian State, 19-3, 7-0, and East Tennessee State 8-14, 4-3.

"We gained a lot of confidence during the Appalachian State match," Lady Herd coach Susan Steadman said.

She said the women were intimidated a little by the Lady Mountaineers undefeated conference record but started playing better when they realized they were just as good. The Herd ended up losing the match 11-15, 15-5, 15-10, 15-13.

Steadman said she was pleased with her team's effort in coming back and defeating East Tennessee the next day 15-10, 15-8 and 15-13.

"The girls were able to transmit what we were telling them to do from the bench," she said. "We recovered from our mistakes."

Steadman said she was especially pleased with the performance of Ashley Lowman, a freshman setter from Staunton, Va.

"Ashley had her greatest match of the season. She made some wise decisions. She's under a lot of pressure as setter on a senior-dominated team but she handles her position very well," Steadman said.

MU beats Tech

In its last home game of the season, the Marshall soccer team squeaked by Virginia Tech 2-1 Wednesday night.

With the win, the Herd improved to 4-9-2. The Hokies dropped to a 4-9 mark.

Senior Brett Templeton scored the winning goal for MU. "I'm so proud of the way the seniors played tonight," coach Scott Fisher told the Herald-Dispatch. "The seniors really set the tone for the match with their enthusiasm early in the game." Marshall travels to Charleston, S.C. this Saturday to take on The Citadel.

It's showdown time with the Mounties

By Penny K. Copen
Staff Writer

With a win at Appalachian State, the undefeated Herd would improve to 8-0, the team's best start in football since 1988. But Herd players will be fighting for a lot more than just a perfect record Saturday at Boone, N. C.

With Appalachian State presenting a clear hurdle to the Herd's title hopes, perhaps the Southern Conference championship is more prevalent in the minds of the players. But if head coach Jim Donnan is looking at the game as a major title test for his team, he's not admitting it.

"It's a little early to make a call as to whether this will decide the conference because we still have three regular season games after this Saturday," Donnan said. "If we can win this and put it behind us, then it will certainly put us in the driver's seat for the conference title."

Marshall has not traveled to Appy since the 1991 season, when Marshall lost the opener to Appy 9-3. Donnan said he is not concerned about previous games with the Mountaineers.

"That was an entirely different team and we can't worry about what's happened before," Donnan said. "We beat them last year 35-3 and we can't let that influence how we perceive this year's game."

Appalachian State head coach Jerry Moore agrees with Donnan that the No. 1 Division

Win would put Herd in SC driver's seat

I-AA team in the land is a different team from the 1991 season.

"This team has changed a lot since the Payton years when it was a passing force," Moore said referring to the team headed by MU quarterback Michael Payton. "This team is more versatile and much more three-dimensional. Now they have a dominant defense and present a much better running game."

The five-year Mountaineer coach said the Marshall-Appalachian matchup has always been considered a big game from the conference standpoint.

"Most of the time when we play it is generally an important game," Moore said. "It's been a long time since we've played a game that hasn't had a bearing on the conference."

Marshall's offense must get keyed up to play a defense which is allowing opponents to complete only 46 percent of their passes for just under 121 yards per game. Appy has given up just a pair of TD passes and has six interceptions and a league-high 27 quarterback sacks.

Although Marshall is averaging nearly 47 points and 449 yards per game, almost no one expects those numbers Saturday.

Along with the Mountaineer defense, Appy will present junior quarterback Scott Satterfield, who just replaced senior starter Andy Arnold. Satterfield came off the bench against Georgia Southern to hit 20 of 32 pass attempts for 287 yards and three TDs while running for 64 yards and a fourth score.

"We're pleased with the way Scott's played and that's who we're going to go with," Moore said.

Moore said this Marshall team may be the best ever or may appear better due to its schedule.

"It's a little bit misleading when you're comparing teams, because no one has pushed them this year. No one has tested them," Moore said. "I thought Western Carolina was a good team, but they were manhandled. I thought Georgia Southern was a good team, but it was no contest (against Marshall)."

Kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday at Kidd Brewer Stadium, where an overflow crowd of more than 20,000 fans is expected for the eagerly awaited contest.

Offensive Matchup
✓ Kudos need to be paid to the line, (TE) Danny White and (FB) Chris Grose. They haven't received recognition, but they are the key to the offense.	Chip Hooks (RB) is small (5-7, 156), but has 589 yards on the ground. ASU is starting Scott Satterfield at QB. Starter Andy Arnold was benched last week.
Defensive Matchup
✓ Although giving up only 10 points a game, the Herd defense is overshadowed by the offense. It will have to keep the numbers low this week.	The ASU defense leads the SoCon in sacks with 27. LB Dexter Coakley leads team with 68 tackles and six sacks. DB Matt Stevens has four pickoffs.
Overall Matchup
✓ Coach Donnan's squad has done an excellent job mentally preparing for teams. This week, it will take more than mental power to beat ASU.	Last week's loss to Georgia Southern means nothing. ASU will be fired up for Marshall. The Southern Conference title hinges on this game.

The celluloid canvas

Starting today, the Keith Albee Theatre will become a giant easel for foreign film artists to express themselves.

The International Film Festival, sponsored by the Marshall Artist Series, features six foreign films that will play three times each and will run through Thursday. The festival takes place at the Keith Albee Theatre and is free to full-time Marshall students. Tickets are $3 for part-time students and $6 for the public.

Mark Dirksen, Marshall Artist Series administrative assistant, said that unlike other Marshall Artists Series' presentations, students need not get tickets in advance at the series box office.

"Just go to the box office at the Keith Albee with their I.D. and we'll let them in," Dirksen said.

The films featured are as follows:

"The Scent of Green Papaya" is set in 1951 Vietnam, and follows the life of 10-year-old Mui, a servant girl in a troubled family. Mui comes to work in a Saigon household and the film details her relationships with various household members.

"Belle Epoque" is a lighthearted comedy about Fernando, a young army deserter who's befriended by an elderly recluse and his four beautiful daughters. Set in 1930s Spain, "Belle Epoque" won the Best Foreign Film Oscar and numerous awards in Spain.

"Blue" is a contemporary French film that stars Juliette Binoche as a woman who tragically loses her family. She moves into a Paris flat in an effort to shut herself off from the world and contemplate life. "Blue" won the Best Film award at the 1993 Venice Film Festival.

"Farewell My Concubine" is the story of Douzi and Shitou, two male Peking Opera stars. The movie details their contentious 52-year relationship through the chaos of communism and the cultural revolution in China. "Farewell My Concubine" won Best Foreign Film awards from the 1994 Golden Globe Awards and the 1993 New York Film Critics Award. This film was also co-winner of the top award at the 1993 Cannes Film Festival.

"The Accompanist" is a French drama about deceit set during World War II. The film tells the story of a young, unworldly woman, Sophie, who is hired as an accompanist to a famous Parisian singer who has been collaborating with the enemy.

"Naked" is set in 1990s London, where the unemployed Johnny comes unannounced to stay with his ex-girlfriend, Louise. Johnny leaves to wander the streets and encounters a variety of odd characters. This movie is a comedy as well as a drama and is often violent. "Naked" has won numerous awards, including Best Film at the 1993 Cannes Film Festival.
