Coaches awaiting MAC report

By LINDA GRIST CREWE

Staff reporter

The factors which led MU to re-apply to the MAC have not changed, according to Joseph McMullen, director of athletics McMullen, who is waiting for the official report on the refusal of Marshall's application for readmittance to theMAC, refused to make a statementuntilhe had read the report. When the report is released, McMullen said he and President John G. Barker will go over the report and study it objectively. Then the entire athletic department will closely examine the report, according to McMullen.

Committee disappointed --Willey

Members of Marshall's Athletic Committee are "terribly disappointed," according to Dr. Harold Willey, over Saturday's announcement of Marshall's rejection by the MAC.

Chairman of the committee, Dr Hunter Hardman, said that he would "not make any statements. It is Dr. Barker's place to decide on Marshall's position in the matter," he concluded.

When asked whether the committee would meet to discuss the rejection, Dr. Hardman answered, "We will have our usual meeting Thursday morning, and doubtless the Mid-American Conference will be discussed, but it is not the reason the meeting is scheduled. This meeting was called long before the decision by the conference was released."

Dr. Willey, professor of education, said "It's our university and we can't pretend . we don't care. We do care very much. We worked so hard and we're terribly disappointed.'

Another committee member, Marvin Mills associate professor of safety education, expressed hesitancy about making any comment. "I'm naturally disappointed but I would want to receive a confirmation from the Mid-American Conference before I could react formally," he said.

Carl R. Tacy, head basketball coach, said "There should be as little reaction as possible until we receive the written report from the MAC, and it is analyzed.'

Reflecting on last Saturday's game, McMullen expressed "How proud we were of the conduct and sportsmanship of the student body and general fans. It was a potentially explosive situation.'

"We've got to be together in our decision," said Tacy. "The direction in which we go is dependent on the President, the athletic director and the athletic committee.

"Everyone worked hard trying to get back in and I think everyone felt some disappointment.

'Regardless of whether we go back into the conference, we are going to work to improve our athletic program to a level we can be happy with," said Tacy.

'When the report does come out, if it gives concrete reasons for refusal then we can react more positively. We can look realistically at what others say are deficiencies and our goals.

Jack W. Cook, head baseball coach, said he was both surprised and disappointed about the decision of the MAC. He said most of the baseball coaches in the MAC had hinted to him Marshall would be readmitted for next year.

"The MAC is an excellent conference for baseball. They have fine competition.

'As far as baseball is concerned and the kids playing the MAC is best for us," Swimming coach Robert Saunders expressed similar feelings towards MAC readmission. He said three MAC coaches had indicated to him Marshall's readmittance looked "like a sure thing.

For swimming the MAC is still "the way to go," said Saunders. Remaining independent or joining another conference poses traveling and scheduling

"If we remain independent, we can forget any meaningful competition in swimming. Even if it means waiting another year, if we are going to go to a conference, the MAC is the most economically feasible," said Saunders.

MAC controversy remains

Athletes and students give views

One of the most controversial issues around Marshall concerns the positive and negative views regarding whether Marshall should rejoin the Mid American Conference, stay independent, or seek membership in another con-

Since the most important people involved in this decision are the athletes, various Marshall athletes were asked to comment on the MAC decision.

One of the most productive figures in Marshall sports, Russell Lee, Boston, Mass. senior, stated, "I'd rather be independent. We're still fighting for a title, but it's the NCAA, not the MAC."

Tyrone Collins, Paterson, N. J. junior, said, "I'd rather stay independent, you get better exposure, and you get into more tournaments.

Group protests drug laws, raid

By JOHN WILSON

Editor-in-chief

Approximately 150 people gathered utside the Women's Physical Education uilding Monday night to rally support for national legalization of marijuana and show support for James (Arnie) McCoy, who was arrested Friday in a

The group began to congregate around 7:50 p.m. and dispersed after moving into Memorial Student Center at about 8:20

During the gathering, spokesmen talked about raising funds to assist "Arnie" who is in jail in lieu of $30,000 bond and passed a hat for a collection on his behalf

Other self-appointed speakers talked of the unfairness of marijuana laws. Jay Mitchell, Lewisburg junior and a group spokesman, said about 25 to 35 per cent of the group was smoking marijuana during the gathering.

When the crowd moved inside the student center, Mitchell and several others mounted the stairs to address those standing below. Here they discussed moving in what was emphasized as a "peaceful manner" to the police station to obtain information ; bout 'Arnie.'

When the crowd began to disperse Mitchell and Jayne Fravel, Charleston sophomore and another group spokesman, were interviewed by The Parthenon.

Miss Fravel said, "You can't say we organized it. It was the bust that got people out."

However, they admitted that they began placing posters on campus advertising the gathering around 4:30 p.m. Monday.

Miss Fravel said they were pleaseu with the turnout and said they hoped an even larger number would gather for the same reasons today at 8 p.m.

Mitchell said he hoped to get the city's narcotics officer to come to speak to the group today "to try to keep a riot from starting by supplying legal information.

Mitchell called the group "Arnie's Army" and said they were striving for "just treatment of Arnie." Mitchell said the $30,000 bond figure was "outrageous considering some accused of murder get Mitchell said the decision to organize the gathering came when an official in the Memorial Student Center tried to have a wreath removed that was sent in support of McCoy.

Mitchell said he stopped the official who was removing the wreath and asked him why it was bei ng taken out. He then asked to see appropriate authorities and had a conference with W. Don Morris, manager of the student center.

After meeting with Morris and Dr. Richard Mund, vice president of student affairs, it was decided that the wreath could remain in the center as long as it bore a tag saying, "This wreath represents the opinions of a segment of the student body and does not necessarily reflect the University point of view.'

Mitchell said he was asking concerned persons to wear black arm bands to indicate their support. However, Mitchell was also strong in advocating peace.

"I won't advocate any kind of violence whatever. We don't want people arrested. permit," he said.

Salvatore said he feels pursuing the Mid-American Conference is a mistake

Nine-sport support cited

Marshall needs to be committed to the support of all nine sports on the same scale as the other Mid-American Conference schools to be readmitted into the MAC, commissioner Fred Jacoby told The Parthenon Monday.

In a telephone interview from Columbus, Jacoby said the comprehensive nine-sport program includes cross country, football, basketball, wrestling, swimming, baseball, track, golf and tennis.

He said the MAC was especially concerned with MU's track facilities. He added that the University would be unable to host a championship track meet due to lack of facilities.

"The council noted with satisfaction that the recruiting and other irregularities reported in 1969 had been corrected," said Jacoby in an earlier interview, "and, it affirmed complete confidence in and support for the administration and the athletic staff of the university.

Jacoby said he was personally "very impressed" with the improvements which have been made in MU's Athletic Department and especially in Fairfield

The MAC Council of Presidents has been considering raising the number of members to 10, said Jacoby. Because of this and other considerations, the MAC would like to take some time to study the situation more completely, he added.

He cited such problems as the suspensions from the MAC because of recruiting violations in the athletic program, lack of facilities and the selection of two coaches who turned the jobs down a few days after they were

The sports editor also was highly critical of what he said has been the secrecy surrounding many of the athletic decisions at MU.

> "Those in charge of the athletic program must remember that Marshall is a state supported school and its business is the public's business," said Salvatore. "This whole mess over the years could have been avoided if they would have listened to the public more.

MU stop crawling and make move

Crawl and wait, crawl and wait. Isn't that what Marshall has been doing in trying togetback into the Mid-American Conference? Now again Marshall got stuck on the short end of the stick

Now comes the question of what MU should do next. Should we wait until we come up for admission into the MAC in 1973 or should we take some other course of action?

Reasons given for Marshall not being readmitted this year were the lack of facilities to handle the MAC's nine-major sports and the 'modest overall budget and student enrollment of Marshall compared with MAC schools." Another major factor is the possibility of Northern Illinois and Ball State of Muncie, Ind., applying for admission to the conference with the breakup of their infant conference now certain.

An official within the MAC's inner council was quoted as saying, "There was a sincere desire to get Marshall back until these two schools became available again.

Admittedly the facilities at Marshall for sports are poor, except for the newly renovated Fairfield Stadium. The track team has no track; the baseball team has to travel five miles to use a field which they don't own; the fieldhouse used for basketball is too small, outdated and not owned by MU; the swimming team has a pool but it is inadequate and $120,000 is being spent on it this summer for renovation. Area and campus facilities for golf, tennis, wrestling and cross country are adequate.

The point behind this is not to down grade Marshall, but to look at the facts. We have been rejected until next year for not having adequate facilities, but there is absolutely no way of making any substantial improvements by the time we are up for readmission.

This same point holds true for the "modest budget and student enrollment," It is true that MU's enrollment has increased and will continue to increase, but not to any great extent to compare with MAC: schools. The proposed 1972-73 budget for Marshall has been increased by 16 per cent, but is parison MU athletics receive more money for the school's size than the larger schools.

Where does this leave Marshall next year?
Basically in the same situation we are in now only by then Northern Illinois and Ball State will have made up their minds about the conference and if they decide not to join we may be asked to come in. No matter how you look at it, it's playing second fiddle and Marshall is tired of doing this in its own state no less going to Ohio to have it done.

To look ahead to when and if the MAC asks Marshall to rejoin the conference MU should be in a position to say, "We don't want you and we don't need you" because of another conference affiliation or staying independent. It is time to start making plans for the future We must decide where we want to go. If we want a conference make it known. Both Ohio Valley Conference and the Southern Conference are good but if we are going to remain independent it should be by ownchoice and we should make it known

MU gets boot again

MAC: Marshall, will you please put your rear end up on the launching pad. We feel it's time to give you another boot.

How nice of the Great Fathers of the MAC to make special efforts for Marshall to apply for readmission before 1973. But this way they can kick Marshall now, and maybe again in another year.

Hopefully MU will not take that path again.

The old saying goes that third time's the charm.

So maybe after three, Marshall has learned its lesson. Marshall athletic officials had done a good public relations job, almost convincing the public that the MAC was best for Marshall. And that was not an easy task after MU's dismissal in 1969, and the MAC decision not to hear areadmission appeal until 1973, But the MU community was almost convinced that we "had sinned," but "had earnestly repented." And now the Great Fathers (being so benevolent)

So again with all faith and confidence MU set its rear on the launching pad to play the MAC's favorite sport-give Marshall the boot!

True, it all sounds like the sour grapes and the fox in Aesop's tale. And maybe it is. But even animals can be conditioned to turn away from what really looks good after it harms them two or three times. Admittedly, the old "grapes" and benefits of the MAC looked awfully tempting for a while. But we hope the fox is getting tired of making an ass of himself jumping after "the fruits" of the MAC. Now it's time to redirect our efforts. Dr. Barker, the athletic committee, McMullen and his staff, and The Parthenon all took stands in favor of the

But now that it's more than clear that this is not feasible, our alternatives need to be re-examined with the MAC out of the picture.

Remain independent or seek another conference? The choice must be made. But the school boasting the eleventh-ranked basketball team in the nation has no reason to subject itself to the humiliation readily dished out by the Mid-American Conference.

Q. What are the rules and regulations governing the rental of rooms in the Memorial Student Center? Are students given priorities over outside groups wanting to use the rooms?

A. According to Kanal Samar, assistant director of the Student Center, there is a specific policy that is followed. Student groups and organizations which are planning an event in which there is no admission charge and/or the event is open to the University Community, rooms may be obtained free. Students must pay $35 for use of the Multi-purpose Room. If there is an admission charge and/ or the sponsored event is closed to the University Community, then students may still obtain the meeting rooms free. However, they must pay $25 for a conference room and $70 for the Multipurpose Room. Non-university groups may schedule rooms within the Student Center after the needs of the University Community have been met. Non-university groups must pay $15 for a meeting room, $35 for a conference room and $100 for the Multi-purpose Room. The rental fee for the Multipurpose Room will increase to $125 after July 1.

The third time is charmed?

MU vs WVU in opera

To the editor:

Everyone knows that the competitive spirit in sports between Marshall and West Virginia University is below the relations of Saigon and Hanoi and will never reach the Ping Pong level of the USA and China, but believe it or not one Sports competition is left intact and flourishes annually: the "sport" of operatic singing. Every February for the last nine years a group of well built and strong voiced singers of both sexes appears in our fair city of Huntington, for the last four years in the nice facilities of the Marshall University Music Hall which even would satisfy the strongest critics within the MAC and competes under the generous directorship of Mrs. Walker Long, our local Maecenas for the regional Metropolitan Opera auditions of a Tri-State whose area extends up to Morgantown and Charleston, to Athens, Ohio and Morehead. And believe it or not the dents of the Morgantown and Huntington often accompanied by their decorative coaches, former prima-and secunda-donnas, appear nicely spruced and in good poise on the stage of Evelyn Smith Hall and all morning youthful Mimis, Toscas, Louises, Paminas and Susannas as well as a few Fausts, Don Pasquales and Pagliaccis delight a widetown's audience with their hopeful young voices. And most of the time the nonors of winning are alternated between Marshall and West Virginia University which by the way had three winners in last week's competition. Real stern juages screen the contestants, and it happens occasionally just as in basketball that a too excited coach whose disciple lost may in old operatic temperament lose a furious verbal barrage against the jury but in general a marvelous spirit of peaceful coexistance prevails and our sports people could learn a lesson from it. O f course our Tri-State is still a minor league, from here the winners move to the regional auditions in Indianapolis and the survivors make the competition in New York and get the educational benefits of winners, even sometimes contracts. A marvelous way to select good young

Over the years Fortuna was friendly to both our great schools and foreigners admire again and again the natural talents of West Virginia singers, after all we produced an Eleanor Steber and a Phillis Curtin who were and are great names at the greatest opera house in this hemisphere. Last year's winner in our competition is now supplementing her music education in Vienna, our pint-size primadonna Paulette Vinyard. So let us keep the good spirit up and stay together with Morgantown, the lucky winners of 1972 (three prizes) in peaceful coexistance of our great "Metropolitan Opera Conference." even without the blessing of the MAC.

Sees no need for MAC

To the editor: This weekend another chapter was written in the story of Marshall University. I, of course, refer to the action (or lack of action) of the MAC. As one who was a student at Marshall in 1969 when it all began and one who has seen Marshall dragged through times of nasty innuendoes, through rudeness and hostility of the MAC, through a tragic and still unbelievable plane crash, through a one-night-stand football coach, and through a naive and invincible athletic director I feel compelled to speak out at this issue. Marshall has really worked hard at being re-admitted to the MAC. We have literally bent over backwards, lowered ourselves, and sacrificed MU's reputation in being so determined on getting back into the MAC.

One of Mr. McMullen's first statements upon his arrival here was that getting back into the MAC was Marshall's best choice. (Where upon he became known to many of us as Mr. MAC Mullen!) When he first said this it could be credited to his being too new to have studied the situation thoroughly Now, however, the explanation can no longer be used. It must be difficult for Mr. MACMullen to show his face after so great a kick in the teeth. He refuses to answer questions about it-evidence his refusal to do so before the game Saturday. I don't know how much plainer they can make it- the MAC doesn't want us if there is anyone else available. So why can't Marshall realize this and stop begging and being so foolish just because a few officials refuse to accept the facts! I am tired of being a student at a University that stoops so low as to beg for admission into a second rate conference! Even if we stay independent it would be better than stooping to the level of the MAC. Being independent hasn't seemed to hurt Marquette any! Our basketball team is currently 11th in the nation and probably will rise in this week's poll. Could MAC membership enhance that many? I think

Ugh, remembering the times during my undergraduate days when I was stuck with a poor instructor or an irrelevant class makes me want to shinny a tree with shorts on!

I wonder how many students have been stuck in classes where the instructor was so bad he killed the students desire for learning? Or, how many students could have avoided being stuck in classes where the instructor was so bad he killed the students desire for learning if there had been a teacher and course evaluation?

A teacher and course evaluation is an attempt by Student Government to effectively evaluate the communication processes between student and Evaluation of courses and teachers should be undertaken by students because this is the reason why the courses and teachers are here, according to Student Coordinator Gilda White, Branchland junior, who says "nobody can judge a teacher's effectiveness like a student can.'

Last semester a trial run was made with about 30 teachers and courses evaluated, Miss White said, and the students were frank and honest about the class and instructor. One student wrote a two page letter on why he didn't like the class, that brought about positive results.

It is not always the easy teacher that gets the good evaluation because of the different criteria considered in the evaluation, she said. So far there has been no overall F's made by any of the instructors evaluated. Generally, instructors were rated as either good or average, said The purpose of the evaluation is two fold, according to Miss White. One reason was so students would know what to expect when they anticipated a new class room situation such as knowing something of the instructor or the type of work done in the class. The second reason is for the instructor, so he may evaluate himself in terms of student-teacher communication. If he shows a negative response from the students he may wish to adapt new methods or styles of teaching. "If the instructors are good teachers then they won't mind being evaluated because they want to help the students and help themselves," said Miss

The old saying goes..."Third time's a charm." And the old question goes...will Marshall attempt to rejoin the Mid-American Conference for the third time in three years? The answers are...hope not and no.

Why should MU try again. Why should MU give the MAC another chance to humiliate it. And that's exactly what will happen if Marshall reapplies again next year.

This year MU was given the boot because Ball State and Northern Illinois suddenly became eligible for conference membership. The conference they were in, Midwest, is folding. It bership. The conference they were in, Midwest, is folding. It seems these two schools are better suited to grace the hallowed halls

Swimming records of MACdom than Marshall.

So let them. But forgive them, for they know not what they do. But then again, if MU was to apply again next year, the MAC might take the "black sheep West Virginians" back in. That is, if Slippery Rock, Cleveland State, Samford, Maine, South Dakota, Cal-Riverside, Northern and Southern Michigan and Siwash didn't suddenly become eligible first. Surely any one of these schools would be better suited to represent the MAC's great white fathers.

Probably the most outrageouspart of the whole "bye bye Marshall' deal was the reasons the Council of Presidents gave for delaying another year.

The Council cited a lack of facilities as the primary reason for the Gee, they even acted surprised that MU had made little or no changes in facilities.

For that performance they should get an "oscar."
What a flimsy excuse. What an inadequate snow job. They didn't even bother to cover their tracks. You can bet the MAC fathers knew the facility rectification progress report before they ever decided to let MU reapply a year early. So what suddenly changed to whole picture? The MAC fathers looked stage right and found two "superior" schools waiting in the wings

Some how, Marshall was able to win two football games without the MAC. And just some how, Marshall was able to be ranked 11th in the nation without the MAC. However, the MAC did help the Herd achieve these goals to a degree. It provided one team, BG, to beat in football and thus far has supplied four teams for the Herd to run over in basketball.

Meanwhile, athletic Director Joe McMullen was surprised, to say the least, at the rejection notice.

"I was sitting and talking with the Bowling Green coaches when I got the phone call notifying me of the decision," he said. "The Bowling Green coaches had been talking about how good it was going to be to have Marshall back in the MAC.

McMullen should have been greatly pleased with the conduct of the fans at the BG-MU game. It was exceptional considering who MU was playing and who that team represented. It would have been nice to hear him commend the crowd over the PA system for a change, instead of deriding it for its poor conduct.

However, McMullen wasn't pleased with the green-shirted seven who showed up at the game with questionable slogans on their

and even though the shirts bore the truth of the matter, the truth often hurts. It must have hurt McMullen, too.

For, he offered to escort one of the seven out of the field house.

This "one" just happened to be Chief Justice photographer Lew Harford. When Lew started to go onto the floor to shoot the game for the year book, he encountered McMullen.
"He told me I couldn't shoot the game from the floor," Harford said. ". He said if I came down and tried he would have me evicted for wearing vulgarity."

Vulgarity, Mr. McMullen?

Who's to say what is vulgar and what's not. A perfectly acceptable word to me may be perfectly vulgar to you. So, who's right?

To some people, the words "war" and "Vietnam" are vulgar. To others the words "hippie" and "freak" are vulgar. Would you have evicted someone from the premised for wearing any one of those four words on a shirt, Mr. McMullen? *

The slogan didn't offend the basketball team, however. One while the second round is member of the squad told green-shirted assistant sports editor Andre Armstrong to "Order 15 more of them for the basketball February 21. team. But get them with v-necksso we can wear them with ties when we go up to Ohio U. and Miami.'

Bowling Green coach Pat Haley wasn't as much offended by the shirts as he was sorry his team played the Herd at an inopportune

"Marshall was sky high for this game," he said. "They wanted to show us and the MAC."

Haley also spoke of his next game...and away match at Notre

"I'll tell you, if the pope ex-communicates Digger Phelps (Notre Dame coach) before we go up there to play, we aren't going," he

"That's what happened to us tonight with Marshall and the MAC thing," he added

He also spoke of the green shirts. When asked by a visiting sports writer what the shirts said, he grinned and replied, "MAC Sucks. And that didn't mean Mac Jones either, Buddy.

Another fine quote was obtained from a fan "Marshall and the MAC are just like Mohammad and the mountain," he reasoned." Mohammad', Marshall, has gone to the mountain, the MAC, enough. Now let the mountain come to Mohammad."

Gals win 31st game against Ohio State

Marshall President Stewart H. Smith and MU President John basketball team won its 31st straight regular-season game Saturday afternoon against Ohio State University, 69-35.

This was the last regularseason home game for the Green Gals. Three girls scored in double figures; Beverly Duckwyler, 19; Bobbi Crews, 16 and Brenda Dennis with 12. Duckwyler also had 17 rebounds to her credit.

Although Coach Donna Lawson said she was disappointed that Ohio State didn't present as much of a challenge as she hoped, she was very pleased with the growing attendance to the games. She said

In the presence of former several coaches and basketball team members were in attendance as well as Athletic G. Barker the women's varsity Director, Joseph McMullen. "It was the best crowd we've had all year," she commented.

> The "B" team lost both games played this weekend. In a game against West Virginia State it lost Friday night and in the prelininary game Saturday afternoon against Ohio State University it lost again. The two high scorers for the Ohio State game were Joan Simms and Barbara Boley both with six. The "B" team will play again Tuesday against West Virginia

Some funny things happened on the way to another win

Other than about seven minutes in the first half, Saturday didn't seem too good a night for basketball at Memorial Field House.

BG's Dalynn Badenhop was wrong. He suffered one of the most traumatic and embarrassing moments a cager can suffer. He shot at the wrong

He wasn't alone in being wrong, however. Marshall's Lyle Monroe miscalculated, too. You see, Monroe was coming down the right side of the court on a fast break. But. something happened to him on his way downcourt...his shoe came untied. Mike D'Antoni, unaware of this difficulty proceeded to fire a pass to where Monroe should have been. He wasn't there, and the pass flew untouched out of

With student participation urged, the responsibilities of the proposed screening committee would be to "set up criteria of the office and choose an individual to fill the position who will bring out the potential of that office." according to Dr. Louis B. Jennings, president of the local chapter and professor of Bible and Religion.

Dr. Richard H. Rosswurm, assistant professor of political science, has been named chairman of an ad hoc committee to study the proposal of the screening committee. Dr. Jennings indicated that Dr. Rosswurm's findings should be made public at the next meeting

At a general faculty meeting to be held Tuesday at 4 p.m. in Old Main Auditorium, President John G. Barker plans to discuss procedures for naming persons to these two administrative posts, according to a Faculty Bulletin distributed this week. "I feel Dr. Barker will carry out his indications to support this resolution," said Dr.

During the chapter meeting Tuesday, Dr. Jennings discussed the upcoming investigation into the dismissal of Dr. Michael L. Bottino, former associate professor geology at MU.

Prof. Dallas Sands of the University of Alabama and Prof. Christy C. Shervanian of Northeastern Illinois University are the representatives of the National AAUP assigned to study the case, Dr. Jennings

The results of their investigation will not be made known public, explained Dr. Jennings, because all reports will go directly to the AAUP.

After they submit their report the AAUP Committee on Academic Freedom and Tenure will study results and will then decide whether or not to place MU on the list of censured institutions, said Dr. Jennings.

"If this is done," according to Dr. Jennings, "then Marshall will cease to maintain its measure of high standing concerning potential newcomers to the faculty staff."

Drug hearing is postponed

Preliminary hearings for a Marshall University student charged on three counts for possession of dangerous drugs, will be postponed for at least a week, according to Attorney John sometime this week.

J. McOwen of Huntington.

Hearings for James McCoy, 23, arrested in a drug raid in Huntington Friday, were originially scheduled for today, but McOwen said Monday that a request for the continuance of the hearings would be made.

McCoy, now in jail in lieu of $30,000 bond, was charged in three state warrants with possession of marijuana, barbituric acid and amphetamines.

Police said they confiscated five pounds of marijuana, 677 pills allegedly containing amphetamines and barbituates 15 water pipes, two scales, a blender, a sifter and two bags of white powder believed to be

The powder, according to police, will be sent to the state police laboratory in Charleston for analysis However, Attorney McOwen commented that "there was definitely no heroin in the apartment.'

He also said he believed the $30,00 bail was "excessive". "I think it is totally unreasonable and absolutely outrageous to set such a high bond for this sort of charge. "Possession of these things should not require a $30,000 bond."

According to McOwen, Mc-Coy's bond will be posted
