Indians schedule two-day appearance Attempt to unify people

By PAIGE MILLER
Staff reporter

Under the Tree of the Great Peace, the people of the longhouse (Indian meeting place) gathered a thousand years ago, according to an ancient Iroquois legend. From the Tree of the Great Peace spread the White Roots of Peace providing a path to unite all people.

In 1969, a group of Mohawk Indians, adopting the name White Roots of Peace, renewed their commitment to the Iroquois tradition and began an aggressive "pursuit of peace" mission. Since then, the group has been joined by people of other Indian nations as they travel throughout North America meeting with people to interpret current events and explain the traditional Indian views of peace and brotherhood.

Fifteen members of the White Roots of Peace are scheduled to be on Marshall's campus for a two-day appearance beginning at noon Wednesday, according to Mary Kay Martin, Middlebourne senior and Ronald Connell, Weirton sophomore, co-chairpersons of the Contemporary Issues Committee.

The Indians are:
—Grace Black Elk, an Ogala woman who was active in the occupation of Wounded Knee, the oldest female member of the group.

—Coyote, a veteran of the Alcatraz occupation, poet and writer, active in environmental issues.
—Black Crow, Ogala medicine and spiritual leader, who was also active at Wounded Knee.

—Rarihokwats, Mohawk editor of Akwesasne Notes, an Indian newspaper with a circulation of more than 55,000.
—Karonhianoron, senior woman of the Bear Clan of the Mohawks, active in the Indian Way School. Four of her children will accompany her.

—Kanatakeniate, member of the negotiating committee of the Trail of Broken Treaties, of the Wolf Clan of the Mohawks. As associate editor of Akwesasne Notes, he covered the events of the occupation of Wounded Knee.
—Kahratoen, life long farmer, the oldest male making the trip.

Also with the group will be four younger Mohawks who will assist with activities.

Willie Dunn, an Indian folksinger, composer and film maker may be accompanying the group, Ms. Martin said. However, plans are not definite she added.

Individual members of the White Roots of Peace are not paid for their work, but receive an allowance for basic needs, Ms. Martin said. All earnings are used to fund publications and service activities within the Indian community, she said.

The Contemporary Issues Committee is sponsoring the White Roots of Peace at a cost of $1,200, Ms. Martin said.

Bond issue may be delayed

New civic center proposal offered

By BOB HALL
Staff reporter

A new plan calling for Huntington City Council to join the Cabell County Court in planning a civic center and library may delay the scheduled second reading of an $8 million city bond ordinance at tonight's City Council meeting.

The ordinance calls for a January vote for $8 million in general obligation bonds to finance a civic arena.

City Council members were scheduled to meet Monday afternoon to discuss the new proposal which was presented Saturday by two members of a Huntington citizens committee.

City Council procedure calls for two readings of an ordinance before voting by council. While declining to speculate on possible council action, City Manager Barry Evans said any action on tabling the ordinance before the second reading would make it necessary for it to be reintroduced should council wish to consider it at a later date. This would remove any possibility of a January vote on the bond issue.

The bond issue has received general support from several groups and individuals including MU President Dr. John G. Barker. However, some objections have been voiced.

Charles F. Dodrill, head of the Citizens Committee for Responsive Government, said "We are not taking a position for or against anything at this time because City Council hasn't told the citizens precisely what it is that they are going to get for the $8 million check. As a group we are opposed to the signing of a blank check by the voters and this is what we are being asked to do at this time."

The original civic center feasibility study mentioned the importance of Marshall in any civic arena project. It also was predicated on the completion of the downtown Holiday Inn which is now in doubt. Dodrill said that lack of MU funds and the lack of convention facilities which would have been provided by the Holiday Inn along with other problems in the urban renewal program, have caused his group to question the advisability of a January vote.

Other scheduled items for tonight's council meeting include a first reading of an ordinance requiring the installation of automatic sprinkler systems in all buildings constructed after Dec. 17, 1973, and a second reading of an ordinance prohibiting parking which blocks a public or private entrance.

Dodrill also said his group plans to present a petition calling for reconsideration of the sewer tax increase. The petition, which has been signed by 10,000 Huntington residents, has no legal standing, according to Dodrill. However, he said the Constitution provides the right to petition for redress of grievances and the petition is an attempt to show citizen discontent with council action on the tax.

Death penalty guidelines plea rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) The Supreme Court today rejected a plea for new, more definite guidelines on the constitutional use of the death penalty.

The justices declined to hear an appeal brought by a Utica, N.Y., prosecutor who said his case "presents the very heart of the capital punishment debate" that followed the court's treatment of the issue last year.

The court did not flatly outlaw the death penalty last year—only two justices reached that position.

But three others objected to the procedures by which the death penalty is imposed, leaving doubt as to what, if anything, a majority might accept as constitutional use of capital punishment. The appeal rejected today stemmed from a ruling in New York vacating the death penalty imposed against Martin J. Fitzpatrick for the murder of two policemen. The New York court left Fitzpatrick's conviction intact.

The state court indicated that only a mandatory death penalty for the murder of a policeman would limit the discretion of juries and judges sufficiently to meet Supreme Court objections to the infrequent, apparently arbitrary application of capital punishment nationwide.

"A 'mandatory' death penalty is by no means a constitutional panacea," argued Utica Dist. Atty. Richard D. Enders.

Enders urged the Supreme Court to approve New York's statute which makes murder of a policeman or correctional officer a capital crime, and establishes guides and procedures for jury deliberation on the penalty.

Without Supreme Court clarification, Enders said, state legislatures will be misled into establishing mandatory capital punishment which will still be open to discretionary application at various stages of criminal justice procedure.

"Take away all of these—plea bargaining, grand jury discretion, the trial jury's consideration of lesser offenses—and the mandatory death penalty is still unattainable," Enders argued. "For, as a final alternative, and regardless of guilt, the trial jury can acquit altogether in order to avoid imposition of the death penalty."

The first in a series of four senior seminars designed to help graduates find a job when they enter the job market is scheduled for 3 p.m. today in Memorial Student Center Room 2W22, according to Reginald A. Spencer, coordinator for the Office of Career Planning and Placement.

Today's session will be directed toward seniors in the school of business and will cover interviewing tips and techniques, writing business letters, evaluating prospective employers, and information on sources of assistance available to job seekers free of charge, Spencer said.

How to complete a job file and personal preparation for the job search will also be covered, according to Spencer.

Seniors graduating through next summer are eligible for participation, he said. Students who participate and complete a series of assigned projects will be eligible for a certificate of completion, Spencer said.

More evidence said non-existent

WASHINGTON — President Nixon announced Monday he will give a federal judge subpoenaed White House tape recordings and portions of his personal diary file, but said he can't locate one dictation machine belt subpoenaed by Watergate prosecutors.

Meanwhile, the White House agreed in the federal court that it will deliver by Nov. 20 subpoenaed Watergate tape recordings and the other material promised by Nixon. U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica said duplicates of the tapes and other material would be made and originals stored in White House vaults.

The dictation belt is the third piece of subpoenaed Watergate evidence the White House said does not exist. Earlier, it announced that two key conversations went unrecorded by a presidential taping system.

Seeking to "clear up... once and for all" the controversy about the Watergate conversations, Nixon said in a written statement that he will:

—Voluntarily submit recordings of two April 16, 1973, conversations with then-counsel John W. Dean III, saying they "covered much of the same subject matter" as an April 15 meeting with Dean that the White House said went unrecorded.

—Allow the court to listen to other subpoenaed reels of tapes to demonstrate that no recordings were made of the subpoenaed April 15 Dean meeting or of a subpoenaed June 20, 1972 conversation with former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

—Agree that "court-appointed independent experts employing the most advanced technological methods" examine all tapes in question "for any evidence of alterations..."

—Supply portions of his personal diary file subpoenaed by prosecutors, including dictations belts containing his recollections of the Mitchell television call and handwritten notes of his April 15 meeting with Dean.

U.N. troops assume control of cease-fire

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. truce-watchers moved into a bleak Israeli checkpoint on the Cairo-Suez road Monday but were forced out of another as they took the first practical steps toward carrying out the new Suez truce.

The Israeli state radio said Austrian and Swedish troops of the U.N. Emergency Force manned the Israeli barriers at Kilometer 101, where the irregular cease-fire line crosses the highway about 60 miles east of Cairo.

The Israeli military declined comment on the U.N. takeover, a tender political subject in Israel. But U.N. officials in Jerusalem and Cairo confirmed that their troops had assumed control as stipulated in the new cease-fire.

The Tel Aviv command said later, however, that its troops dismantled a second checkpoint on the approaches to Suez city because the blue-bereted U.N. troops had set it up "contrary to Israeli agreement."

There was no reported violence. The Israelis said they took down the U.N. barrier after the peacekeeping troops disregarded a request to take it down themselves.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim had made a "strong protest" to the Israeli mission.

Egyptian and Israeli generals negotiated, meanwhile, in a desert tent supplied by the U.N., trying to implement the rest of the day-old pact. It is designed to strengthen the cease-fire and open the way for an international Middle East peace conference next month.

Faculty morale said low due to Regents' budgetry and power

CHARLESTON — State college and university faculty members say state Board of Regents' budgeting actions and use of power are key factors in low faculty morale.

Dr. Elizabeth Blatt, executive secretary of the state conference of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), told a legislative interim committee Sunday that in the current fiscal year the budget for West Liberty State College was cut by 2 per cent while the Regents' office budget was increased 32 per cent.

"At a time when colleges are being told they must cut out nonproductive programs and faculty, the appropriation for the Board of Regents staff is increasing as a proportion of the total budget for higher education," she told a subcommittee studying the Regents.

She said the Regents' budget nearly equals the allotment for scholarships—$482,000 for the Regents and $500,000 for scholarships.

"Clearly some question of priorities arises out of the implications of these data," she said.

Dennis Sprigg of the West Virginia College of Graduate Studies, a member of the Regents' Faculty Advisory Council, said the Regents' efforts to create efficiency have produced a centralized power structure.

"With this great deal of power in the hands of a few, there is an apparent insensitivity to the individual," he said. "Each faculty member has to justify his existence each semester."

He said the board has done "some things which jeopardize the quality of education and there is a morale problem."

William Coffey, AAUP governmental relations chairman and a member of the Marshall University faculty, said the Regents view their role not as one of "advocate of higher education but merely to see that the money is spent correctly."

Several faculty members told the subcommittee the legislature should create a voting position on the board for a faculty member, as well as change the non-voting student position on the board to a voting one.

Senior job seminar starts today in Student Center.

Huntington's housing code outlines illegal conditions

EDITOR'S NOTE: University students sometimes find themselves living in substandard conditions if they desire to live near campus. What factors constitute substandard housing and what may be done about it? These are questions explored in a series of articles by David Williamson.

By DAVID WILLIAMSON
Staff reporter

Housing officials call it the blue book. Marshall University are a property owners who ignore its contents find it a source of legal notices and court suits. It is the City of Huntington Housing Code.

The code defines substandard housing as having any or all of these conditions: inadequate sanitation, structural hazards, hazardous wiring, plumbing or mechanical equipment, faulty weather protection, fire hazards, faulty construction materials, hazardous or unsanitary premises, inadequate maintenance, exits or fire-fighting equipment or improper occupancy.

'As service to country'

Kilpatrick calls for House vote on impeachment bill

By DAVID WILLIAMSON
Staff reporter

James J. Kilpatrick, the conservative columnist who argued here in early October against the impeachment of the President, called last week for the House of Representatives to vote a bill of impeachment as a service to the country.

Kilpatrick said, "The time has come, much as a long time

According to the code, conditions must be such as to "endanger the life, limb, health, property, safety or welfare of the public or the occupants" before a dwelling is declared substandard. Which means a beer can on the front lawn, ashes on the carpet or crumbs in the kitchen do not automatically constitute substandard conditions.

But to Huntington Housing Commissioner Billy B. Carter and his staff of inspectors, extreme neglect of property or lack of general maintenance can be considered substandard conditions.

One particular problem which surfaces with the start of cold weather is heating. The code states, "No unvented fuel-burning heater shall be permitted. All heating devices or appliances shall be of an approved type."

Not only are unvented heaters illegal, they are extremely dangerous. Carter said last week he would rather inspect a heater and find it safe than to see damage to life or property coming from one uninspected.

Other conditions liable to substandard inspection under the housing code include:

- inadequate or improperly maintained or installed electrical equipment, wiring or appliances;
- dampness of habitable rooms;
- defective or deteriorated floors or floor support;
- defective or deteriorated flooring or floor supports;
- fireplaces or chimneys which list, bulge, or settle due to defective material or deterioration;
- lack of outside weather protection;
- deteriorated, crumbling or loose plaster;
- broken, rotted, split or buckled exterior wall coverings or roof coverings.

The Housing Inspection Office is located at the Polan Building next to City Hall, 824 5th Ave. Its phone number is 696-5548.

admirer regrets to say it, to proceed with the impeachment and trial of Richard Nixon...Impeachment is our country's last political resort. It is a course to be taken only at a point when no other course will suffice. We are at that point now."

He made the comments in his nationally-syndicated column released last Thursday. Along with Republican congressman Paul N. McCloskey, Kilpatrick opened the MU student government-sponsored "Presidency in Crisis," series Oct. 7. They debated, "Should the President be impeached?" Kilpatrick took the negative side.

The week after his debate with McCloskey, Kilpatrick said, "In considering impeachment, it ought to be kept in mind that impeachment of a president is a criminal process. Every relevant constitutional provision makes this clear."

"Millions of Americans see the assault on the President as a conspiracy between partisan Democrats and a liberal press. An effort at outright impeachment would create political convulsions that would polarize the electorate and tear our country asunder."

However, Kilpatrick acknowledged last Thursday the firing of Watergate prosecutor Cox and deputy Attorney General Ruckelshaus along with the resignation of Attorney General Richardson and two missing Watergate tapes has not helped the President's case.

"His one chance to salvage his administration, it seems to me, now lies in submitting his conduct to the formal judgement of the Senate."

Kilpatrick cautioned against a misunderstanding of his call, "I am not urging or predicting that two-thirds of the Senate vote for conviction and removal from office. I am saying, simply, after long and sad reflection, that the House of Representatives should perform a service to the country, and perhaps to Nixon as well, by voting a bill for impeachment."

Impeachment, in Kilpatrick's opinion, would put a final halt to the hostile atmosphere surrounding the President and Watergate. He said, "Trials are finite. The day would come when the Senate at long last voted to convict or acquit. In one ultimate tick of the clock on the Senate floor, it would be all over."

In an October column, Kilpatrick said, "A judgement on this President must be left not to the Senate in a tumultuous hour, but to history, and to the ages."

However, Kilpatrick Thursday concluded, "A resolution of impeachment, if it is to accomplish the desired end, should cover the whole gamut of charges bruited about in the past two years...We must not drift along much longer."

'Godspell' tickets still available

By JACKIE NEWMAN
Staff reporter

"Godspell" will be presented at 8 p.m. today at the Keith-Albee Theater as part of the Marshall Artists Series, Mount Series.

Based on the Gospel of Saint Matthew, the play is now in its third year, and has received the Drama Desk and National Theatre Arts Conference Awards. The original cast recording won a 1971 Grammy Award.

The National Touring Company will present the production as originally conceived and directed by John-Michael Tebelak, with music and new lyrics by Stephen Schwartz. In addition to the National Touring Company, "Godspell" companies are performing in London, Paris, Australia, Canada, and several major U.S. cities.

"Godspell" opened in May of 1971 at the Cherry Lane Theatre in New York, and moved shortly to the Promenade Theatre. The cast of 10 traditionally reviews the "Godspell Motto" before each performance: "Keep the corners of your mouth turned up. Speak in a low persuasive tone. Listen, be teachable. Laugh at good stories and learn how to tell them...for as long as you are green, brother, you can grow."

Passion and Crucifixion enter into the play only during the last sequences. Director Tebelak draws from the spirit of Christ and his teachings rather than from the Bible in its literal sense.

Marshall students may still obtain free reserved seat tickets for "Godspell" by presenting activity cards at the Keith-Albee Theater box office to day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. ID cards must be shown at the door when presenting tickets.

Roger Kozol as Jesus

Roger Kozol is shown as Jesus in a scene from "Godspell." The play will open tonight at 8 p.m. at the Keith-Albee Theater. Reserved seats are still available, and students, with just an ID card and activity card can pick them up today until show time.

Counselors--eager to help

"We have the best advising in the world here. With most advisers you are lucky to get five minutes--we'll give you five hours if you need it."

That's the way Dr. Richard Waite, director of the Counseling and Rehabilitation Center feels about helping students with problems.

"We probably reach about 15 or 20 percent of the student body. I wish we could reach more," said Dr. Waite.

Dr. Waite thinks that everybody needs counseling sometime in their college career. He also pointed out that a student's freshman year is a very critical year.

To try to help freshmen more, the Counseling and Rehabilitation Center have set up the student development center during orientation to try to let the students know about the counseling center and what it can do for them, said Dr. Waite.

Discussing the staff of the counseling center, Dr. Waite said, "We pretty well cover the waterfront. We have five counselors, one woman and four men. One man is a black."

Waite also said the staff consists of many different religious and social backgrounds.

The counselors for the center are Stephen Naymick, Kenneth Blue, Richard Waite and Victoria Behar. Waite said these counselors will talk to any students about problems they might have.

"A lot of students think they have to have a really unusual case before they need counseling. This is not true. We help with all kinds of student's problems here. We even help students figure out their schedules if they need it," Dr. Waite said.

Waite also said that students should not fear that information given to counselors will be given to anyone else. "We run things like a doctor-patient relationship here. We might discuss someone's case between the counselors on the staff, but other than that all information is kept in strict confidence."

81 apply for the blood drive; still time for others to sign up

By NANCY SULLIVAN
Staff reporter

Although only 81 people had signed up as of Monday to give blood during Wednesday's Marshall blood drive at the Campus Christian Center, Mrs. Elizabeth Sizemore, Red Cross recruitment coordinator, terms the response "good."

Red Cross representatives will be at the Campus Christian Center 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday to receive blood from students, faculty and staff.

Several separate time sheets are being circulated by student volunteers in Twin Towers. This means an exact estimate was not possible, Mrs. Sizemore said. Time sheets are a first for Marshall blood drives, she added.

According to Louise Wood, assistant to the Campus Christian Center's executive minister and blood drive coordinator, "Nobody has to be signed up to give blood, but if they are signed up it does speed things up." She said students with time slots will be admitted without delay.

For Marshall to keep its group plan, 400 units of blood must be donated by Wednesday afternoon. The plan allows any Marshall students, faculty or staff member, husband or wife, parents and member's children under age 18 to receive blood, she said.

A donor must be at least 18 years old, in relatively good health, and weigh at least 110 pounds.

As an example of blood program needs, Ms. Wood said a student's mother is in the hospital with leukemia and needs considerable blood. A unit of blood may cost from $25 to $100, according to a Red Cross brochure. Under the program the blood is free.

Ms. Wood said advertising on local radio and television and in The Parthenon as well as posters on campus will undoubtedly promote participation, but she added, "The biggest thing that helps is people talking to other people."

In a letter to faculty members, Student Body President, Steven R. Bloom, Charleston senior, urged faculty members to donate blood, encourage students to give, and excuse students who may be late due to giving blood.

A Christian center spokesman said the time space with the fewest number of students signed to give blood is from noon to 2 p.m.

Ax whacks at NBC

NEW YORK (AP) - The sound of the ax continues to reverberate throughout television this month. Now it's NBC that is whacking new shows off its evening schedule. The cuts go into effect in mid-January.

The victims are "Diana," with Diana Rigg; "Needles and Pins," a garment industry comedy; "NBC Follies," a variety show; and "Love Story," a romantic anthology series.

The ax has fallen heavily this season, and only on the new offerings. The networks have canceled a total of eight so far--one at ABC, three at CBS, and the end isn't in sight.

NBC says it will fill the slots created by its four farewell notices by rejuggling its evening schedule on weekdays and installing two new offerings. One is "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies," a two hour show that'll start Jan. 16 and feature made-for-TV and theatrical movies.

The other show, starting Jan. 17, is a one-hour Thursday night program whose title and content will be announced later, according to a NBC spokesman.

A change is also afoot for viewers who now watch the old movies run late in the weekday afternoons on the CBS-owned TV stations in Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and New York.

But they'll have to wait almost a year. CBS says it'll crank up a new 90-minute talk-variety show on its five stations in mid-September 1974 with the show to be based and produced in Los Angeles.

It'll have a regular host and, although no one's been chosen yet, Gary Owens-the-hand-to-the-ear announcer on NBC's "Laugh-In"--is one of the prospects CBS has talked to about doing the show.

Although CBS won't offer the program to CBS affiliates, "if it is successful somebody will undoubtedly acquire it from us for syndication purposes," Drew said.

'The' trophy lineup-- Oliver a possibility?

It's that time of year again when the leaves begin falling as quickly as football teams fall from the unbeaten ranks. And it's also the time of year when people begin looking for, and then nominating, candidates for the Heisman Trophy.

The Heisman is the coveted award which is presented each season to the outstanding college football player for that year. Among the past winners are Jim Plunkett, currently quarterbacking the New England Patriots, and O. J. Simpson, the running back for the Buffalo Bills who has a shot at breaking the NFL all-time single season rushing mark.

This year a rather unique situation exists involving the Heisman trophy. There is no clear-cut front-runner for the award. There are no Plunkett or Simpsons who stand head-and-shoulders above the rest of the collegiate players. This year the balloting will be close, but between who is the question.

One strong candidate is Roosevelt Leaks, the hard-running fullback from Texas who gained 342 yards in one game this year. But Leaks said he won't even think of the award until he realizes a perfect game. If 342 yards isn't perfect, what is? Another strong candidate is John Cappelletti, Penn State's strong running back. But his chances are weak since he comes from one of those "Eastern schools."

Defensive stand-out Randy Gradishar of Ohio State has also been mentioned as a possible candidate, but how many times do defensive players win the trophy? Another Ohio State star, Archie Griffin, could be a candidate but since he's an underclassman his chances are slim. Perhaps the most legitimate candidate is David Jaynes, the star quarterback of Kansas, but his national publicity has been limited.

Behind these Secretariats and Riva Ridges looms a darkhorse who is going off at about 1,000 to 1 odds. He is the Marshall quarterback, Reggie Oliver. Granted, he may not be the most talented player in the country, but there are underlying reasons as to why he should be considered.

First of all, the rebuilding of the Marshall football program has been as much Oliver's responsibility as head Coach Jack Lengyel's. As the top quarterback on the Young Thundering Herd, it was up to Oliver to move the offense. Even while operating under the most adverse conditions possible, Oliver managed to gain 835 yards through the air in 1971 and led the team to a pair of upset victories.

As the team improved from the '71 season to the '72 season, so did Oliver. He raised his yards passing total to 993 yards and threw for five touchdowns. Again he led the team to two wins.

Reggie's greatest asset to the Herd was seen during these first two years of the rebuilding program, namely his leadership abilities. It was Oliver who provided the inspiration to see the Young Thundering Herd into the fully competitive unit it is today. Through two seasons of seemingly endless setbacks, Oliver maintained not only a winning spirit, but also a confidence which carried over to the other team members.

Oliver's inspiration can readily be seen by this story about the Marshall Northern Illinois game this year. After the Herd came from 21 points down in the fourth quarter to beat the Huskies 39-36, the Herd was celebrating in the dressing room. But when Oliver came in, he told everyone to quiet down and thank God for the victory.

Unfortunately, Oliver is plagued by the same problem which plagues every athlete at Marshall—a lack of publicity. Even though the Marshall football team has been operating under a unique situation the past couple of years, the Herd still has not received any national attention. Last year a scout from the Miami Dolphins saw Oliver and called him a good pro-prospect, but Oliver still receives no national publicity.

With two games remaining on this year's schedule, it looks like Oliver will leave Marshall with a number of records in his possession. He probably will retire with the total offense record, most yards passing, most passes attempted, and most passes completed.

Maybe these facts don't entitle Oliver to be called the best college player in the nation, but one thing is for sure, win or lose, Oliver belongs in the Marshall winning circle.

Herd downs Rockets for much needed win

By TONY SPINOSA
Sports editor

"I was just glad I made the kick and the team won the game."

Those were the words of sophomore kicker Larry McCoy after he kicked a 29 yard field goal with ten seconds showing on the clock to give the Thundering Herd a 17-14 win over the University of Toledo Rockets Saturday afternoon at Fairfield Stadium.

McCoy said, "When I went into the game I was concerned with just hitting the ball and making sure I was seven yards back from the line of scrimmage. I was just glad that the team won the game, we needed that win. Everyone was kind of down."

But McCoy was not the only center of attention following the upset in front of 9,500 chilly fans. Freshman tailback Bob Tracey, subbing for an injured Jon Lockett, got considerable attention. In three quarters of play the Buffalo, N.Y. native picked up 163 yards in 25 carries. He sat out the last quarter because as he termed it, "I just ran out of gas."

Tracey left the game in the fourth quarter suffering from fatigue and numerous bumps and bruises incurred during the game.

"During the game, the Toledo defenders were hitting me late. In the first quarter they bumped my shoulder and at the end of the game it just tightened up on me," said Tracey.

Most of Tracey's 163 yards were picked up on wide running plays and options.

The field goal by McCoy was his first attempt of the year. Head Coach Jack Lengyel had the problem of making the difficult decision of deciding whether to go with McCoy or Allen Fitzwater on the three pointer.

"I had Allen warmed up and if we didn't get that final two yards inside the 30 I would have gone with him because he is a better distance kicker, McCoy is more accurate from inside the 30 than Fitzwater," said the winning coach.

McCoy's winning field goal was made possible when the Herd put together a drive from its own 30. The drive started with 6:40 left in the game and was climaxed 15 plays later by McCoy's three pointer.

In the drive, MU's Jon Lockett carried the ball on ten of the 15 plays for the bulk of his 23 yards gained in the game. He was in the game for Tracey who left at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

Toledo opened the scoring in the game with a 31 yard scoring pass from quarterback Gene Swick to tight end Don Seymour with less than three minutes gone in the first quarter. The touchdown came on the Rockets first possession of the game.

Marshall lost scoring attempts in the first quarter when they fumbled the ball away on two consecutive series. On the first series Jim Wulf fumbled at midfield and then after the defense held Lockett, in the game for the first time, fumbled a pitch by Oliver and Toledo recovered. On the Rocket's possession, the MU defense forced a fumble and the Herd was on its way to its first score.

Cornerback Charlie Henry recovered the Toledo fumble on the Marshall 26 and the MU offense drove 74 yards in ten plays with Oliver going in for the score on a keeper around left end.

Toledo came back ten minutes later on a drive that started on the Marshall 49 and took the ball into the end zone 13 plays later on a run around left end by Jim Massey, a native of Hurricane.

The Rockets went into the locker room with a 14-7 lead at the half.

In the third quarter, MU tied up the score after seven minutes had gone by.

Marshall's Allen Meadows dropped Swick for a 25 yard loss and forced a fumble to give the Herd the ball on the Rocket 32 yard line. John Shimp recovered for the Herd.

It took the offense only five plays to move the ball into the end zone with Tracey taking it on four of the five plays. His last carry of the drive was a 23 yard jaunt around right end for the score. McCoy converted for his 26th extra point in a row and the game was set for the climactic ending with the score tied at 14.

Tracey was the Herd's leading ball carrier picking up 163 of the teams total 245 yards.

For Toledo, Herman Price was the leading carrier with 63 yards in 15 carries. Second was Massey with 27 of the Rocket's 104 total rushing yards. Swick, who was fourth in the nation in total offense before the game, picked up minus 20 yards rushing.

In the passing department, Swick hit 11 of 29 passes for 155 yards. Oliver was only three for 12 for 25 yards passing.

The Herd defense held the strong Rocket offense to 259 total yards to the Herd's 270 yards.

The Herd's record is now 3-6. This is the first time a Marshall football team has won three games since 1970. Two home games remain on the schedule, with the University of Dayton on tap Saturday at Fairfield Stadium. Game time is 1:30 p.m.

Recreation items available through dormitory offices

Football, baseball, tennis rackets, handballs, pool tables, playing cards.

Is this an inventory for a sporting goods store? It could be, but this equipment is just a few items available to Marshall dormitory students through dormitory offices.

Most equipment is available to students on a check-out basis free of charge. To check-out equipment, a student submits his ID card to an office worker. However, in West Hall dormitory a fee of ten cents an hour is charged for bicycles, typewriters and sewing machines, according to resident director Judith Miller.

Mrs. Miller said it is expensive to have equipment repaired. "It cost us $20 to have our bicycles repaired recently. And every time we have a sewing machine even looked at by a repairman it is $20," she said.

Jerry Ball, office director of Twin Towers East (TTE) dormitory said 14 kinds of games are in the TTE office for students' use. "Monopoly is most frequently used. Playing cards are used a lot during tournaments," he said.

"If anyone comes to us and suggests a new game, we go downtown, check it out and usually end up buying it," Ball said.

Ball said other games include football, basketball, hockey, chess, Clue, Jeopardy, Cities, dominoes, Smog, checkers, Ouija and chips for poker playing.

Theodric (Pete) Harris, TTE resident director, said at the beginning of the year $300 worth of sports equipment and games was bought.

Harris said, "We must charge the person responsible for any broken equipment. Usually ping pong balls and pool sticks are more frequently broken. The men do not mind paying for anything broken."

At least two dormitories are in the process of buying new recreation equipment this week. Laidley Hall resident director Cindy Mullens said she will discuss the possibility of buying a pool table and pinball machines with Warren Myers, director of Housing.

She said, "The girls I have talked with are in favor of buying it. However, it is up to the company to decide whether a dorm of this size (less than 100 residents) merits the installation of the equipment."

Allen Natkovitz, resident director of South Hall, said new ping pong tables are being bought this week. "We do not get as much money for recreation equipment as Twin Towers East gets, but we have about the same types of games and equipment," he said.

The situation is different at Hodges Hall, according to resident director Tim Eggleston. "Because we have mostly athletes living here, not much recreation equipment is available in the office."

"Usually, anytime an athlete wants a football or basketball, he goes over to Gullickson Hall and gets one from the athletic department," Eggleston said.

Women's volleyball team loses

Marshall University women's volleyball team lost in the first round of play, Friday, while competing in the East Tennessee State University Invitational Volleyball Tournament, at Johnson City, Tenn.

In Friday's play the Marshall women fell to University of Tennessee, of Knoxville, 15-11 and 15-10 in their first play off. During their second meet, Marshall was defeated 15-6, 13-15 and 15-8 by Auburn University of Auburn, Ala.

University of Tennessee went on to meet East Tennessee State University in Saturday's single elimination contest to determine the championship.

sporting a season standing of five wins and six losses. They now have a standing of five wins and eight losses.

Dr. Betty Hammond, women's physical education instructor and women's volleyball coach, said she felt none of the women had "played up to their part" in Friday's meet. The team will continue practicing this week for the upcoming West Virginia Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Association Tournament to be this weekend at Marshall.

Sigma Kappa wins bowl; Miss Alpha Sig selected

Sigma Kappa sorority won the fifth annual Alpha Sig Bowl by defeating Phi Mu sorority by a score of 39-0 last Thursday.

Jane Seldomridge, Huntington freshman, was selected Miss Alpha Sig by the active members of Alpha Sigma Phi. Miss Seldomridge represented Delta Zeta sorority.

Women selected for the all-tournament team were: Alpha Chi Omega-Jacquelyn Morrow, New Martinsville junior; Alpha Xi Delta-Linda Bush, New Martinsville junior; Delta Zeta-Kathy Richards, Huntington senior; Phi Mu-Vickie Seabolt, Cedar Grove junior; Sigma Kappa-Judy Lantz, Huntington senior; and Sigma Sigma Sigma-Ann Talley, Saint Albans junior.

Robin Vealey, Charleston sophomore, received the most valuable player award in the tournament. She represented Sigma Kappa sorority.

The spirit award was presented to Alpha Chi Omega. Sigma Kappa received the championship trophy and Phi Mu was presented the runner-up trophy after the championship game.

"The tournament ran really well, which impressed me because of the previous postponement. I thought the delay would hurt the tournament, but it didn't," said John Mullins, Logan senior, tournament coordinator and president of Alpha Sigma Phi.

Mullins estimated 400 or 500 people attended the championship game. He said bad weather hampered the size crowd. Next year the tournament will probably be played in September or October, according to Mullins. Attendance at the games would be better in warmer weather, he said.

Intramural football looks to semi-finals

Semi-finals for intramural football will be Wednesday with Pi Kappa Alpha No. 2 and Sigma Phi Epsilon No. 1 meeting in competition on Gullickson Hall field I at 4:15 p.m.

The other two teams in the semi-finals were to be determined Monday in games between Pi Kappa Alpha No. 1 and Marshall Arms and the 49ers and Sigma Phi Epsilon No. 2.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon No. 1 outscored Sigma Phi Epsilon No. 1, 14-0 in quarter-final play Thursday. However the SAEs were forced to forfeit due to an ineligible player. One of their players was on the master roster, but was not on the football roster.

The rules for intramural football state that "each team will be limited to 20 players whose names must appear on the official roster before they enter a game."

The ineligibility of the player was brought to the attention of intramural staff and the protest of the Sig Eps was found justifiable.

In another game Thursday Phi Kappa Alpha No. 2 beat Twin Towers East, 13-0. No games were played Friday due to a lack of officials. As a result, the playoffs were delayed and the championship game will be Friday, rather than Wednesday as scheduled.

Record review

Beatlemania survives

By DENNIS FERRELL
Staff reporter

"The Beatles forever!" Maybe. For those who still suffer from a lingering case of Beatlemania, the best motto may be "George Harrison and Ringo forever."

Two new Apple releases point out the good hearted merry making and the shallow pretentiousness that have marked Beatle compositions from the very beginning. "Ringo," a solo album by drummer Ringo Starr, is a nice reminder of the good old days when John and Paul wrote songs like "Penny Lane" and "I Am a Walrus." John Lennon's "Mind Games" is an ambiguous, phony, disappointing, and mediocre record hardly worth mentioning.

John is apparently still victimized by a syndrome of "Me and Yoko are the two coolest people in the world." His songs have the substance of a vacuum. The lyrics on the new album defy description and make a very poor comparison to his earlier albums. There is only one or two songs on this album that approach the beauty of "Imagine" or the lyrics of "Plastic Ono Band."

Ringo's album is quite another story. He has assembled a fine group of backup musicians, written or co-written a batch of listenable songs, and put out a darned good album for someone who admits about his writing, "I've tried, but I just can't."

"Photograph," a single release from the album, has a way of bringing back memories of the White Album days when the Beatles were the ultimate.

"Photograph" is but one of several cuts good enough to hit singles charts.

Some of the sessions work is uncommonly good, even for an Apple record. With people like Jim Keltner, Nicky Hopkins, Klaus Voormann, David Bromberg, Steve Cropper and Billy Preston, how could you go wrong?

Another thing that makes "Ringo" such a good album is that it is the first time all the Beatles have been represented on a new album since their split in 1970. All four have written songs or played on selected cuts.

The drumming is some of the finest in a long time. Keltner and Ringo go at it full blast, just as they did the Concert for Bengla Desh. Scientific tests have reportedly proven Ringo's rhythms are perfect, and it isn't hard to believe after listening to this album once.

Boogie jumps at you several times. "Devil Woman" is a real get-down tune with a drum break similar to the solo in "In-A-Gadda-Da-Vida." Nostalgia creeps in too in "You're Sixteen," an old Sherman and Sherman tune from 1940.

Both John and Ringo have demonstrated valid points with the release of these two records. Ringo's album serves to remind us the Beatles were not "just another long-hair band." John's shows us the group was human and not so infallible after all. Both still have a long way to go to equal either of George's albums, but in the meantime we can skip Lennon and go for the good times with "Ringo," an album not easily forgotten.

Library gets papers

Marshall University's James E. Morrow Library recently acquired the private papers of the late Catherine Bliss Enslow, long-time columnist for the Huntington Publishing Co. and member of one of the city's pioneer families.

The papers were donated by Miss Enslow's niece, Mrs. Gloria Henderson of London, England, according to Dr. Kenneth T. Slack, director of libraries. Mrs. Dorothy Atkins, a neighbor of Miss Enslow in the Emmons Apartments recommended that the papers be donated to Marshall.

Miss Enslow, who died Feb. 13, 1973, one day before her 74th birthday, began her career with the Huntington Advertiser in 1917. After her partial retirement from the paper in 1966, she continued to write her popular "Miscellany" column until shortly before her death.

Included in the collection are records of the Enslow family, notes and clippings of Miss Enslow's works and works of her sister, Constance, a book illustrator.

Miss Enslow did not spend all of her time writing. She was active in local civic organizations and charities and in the Democratic party. She served as a county executive committee-woman for eight years and twice was a delegate to the Democratic Convention during terms of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Miss Enslow's career no doubt had a profound effect upon the making of history in Huntington and the Tri-State," Dr. Slack said. "The donation of her papers to the library hopefully will preserve the influence she had by serving as a source of historical references for generations to come."

Learning is exciting

Although some "plain hard studying and note taking" cannot be avoided, Mrs. Sallie H. Plymale, assistant professor of educational foundations, thinks prospective teachers should know that education and educating can be fun.

Socializing and refreshments and comments from Mr. Jack E. Nichols, director of student clinical experiences in Memorial Student Center Room 2W22 are in store Wednesday for her Educational Foundations 218 students.

She hopes Wednesday's meeting of the 70-member class will provide the group with contact—"a sense of personalization."

Nichols said he will be answering questions about the professional sequence of education program. Because the methods segment of Education Foundations 319 now must be taken as a separate course, he said several students aren't sure "where they go from here."

Mrs. Plymale said she and Nichols hope that Wednesday's meeting may eventually be expanded into a "professional orientation program" to acquaint students in their first education class with the department.

Dorm residents stay off-campus weekends

By PAM FERRELL
Staff reporter

Dormitory students who go home every weekend are missing an important part of the social education that is part of college, according to several dormitory residents.

"It's a shame people go home so often," John Kahrs, Vincentown, N.J., junior said. "That defeats the whole purpose of what college is for. You should try to get away from home."

Bill Ambs, Buffalo, N.Y., sophomore said, "If you go home every weekend you get the social life you once had mixed up with the social education you're getting now. Getting an education is a learning experience but going to school and being away from home is also a learning experience."

Dating is an important reason many people make the weekly trip home.

"Most kids go home because there's really nothing to do unless you're dating somebody," Kathy Dodd, St. Albans freshman, said. "I get my social education from college during the weekdays."

Vincent Figiel, Mt. Hope freshman, hasn't missed a weekend of going home yet.

"It's boring here and more fun at home." He claims a big reason people don't go home is because "there's either nothing in their town they like, or they feel Marshall offers more."

This brings up the question of whether there are things to do.

Anne Shpemaker, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., sophomore, transferred to Marshall from Kentucky Wesleyan College where facilities, she said, were limited. "We only had one pool table in the whole dorm for activities. At Marshall there is a student center with pool tables, ping pong, and a nice place on campus where you can sit with your friends and drink. People run home and don't take advantage of this."

Rhonda Findley and Cindy Key, South Charleston freshmen, go home every weekend to see their boyfriends but still believe they could find plenty of activities on campus. "There aren't things to do all the time, but there are enough things to keep you busy."

Going home often could hamper participation in dormitory activities, according to Angella R. McElrath, Twin Towers West residence director and Logan graduate student.

"I have noticed that the people who don't go home are so often usually the ones who utilize their time for dorm activities," Ms. McElrath said.

"For instance, the people who worked on the Homecoming float were mainly the ones who are around the dorm pretty often on the weekends."

Dependence is an important factor in college social education, according to many dormitory residents.

"College is a step forward on your own and a place where you should learn to participate," Fran Dorb, Yorktown Heights, N.Y., sophomore said.

Joe Lemon, South Charleston senior, said, "You're more dependent on home if you go home a lot. When you're here, you're on your own."

Another interesting idea is that of students who still participate in their high school activities.

"There are guys who head out the door every Friday for the regular Friday night football game," Bill Epperson, Philadelphia, Pa., junior said.

"Then there is always a dance after that. Some guys still wear their high school varsity jackets. It's nice to reminisce about high school but you're in college now. People just don't realize that. I've always heard Marshall was a suitcase school and now I believe it."

International students prepare 'exotic' dinner

Native dress was an added attraction at the annual international student dinner, held Sunday at the Campus Christian Center.

Those attending enjoyed "exotic" food prepared by foreign exchange students, representing Greece, India, Iran, Pakistan, Germany, the Philippines, Malaya, Thailand, and Italy.

The purpose of the dinner was to get Americans acquainted with foreign exchange students and to promote publicity for the International Student Club, which sponsored the event.

Marshall students and Huntington residents are shown here enjoying their trip around the world with food from the fifteen countries.
