always last:

an even break

is called for

Did you ever stop to think how much you depend upon the news media to inform you about what's going on around you? People rely upon the media everyday to tell them what's going on in the world.

At Marshall, students turn to The Parthenon to keep them abreast of what's happening. A survey last semester showed that 68 per cent of students participating in the study read The Parthenon regularly and 52.5 per cent depend on it for the majority of the news they read.

Students turn to The Parthenon more than any other newspaper, the survey showed.

University officials charged with the responsibility of making official news announcements for the school apparently could care less about whether the students are informed.

The case for this argument: James A. Martin, director of information and publications, and John S. Callebs, director of development, continuously release major MU news stories so as to give the off-campus news media a break on publication of the stories over The Parthenon, the Marshall University student newspaper.

Case in point: The announcement of a new athletic director was made Sunday night to the news media at a time when The Parthenon is not publishing. This was done even though numerous requests had been made on this and other stories to give The Parthenon at least an even break.

Previews of coming attractions: It's the time of year to release student enrollment figures for second semester. Guess what? The information and publications office says it has to release the news to the other media-meaning the downtown newspapers, radio and television before The Parthenon, the Marshall University student newspaper, has the opportunity to publish the story.

The list of such occurrences is much longer.

The Parthenon appreciates the news sources we have on campus, but many key stories are channeled through the information officials in Old Main-persons trained in working with the media to promote better relations for the University.

These are the people we are calling for to give us a

The Parthenon is The university newspaper and what better place for news affecting the University community to be released than through The Parthenon

The Parthenon deadlines aren't competitive with the other media. Deadlines are 2 p.m. on the day before the newspaper is distributed on campus. So for The Parthenon to have even an even break with the other media we must have first consideration on news releases.

The Parthenon gives the University first consideration in printing University news. The University should put The Parthenon first.

LEONID HAMBRO APPEARING THURSDAY Convocation series has pianist and humorist

Concert pianist--humorist to perform in convocation

Leonid Hambro, known as "A Man for All Music" will appear at a convocation at 11 a.m. Thursday in Old Main auditorium.

The concert pianist and humorist has become well-known since he began appearing in concert and on television with Victor Borge, famous comedy pianist, in 1961.

Hambro, as a concert pianist, has appeared with almost every major symphony orchestra (New York, Boston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia) under such conductors as Toscanini, Kostelanetz, Bernstein, Stokowsky, and Mitropoulos.

He has appeared with many leading Chamber Music groups, was official pianist for the New York Philharmonic Orchestra for 14 years, and was on the staff of the Juilliard School of Music for eight years.

Hambro's reputation as a humorist has been established through his success on college seminar programs which explore humor. His program "Fun with Music" has been well received by many audiences

He studied at the Juilliard School of Music on a five year fellowship. interrupted in 1942 for service in the U.S. Navy. When he was released he won the coveted Naumberg Award which launched him on his

MU budget presented

By GARY RAMSEY Editor-in-chief

The West Virginia Board of Regents asked for a $1.6 million increase in the Marshall University operating budget Tuesday before the finance committee for the 1971-72 fiscal

The budget sought for the coming year is $8,876,740 compared with the current Marshall budget of $7,274,643. Dr. Prince B. Woodard, chancellor of the board said Marshall's breakdown with the present appropriation is,

SCWC initiates medical policy

By COLLEEN COLBY Staff reporter

Monday afternoon the Student Welfare and Conduct Committee passed a new policy on medical withdrawals for emotionally disturbed students and discussed current health center problems.

The procedure is to contact the director of the health or counseling services. Either director can make a preliminary diagnosis.

Later in joint consultation (which will possibly include other University professionals) they will reach a decision as to whether definitive medical diagnosis is in order.

The student has the right to appeal the decision to a special University committee if it is non-voluntary.

The Student Welfare and Conduct Committee also discussed problems with the present Student Health Center. Some of the most important problems seem to be the lack of space in the present location and the amount of medical coverage available in the limited hours of Constantine W. Curris, director of student personnel programs, says that a Student Health Committe is being set up to help advise Dr. Russel Hall, director of the Student Health Center, on these matters.

"personal services, $7,334,037 as compared to ($6,263,805); current expenses, $703,600 ($488,146); repairs and alterations, $334,753 ($262,252); and equipment, $504,350 ($260,440).

The budget increase inclosed provisions for 32 new faculty members and 36 non teaching positions. Marshall had requested 51 new faculty members.

The West Virginia University budget as recommended would be $25,310,347, compared with the present appropriation of $21,781,840.

Dr. Woodard told the committee the regents are asking for funds to hire 145 new faculty members at the eight state colleges and two universities.

Dr. Woodard also told the committee, "Faculty upgrading is one imperative for West Virginia higher education and cannot be postponed."

Deficits in the number of volumes in libraries is another problem at virtually every school and $1 million is recommended to buy some 100,000 new volumes during 1971-72.

Of the 700,396 book deficit, Marshall leads the list with a deficit of 209,772 volumes.

Thorpe resigns

Karen Thorpe, Vienna senior, Monday night resigned as president of Interdormitory Council, saying she was involved in too many other activities and citing an apparent lack of interest in IDC by students.

Miss Thorpe, will be succeeded by Paul Skaff, Charleston senior and former IDC vice president. In resigning, Miss Thorpe told the Parthenon most dormitory residents don't seem to be interested in IDC or its work.

According to Miss Thorpe the IDC was very effective last year and they met the need of the dorm students.

private probation from the North Central Association of colleges and Secondary Schools for the deficiency in the MU library.

Dr. Woodard said, some improvements in the libraries and facilities are mandatory if the schools are to have this probation lifted and received for accredidation.

The Regents' budget would provide for a 7.5 per cent average increase for all faculty members, at all institutions however the board has indicated the increase will be on merit and not "across-the-board."

Results of IDC survey released

By SONDRA LEWIS Staff reporter

Results of a survey by Interdormitory Council (IDC) and Student Senate show dormitory residents would take their problems to the Senate or IDC only as a last resort.

"Results of the survey distrubed me." said Michael Gant. Huntington junior and student body president.

Gant, who spoke Monday night to IDC at Twin Towers East library, said Student Government is interested in the dormitory students because they make up one-third to one-half of the students on campus.

According to Nick Keller, Union, New Jersey, freshman and South, Hall IDC representative, the reason IDC and Student Senate were the last resort was that "the students are apathetic towards the major problems and concern themselves with minor problems which they can take to their resident advisors."

When Gant was questioned by Susan Pope, sophomore, and South Hall representative of IDC, about the power the Senate had, he noted that the most important asset was the "power of persuasion-that of centralizing the problems and presenting the case."

Opera auditions to be Saturday

Auditions for the Metropolitan Opera will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in Smith Music Hall under supervision of Mrs. Walker Long, Huntington representative of the Metropolitan Company

To be eligible to audition each singer must be between 19 and 30 years old, studying music in a West Virginia school, and be recommended by his local Chamber of Commerce and music teachers.

Former Metropolitan Opera members Phyllis Curtin, a Clarksburg native; Wolfgang Schanzer, New York City opera coach; and Kenneth Smith, University of Kansas music professor, will select three finalists to attend the regionals at Indiana University.

Julian sponsors listening period

According to Frank Julian, dean of students, starting shortly most of his evenings will be taken up in "listening to student groups."

This listening period will cover approximately a two-month time

Julian says he would like to hit as many organizations as possible. His purpose is to get a consensus of what is right and wrong at Marshall and to find out any gaps or voids.

Drug program to feature films

By SHARON BLADES Staff reporter

Films on drug abuse soon will be available for showing before groups on campus, according to Mary Louise Gallagher, dean of special programs.

Miss Gallagher said the film program and other aspects of drug education her office is working on are designed to fill the void left by the demise of the former drug council.

Miss Gallagher is guiding the establishment of the drug film program by researching, and previewing films. She will also present them to the groups.

Also as part of the program, dormitory residence advisors will be trained to counsel other students on drug problems.

Assisting Miss Gallagher in the drug education program are Paul F. Cooper, Westbury, N.Y., senior, and Sidney Sowards, Huntington senior, work study students

Board to govern

By ERNEST GORGIA Staff reporter

A radio board of six students and three University staff members has been formed to govern the operation of WMUL-FM, campus radio station.

Formation of the board was the result of a dispute at the end of the first semester between student staff members and radio station officials about the station operation.

Under the new arrangement, Dean Sturm, WMUL-FM station manager was named program director. The position formerly was filled by a student.

Terry Dye, New Berlin, N.Y., junior, was named chief announcer.

The Board meets at noon Mondays in the office of general manager, Dr. Terry Hollinger, and meetings are open to interested individuals.

The Board discussed, in its Feb. 1 meeting, the "Practice in Broadcasting" course offered by the speech department and the problems involved in supervision and evaluation of the students enrolled in these courses. The members expressed concern that the present situation was too limiting in terms of how many and what types of students might receive credit.

The problems of missing records and station promotion were discussed. Dr. Stephen Buell, director of educational radio and television, told the Board of the problems involved in obtaining promotion through the local newspaper. Dean Sturm, station manager, reported on the promotion presently carried by WMUL-TV and the Parthenon.

Monday's meeting, discussions centered on the problems of news coverage and the duties and responsibilities of each news man.

Dr. Hollinger said, "We feel that this Board may well act as a model for other departments."

According to Julian, some of the reasons for the holdup on the board meetings are that the Appeals Board had not been named until recently (they still haven't been approved); and we didn't have a president.

Julian says that he feels optimistic toward the success of the Judicial Board as it is about to get underway.

He termed the Judicial Board as "our first real try at selfgovernance at Marshall.'

African scholar to study here

The Regional Council For International Education has announced that Marshall will participate in it's scholar-inresidence program for the third successive year, according to Dr. A. Mervin Tyson, vice president of academic affairs Sillaty Kemoh Dabo, of Fourah Bay College, University of Sierra Leone, Freetown, West Africa will study at Marshall for one week beginning March 14.

Dabo, author of several papers on African nationalism, is involved in a 26 week tour of 18 colleges and universities in Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

Dabo, a specialist in African literature in both French and English, has received academic degrees from schools in both Frances and England, including the University of Oxford, where he served as president of the Oxford University Africa Society.

Proposed lecture topics for Dabo's tour include African Writing in English and French, The Significance of Education, and African Nationalism.

The R.C.I.E. has sent two of it's scholars-in-residence to study at Marshall in the past. In 1969, a representative was sent from the University of Bogota, Columbia, and a scholar from Yugoslavia was here last year.
