Credit-no credit approved

Traditional homecoming to be restored

BY PAUL AKERS
Assistant news editor

Next year's Homecoming will feature reinstatement of traditional elements such as bonfires, a parade, and a Homecoming queen, Paul Skaff, Charleston junior and Homecoming coordinator, said Tuesday.

Skaff's remarks came during "Marshall News Meeting," a weekly WMUL-TV production where members of local media interview Dr. John G. Barker, MU president, and other university administrators.

Approval of a limited credit-no credit system, results of College Level Entrance Program (CLEP) examinations, and status of a proposed degree program in law enforcement were other subjects discussed during the press conference by Dr. Barker and Dr. William K. Easley, vice president for academic affairs.

Noting a "downfall in activity and student interest" in this year's Homecoming, Skaff said that from now until Monday the 20-member Homecoming Committee will poll students and townspeople to find out ideas they would like to see incorporated in Homecoming festivities.

An announcement of the final Homecoming format hopefully will be presented by April 28, Skaff said.

Many people are needed to help with Homecoming, he added. He would like to see as many as 100 students volunteer to work next fall.

A credit-nocredit grading system has been approved by the Board of Regents on certain academic work, Dr. Barker announced.

All students will be eligible to take up to 18 hours of classes outside their major field and receive a credit-no credit mark, according to Dr. Easley.

Such classes will not be figured into the students overall grade average, he said.

"Modern universities must have a flexible environment to permit students to explore," Easley said. "This removes the punitive and inhibitive effect of grades. It frees the student from the grade monkey."

Students electing to take credit-no credit classes have complete freedom in what to choose, Dr. Easley explained, although once a student indicates a credit-no credit at registration, he will not be permitted to change its status later.

CLEP is "one of the most exciting things done this year," Easley said. Twenty-four of 33 students thus far taking the examinations, which are designed by a national panel of educators, have received some college credit, he said.

Each student passing the CLEP exams has earned an average of over 13 semester hours, Dr. Easley said. Three students have passed over 30 hours of CLEP examinations and will start college as sophomores, he noted.

The Governor's Committee on Crime, Delinquency, and Correction has not yet replied to the feasibility of establishing a law enforcement program at Marshall, Dr. Barker said.

The proposed program, designed by Dr. O. Norman Simpkins, professor of sociology and anthropology, and his colleagues, must be appraised in terms of expenditure required and need, he said. Final approval will rest with the Board of Regents.

Appalachian Arts Fest to display wide variety

BY DWIGHT McCLURE
Staff reporter

Theatre, art, photography, folklore and motion pictures are some of the events scheduled for the fourth annual Morris Harvey College Appalachian Arts Festival Today through Friday 13.

William Plumley, graduate of Marshall, a member of the English faculty and editor of the Morris Harvey Publications, is the originator of the "only West Virginia Arts Festival," according to Ms. Maureen Milicia, assistant professor of Educational Media at Marshall.

"Appalachia My Land," a book by Ms. Muriel Miller Dressler, containing art work by Ms. Milicia will also be on display.

One special feature at the festival will be a showing of "When the Line Goes Through," followed by dialogue with author-director Clyde Ware and star Martin Sheen.

Ware, a native of West Union, W. Va., will bring with him the first two films of a trilogy of West Virginia motion pictures, "When the Line Goes Through" and "No Drums, No Bugles."

The third picture, "The Forests Are Nearly All Gone Now," will be ready for release this Spring.

Before forming his own production company, Jud-Lee Productions Inc., and turning to writing and directing movies, Ware was a major Hollywood television script writer, having written scripts for over 100 major television shows including "Gunsmoke," "Bonanza," "Daniel Boone," "Dr. Kildare," and many more.

A film adaption of his novel "The Innocents," is presently in the works for Jud-Lee Productions. Before his death, the late Spencer Tracy had signed to star in "The Innocents," and the production schedule is still waiting on a proper replacement.

Ware will be on filming location for a television movie he has written, but will take time out to appear at the festival.

Actor Martin Sheen, co-star of the Golden Globe award-winning television film, "That Certain Summer," will make his second appearance at the festival. Sheen, a familiar face to regular viewers of television drama shows, will take time out from the filming of a special, two-hour television biography on the life of the late F. Scott Fitzgerald to appear at the festival.

In addition to his numerous television parts and his featured roles in several important motion pictures, Sheen has starred in the three Clyde Ware films.

Among Sheen's television credits are guest appearances in "Ironside," "The F.B.I.," "Mod Squad," and "Owen Marshall."

Another special of the Arts festival will be from musician Bill Withers. From Slab Fork W. Va. to California, Withers now has three major hits to his credit, "Ain't No Sunshine," "Lean On Me," and "Use Me."

Backing up Withers will be another West Virginia talent, Dave Morris of Ivydale, W. Va., who will bring his mountain band on campus for a jam session following the Withers appearance.

The motion picture "Deliverance" is one of the most frequently discussed and highly acclaimed films of 1972. Its author, James Dickey, will also put in a special appearance at the Arts Festival. Primarily a poet, in 1966 and 1967 Dickey served as a consultant in poetry to the Library of Congress and in 1966 was given the National Book award for poetry for his collection "Buckdancer's Choice". For the past several years, Dickey also has served as the poetry editor of "Esquire" magazine.

Wednesday, from 10-11 a.m., Ms. Dressler will give a dramatic reading from her book "Appalachia My Land." From 1 to 3 p.m., Lewis MacAdams will read from his collections of poetry and talk about the New York School of writers.

Ruth Ann Musick will follow with some ghost tales. From 7-9 p.m., "When the Line Goes Through" will be shown, followed by a discussion with Clyde Ware and Martin Sheen.

Thursday, from 10-11 a.m., will be a multi-media presentation by Maryat Lee, founder of street theatre and playwright, and Fran Belin, formerly of SALT theatre. A showing of "No Drums, No Bugles" will be shown from 1-3 p.m., with discussion from Ware and Sheen. Bill Withers and Dave Morris will play in concert between 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Friday from 10 a.m. -11 a.m. James Dickey will read some of his poetry. From 1 p.m. -3 p.m., will be a discussion between James Dickey and Lewis MacAdams. Scenes from "Deliverance", followed by discussion with Dickey will be from 7 p.m. - 9 p.m.

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) - A British charter airliner flying 139 Britons to Basel's spring fair crashed in a blizzard near here Tuesday and police said 106 were killed.

Nearly all the passengers were women going to the fair on a special shopping trip arranged beforehand.

The four-engine turboprop apparently overshot the Basel airport as it came in for a landing after a flight from Bristol, England.

Flight engineers in Britain said 63 of the women were from the village of Axbridge in southwest England. The village has a population of 1,000. The other passengers were from the neighboring hamlets of Congresbury and Cheddar.

The flight was planned for last week but it was postponed, the organizers said.

Some of the 40 passengers who survived the crash were not hurt, according to the Solothurn cantonal police.

The plane crashed on a hilltop about 10 miles south of Basel.

About 15 inches of snow blocked routes of ambulances and rescue crews for two hours.

Rescue squads reached the area on foot. Helicopters then were brought in to fly survivors to hospitals.

Police quoted one survivor as saying the vickers canguard plane hit a treetop and spun around in the air before crashing. He said a fire broke out in the front section of the plane but the flames died quickly and did not spread.

In Axbridge, the Rev. A.C. Martin, rector of the church there, said. "The ladies who went from here were members of the local women's guild. Most of them were married. There were also one or two men and one or two children."

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Convicted Yablonski murderer William J. Prater has given authorities "a handwritten confession" of his role in the plot that led to the 1969 slayings. And sources close to the case also disclosed Tuesday Prater admitted the money used to hire three assassins came from the United Mine Workers union treasury.

Prater, at his trial last month, had denied any connection with the New Year's Eve murders of Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter as they slept in their Clarksburg, Pa., home.

"Prater has fully admitted his participation," the sources said. "He made a full, hand-written confession."

The sources also disclosed that Prater, a former UMW organizer in Tennessee, gave some additional details concerning the case which the FBI is reportedly checking out.

"This could take the case to other people," the sources said, refusing to say directly whether Prater's statement brought in the name of former UMW president W.A. "Tony" Boyle.

HUNTINGTON - Consultant Robert Yablonski murderer William J. Prater has been hired for $5,000 by Huntington City Council Monday night to evaluate a civic center feasibility study.

Councilman Robert Hinerman, who is also chairman of the Civic Center Board, said during an afternoon council work session that Kent would "tear the Hammer-Greene-Siler study apart and put it back together again," providing marketing and other data for the proposed riverfront complex.

Freshman drop-out rate 50%

By LINDA HEFLIN
Feature writer

"On your first day in class, take a good look around you. You'll probably never see half these people again. They will drop out. Be sure that you make it."

Most freshmen hear these words. Sometimes they are spoken by an orientation counselor, sometimes by a professor or an upperclassman. Does Marshall have such a high drop-out rate or is that speech just engineered to send shivers up the spines of freshman?

A definitive answer is difficult to find. MU is just beginning to collect such information, according to Robert H. Eddins, registrar. According to Eddins, the available information on the number of drop-outs is statistically unreliable.

For instance, he pointed out, an individual may be counted more than once in current statistics. "If a student attends both the classes at the campus and at an extension branch and withdraws from both schools he is counted as two individuals," Eddins said.

All registered or pre-registered students are now required, as a last step in their withdrawal, to go to the Special Services Center. There they fill out a questionnaire. This questionnaire attempts to classify the student (age, sex, college, status in school, etc.) and to find the reason for his withdrawal. The figures from the questionnaire have been compiled for last summer and last semester, according to Dr. Richard W. Waite.

Waite encounters many students who drop out with complaints about the University.

According to Waite, male students often have doubts as to the value of an education. Women students, on the other hand, express more dissatisfaction with limits placed on their activities and with housing. While men have more complaints about their health, women were more prone to sight loneliness as a problem.

The reasons that students drop-out and the figures on these students are difficult to obtain, Waite said. The reasons for this are to be found in both questionnaires and in the individual student.

"We are now revising our questions," "in an effort to make the form more accurate." He pointed out that some of the questions used now are over-lapping and some give no real indication of the students' motives for leaving school.

Another difficulty in gauging a student's motives for leaving is the problems of obtaining truthful answers. "Some students feel that their reasons are personal and of no concern to the University. Some students may be ashamed and not indicate the real reason they are resulting," said Waite.

The West Virginia Board of Regents began a study which will provide reliable statistics on drop-outs when it is completed. This study follows a class through four years and keeps a record of every individual's status in that class. This combined with the revised questionnaire, should give accurate cause to withdraw.

'Godfather' style seen in 'Valachi'

'Unpolished' in comparison

By TONY E. RUTHERFORD
Film critic

Remember the excessive violence and other Mafia activities depicted in "The Godfather"? The film was based on Mario Puzo's now classic fictional best-seller.

The popularity of "The Godfather" and the film receiving an Oscar for best picture of the year will no doubt trigger many substandard imitations of the movie. Although covering similar ground, "Valachi Papers" is not an inferior stereotype of "The Godfather."

"Valachi Papers" is a well documented account of the testimony of Joe Valachi before a Senate investigating committee. Mr. Valachi told the committee everything he knew about the Mafia after he became convinced the Mafia

Chieftain, Vito Genovese, was trying to have him murdered in prison.

Because of the documentary-like style of the picture, "Valachi Papers" is in many ways even more terrifying than "The Godfather."

By using subtitles of the particular dates and times certain events took place, the picture becomes not only more involving for the viewer, but a touch of validity to the account is maintained. While the subtitles help retain credibility, they also keep the viewer in a whirlwind as the film jumps rapidly from one date to another a month or year later.

However, where "The Godfather" succeeded in humanizing the mobsters, "Valachi Papers" does not supply in-depth characterizations to any of the La Cosa Nostra members. The Mafia is unglamorized in this film which shows the actual evil side to members. In one instance, the film shows how Mafia members deceitfully use laws to their own advantage. What really convinces the viewer about the nature of the Mafia is the way the victims are treated. Victims are never bumped off with one or two bullets. The killer always has to pump numerous bullets into the victim before he is satisfied that his job is completed.

Thus "Valachi Papers" is an unpolished version of "The Godfather." To prove this point keep your eyes glued to the screen and you'll see a modern car visible in a scene that was supposed to have taken place in 1930. Somebody goofed!

"Valachi Papers" opens tomorrow at the Keith Albee Theater.

Federal surface mine control seen- 1978

WASHINGTON (AP)— The administration has lowered from 11 years to five years the time duration before its proposed federal strip-mine controls would become effective, officials said Monday.

Interior Undersecretary John C. Whitaker presented the new administration proposal at the opening of joint hearings of two House Interior subcommittees.

However, congressmen criticized the administration view that the states should be given time to administer and enforce their own control programs, following federal guidelines.

Representatives Phillip Ruppe, R-Mich., John Melcher, D-Mont., and Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, all expressed doubts about the states' ability to provide tough stripmine enforcement.

Another Republican, John Dellenback of Oregon, was displeased with original administration enforcement timetable and said he was concerned with the administration's apparent downgrading of citizen participation in local permit and bonding activities.

Among four witnesses on the first day of hearings were Representative Ken Hechler, D-W. Va., who supported abolition of strip mining and Representative Craig Hosmer, R-Calif., who expressed fears about the nation's energy shortage energy shortage.

More energy crisis research suggested

WASHINGTON - A House task force Monday recommended a $1 billion a year research step-up to meet the energy crisis, including a crash program on replacing petroleum with synthetic coal gas.

The chairman, Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Mont., said the crash program on synthetic gas is needed to reduce U.S. dependence on oil from the Middle East.

McCormack said America is now dependent on Middle East oil imports until the mid-1980s but should be prepared to fuel its central power plants with coal if the Arab Nations cut off that supply.

For the long term the task force recommended coordinated stepped-up research to bring solar, geothermal and cheap nuclear energy into practical use in the mid-1980s.

It said development and oversight of a national energy policy should be focused in the White House.

And it said a federal agency should be set up to channel money into priority research that will bring practical new power supplies on the line fastest.

McCormack and other members of the task force also said at a news conference that power companies should be given tax breaks and antitrust exemptions that would specifically encourage development of more power sources.

The task force recommended no specific incentives but its report said the present oil depletion allowance is justified to stimulate exploration and said other incentives could include a tax write-off for companies' energy costs.

McCormack said the additional $1 billion a year for energy research should be paid by both government and the power industry.

Hopes high for recruits

Herd 'looking good' -- Lengyel

By TOM BUNEVICH
Sports editor

Spring football practices have reached the midway point, and according to Jack Lengyel, the team is "looking good and slowly developing the right things for a winning football team."

"I have been very pleased with the progress thus far," said Lengyel, "and with each practice this team is starting to look like a winner. Although nothing has been set yet, the staff can see a lot of encouraging things. Of course, we can see a few areas in which we will be weak. We are just hoping our recruits can help us there."

Thus far, the Marshall football staff has signed 23 athletes to inter-conference letters of intent to play football at Marshall next fall.

"We got most of the men we wanted, and feel we have a great group coming in next fall," said Lengyel. "We didn't get all we wanted, but we managed to pick up three we didn't think we could get since they had already said they were going to WVU."

The trio-all from New Martinsville Magnolia High School are wide receiver John "Fuzzy" Filliez and twin brothers Dave and Bill Forbes.

"We are pleased to get them," said Lengyel. "I think they will be real fine athletes. They've got the credentials with the height and weight we are looking for. They're the forerunners of our total signees and I think the group we have signed will have impressive credentials."

But while the coaches continue to search for positions for the players, the 'old' members of the Thundering Herd are also looking impressive in practices.

"We have a lot of people who are much improved and responding well to the spring sessions," said MU's third year mentor. "We have many guys pushing another for a position."

In general the practices are going very well and the players working hard to bring home a winner next fall."

Some of the differences which Lengyel and his staff can see are in "maturity, senior leadership, and overall team enthusiasm." "With the full class structure, a host of seniors, dedication, and an improved attitude, we can see a great difference—for the first time we feel like we are actually coaching a football team. For right now, though, we are about where we expected to be. Changing people around and trying to find the winning positions has been our main goal and I think we are slowly achieving it."

"With the proper position placing, the depth we have, and the confidence we are building, we could have a good football team next year."

In Saturday's inter-squad scrimmage, which was attended by some of the 75 area football coaches who participated in the free football clinic held last Saturday, Lengyel got a good look at some of his men.

"We showed that we have got a lot of potential and that we will be weak in some areas and strong on others. We'll have to work on our pass patterns and passing game for one thing. We hope to have a ball-control offensive team next year."

Some of the men Lengyel sighted for improved performances are quarterback Reggie Oliver, former tailbacks but now flankerbacks Ned Burks and Jim Mercer, tailback Terry Gardner, Bobby Crawford and Delbert Connors at full back, Bob Eshbaugh at quarterback, a position he played in high school, although he was a fullback last season.

On the line, Lengyel praised Eric Gessler, Roger Hillis, Randy Kerr, Jack Crabtree, and John Shimp for their efforts, while others Lengyel noted were Bill Wright, Allen Meadows, Rob Westfall, and former linebacker Charles Henry, now trying the cornerback position.

Lengyel also noted that Rick Meckstroth, Mark Miller, and Ace Loding are vying for the middle linebacker slot, while MU basketball star Bill James is showing considerable promise at the wide receiver slot.

"Right now we are slowly finding out where we are. We know we have a tough road ahead. But our plans are still to have the Herd 'Thunder in '73.'"

Alphabetically, the newest members of the Marshall University football program are:

Wilbert Allen, tackle, 6-1, 225 lbs., Cincinnati, Ohio (Hughes), All-League.

Stanley Berry, defensive end, 6-0, 192, Cincinnati, Ohio (Hughes), All-League.

Bob Birch, defensive end, 6-3, 215, Wheeling, All-Ohio Valley Conference.

Bob Burgoon, split end-flanker, 6-0, 190, Kenmore, N.Y. (East), All-Western New York, Section VI 220-dash champion.

Shawn Burke, tackle, 6-4, 240, Clarksville, Ind. (St. Xavier High, Louisville, Ky.); honorable mention All-State.

John "Fuzzy" Filliez, split end-flanker, 6-1, 175, New Martinsville (Magnolia), All-State, leading receiver in the state last season.

Bill Forbes, fullback-linebacker, 6-2, 195, New Martinsville (Magnolia), All-State.

Vietnam Air Force vet MU baseball's 'old man'

What does an Air Force Vietnam veteran do when he leaves the service and decides to continue his education?

Well, for Mike Kaufman the decision was easy. Being an exceptional athlete, Kaufman, a 27-year-old sophomore from Charleston, decided to add sports to his schedule.

The lucky recipients of this athlete were Coach Jack Cook and the Marshall Baseball Team.

In an interview Monday, Kaufman discussed his present plans at MU and gave a small look to the future.

Kaufman started playing baseball at the ripe age of eleven. From that point on it was to become a great source of satisfaction and enjoyment for the present second baseman.

After attending Stonewall Jackson High School, Kaufman was offered an invitation to spring training with the Detroit Tigers. To Kaufman's dismay, when the team broke camp and headed north, he was not to accompany them.

So what does a 19-year-old do when he is out of school and prime draft bait? For Kaufman the decision was easy. He joined the Air Force.

For four years, Kaufman played both baseball and football in the service. He also had the opportunity to spend a year in Vietnam at some of the country's more famous airports, Da Nang and Tan Se Nut.

When he left the service, he decided to attend MU. Once here, he just had to have a try at MU football.

So Mike entered the current spring football practice program. After three weeks of workouts he pulled a hamstring muscle and fell behind.

Here is where he made his decision and decided that baseball was the sport for him.

Kaufman decided on baseball because, as he put it, "it was just natural for me."

This year Kaufman is the starting second baseman for the Thundering Herd. He has played errorless ball in nine games and has contributed to the offensive thrust by getting some key hits.

Commenting on this season for the team, Kaufman said, "We can play with anybody on our schedule."

PUTTING IS A SERIOUS business as evidenced by these golfers as they prepare their "greens game" on a practice putting green before an MU golf match at Guyan Golf and Country Club. They all are not in the same group. This special green has a number of holes instead of the traditional one hole to allow for practice putting.

Where's the hole???

Tennis record 4 - 18

The Marshall University tennis team defeated the University of Dayton Friday, 7-2, but lost Monday to VPI, 2-7, to make its season record mark 4-18.

The match scheduled with Morris Harvey Sunday was canceled due to rain, but will be rescheduled for Thursday in Charleston.

Friday's match brought the Herd netters out of a long slump when they captured a victory over Dayton.

Winners in the singles events were Jim Frazier, Jim Knapp, Rick Reynolds, and Tom

Noone; while Frazier and Wellman, Thompson and Reynolds, and Knapp and Noone all gained additional wins for the team.

The Herd netmen had to travel an additional 100 miles in order to play on indoor courts when they went to Blacksburg, Va. to face VPI Monday.

The two teams went to Roanoke and were able to get the match in, according to Coach David Knouse.

Jim Frazier won the only singles event for Marshall, and also took his doubles match along with Jim Wilmoth.

Sex week—a learning experience

'People, not roles, are important

By JEFF DUNCAN
and GARY TAYLOR
Staff reporters

"Our dream is to see sex counseling become unnecessary. We want to go out of business."

Those are the words of Dr. Alan and Lynn Wabrek, whose seminars Monday on sex counseling and marriage relations opened Human Sexuality Week.

The Wabreks, a husband and wife counseling team, expressed their hope that the spread of sex information will reduce the need for sex counseling in the future.

Also speaking Monday was the Rev. Dudley Elvery, an educational consultant, whose interests have taken him into such areas as group dynamics and communications skills. He presented discussions on such topics as the history of the family, problems encountered in the family situation, and various combinations of relationships encountered.

The Wabreks, whose day-long schedule of lectures and discussions began with a zoology class at 8 a.m., discussed their "co-therapy model" of sex counseling in a seminar at noon.

With approximately 40 students and faculty members circling them in the Alumni Lounge, the Wabreks outlined the basic male and female disfunctions encountered in therapy, and described their method of counseling.

At 4 p.m. Dudley Elvery, who bases his views on the existentialist philosophy, traced the history of the family from the ancient Greek and Roman civilizations, through the 16th and 17th centuries, to today. He emphasized the influence of the Industrial Revolution, the Christian church, and the Reformation on the family.

At 8 p.m. the Wabreks conducted a seminar on "Marriage Relations and Relationships in General," attended by approximately 100 students, faculty members, and staff members.

Elvery expressed the need for permanence, direct communication, and the dropping of roles in order that marriage be successful in the future.

"We want to help people to be free to express themselves as total human beings," said Mrs. Wabrek. "All this is really preventative."

The Wabreks said that among young people they have observed a struggle to find honesty and openness in relationships. "There is less hypocrisy in the relationships," they agreed.

The Wabreks expressed their hope that interest in counseling training—either with existing counseling services or with student manned informational centers such as the one they helped set up at the University of Pennsylvania—will continue after Human Sexuality Week.

V.D. Blues showing

By TONY RUTHERFORD

Film critic

"V.D. Blues" is a master piece of creativity. Dealing with especially sensitive subject matter, the producers have successfully accomplished their dual goal: to entertain as well as educate.

Dick Cavett hosts this program designed to make people aware of the tremendous dangers of contracting venereal disease. Cavett seems to be a perfect choice as the program's host. He is extremely controversial and humorous most of the time, yet when the script requires it, he becomes completely serious.

There are a number of skits during the program. These include a doctor and a nurse telling each other about various V.D. symptoms, doctor trying to tell a respectable lady that she has V.D., and the problem of getting V.D. treatment in ghetto areas.

What has to be the best skit on the program resembles an excerpt from Woody's Allen's "Everything You Wanted to Know About Sex But Were Afraid to Ask." James Coco and Robert Drivas play two comical V.D. germs tormenting a women's body.

Folk and rock music are present throughout the program which includes appearances by Novella Nelson, Karen Wyman, and Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show. Music for the program was written by Arlo Guthrie and "Cabaret" composers Kander and Ebb. The best musical number is the theme song "Don't Give a Dose of the One You Love Most" performed by Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show.

V.D. Blues" will be shown at 10 a.m. today, at noon and 2 p.m. in the Alumni Lounge of the Memorial Student Center. Go see it, please.

Hatch act testimony is heard

CLARKSBURG—Testimony from about 20 witnesses was given Monday in a U.S. Civil Service Commission hearing into alleged coercion of state employees at the Industrial home for Girls at Salem.

State Civil Service Commissioner John McCarthy conducted the hearing on a complaint filed by Herbert G. Wilcox, president of the West Virginia Public Employees Association, who charged that two officials at the home sold tickets to staff personnel for a campaign dinner for Republican Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. last August.

Two state bridges 'inadequate'

WASHINGTON—Two West Virginia interstate bridges are included in a list the Federal Highway Administration has provided Congress of obsolete or inadequate highway bridges that have been approved within the past two years for replacement.

The federal governments' share of the replacement cost is estimated at $153 million. One of the bridges carries U.S. 60 over the Big Sandy River between Kenova, W.Va., and Catlettsburg, Ky. The cost of replacement would be $1,720,000 allocated through each state.

The second span carries U.S. 50 over the Ohio River between Parkersburg, W.Va., and Belpre, Ohio. The report said the cost would be $6,633,000 allocated through West Virginia and $5,027,000 through Ohio.

The U.S. 50 bridge has also appeared on a list of "worst bridges in the country" compiled by Rep. Jahn A. Blatnik, D-Minn.

King, 24 Gauley Bridge; Rufus Keeney, 20, Riverside; Victor D. Ferreira, 25, Smithers; William Parker, 21, Gauley Bridge, and Kenneth Seamen, 21, a West Virginia Tech student.

Spring snow covers W. Va.

CHARLESTON, — Winter returned to the Mountain State Tuesday, pushing temperatures to freezing levels and plastering the hills with a layer of wet, sticky snow that accumulated as deep as five inches in places.

Up to five inches of snow was reported on the ground at high elevations of Preston County and at Alpena east of Elkins. Lesser amount were coating the ground in Webster County and other sections of the Allegheny Mountains.

Wood county men plead guilty

ELKINS—Wood County businessmen Fred Wilmoth and Theodore Morlan; pleaded innocent Monday in U.S. District Court to charges of conspiracy and bribery.

They were accused in connection with the bribery of former state Federal Housing Administrator James Haight, who is now serving a federal prison term after pleading guilty to accepting a bribe.

The indictments against Morlan and Wilmoth were similar to ones returned in Charleston for the Southern District federal court. Federal authorities said they were duplicated in Elkins to cover activities alleged to have occurred in both the Southern and Northern districts.
