Mantovani, 'New Music' Featured In Spotlight Next Thursday P. M.

By LaDONNA CROCKETT

Mantovani and his "New Music" will be presented on the Artist Series program Thursday, March 13, at 8:30 P.M., at the Keith-Albee Theatre, according to Curtis Baxter, manager of the Artist Series.

The attraction is one of the six from which students may select two that they wish to attend. Tickets may be obtained by presenting activity cards to Mrs. Will Mount in the hall of Old Main tomorrow and Friday.

A cascading melodious line supported by a novel concept of orchestra arrangement is the key to the popularity of Mantovani and his "New Music." Sales of his 21 available albums have, in America alone, passed the four million mark.

Annunzio Paolo Mantovani, although born in Venice, was only four years old when his father, who had been concert-master for such music-world celebrities as Toscanini, Saint-Saens and Mascagni, moved with his family to England. Mantovani studied at Italy's University of Padua to become an engineer but later turned to music, specializing in the violin.

By the time he was 18, he was directing his own salon orchestra at London's Hotel Metropole, where many musicians such as Melachrino and Reginald Kilbey played under him. Later he became Composer-Playwright Noel Coward's musical director and conducted the orchestra for Coward's "Pacific 1860."

He inaugurated the era of "New Music" with his first album for London Records, "Waltzing with Mantovani." Subsequent recordings, which now number in the dozens, include "Cara Mia," which Mantovani wrote for David Whitfield.

Now on his third American tour, Mantovani was the recipient last year of the Ivor Novello Award—the British radio's "Oscar"—as "musician of the year" for "outstanding personal services to British popular music."

Detective Fabian Reveals Secrets

By LaDONNA CROCKETT

Robert Fabian, former superintendent of Scotland Yard, will reveal "Secrets of Scotland Yard" on the final convocation program this year Thursday at 11 A.M. in Old Main Auditorium.

"Fabian is known as the world's greatest detective," according to Curtis Baxter, director of convocations. The detective will speak on the complex modern London police system and will give a behind-the-scenes tour of the Yard.

In his talk Captain Fabian will take his listeners step by step from the famous Scotland Yard on a murder hunt, starting from the moment of assignment of the case through to the trial of the criminal. He will describe preparations for the tour, the equipment he must take, and the things he must never forget. He tells of the arrival on the scene of the crime, examination of the body, taking photographs, the meticulous search for fingerprints, cailing in the medical examiner and the pathologist.

He will also explain the inner workings of all branches of the Yard, and will relate recent scientific devices and methods that help to trap criminals. He will describe how the culprit is apprehended, charged and court proceedings are instituted.

Throughout his talk, Captain Fabian includes anecdotes of some of his spine-tingling experiences in solving some of the greatest crime mysteries, disclosing underworld methods and Scotland Yard techniques for foiling the criminals' plans.

At present retired from Scotland Yard, Captain Fabian writes a weekly article for the Kemsley papers, lectures widely in the British Isles, and is in the process of writing another book. Two of his previous books, "Fabian of the Yard" and "London After Dark," were best-sellers a few years ago.

He arrived in the United States January 26, opening his American tour with a TV appearance on the "Morning Show" January 29. He and his two-and-one-half month lecture tour began January 30 in Boston at the Harvard Club.

Janssen Article To Be Published

A condensation of an article by Dr. Raymond E. Janssen of the geology department has been used in the book, "The Earth Is the Lord's," published by the Christian Education Press of St. Louis.

The original article entitled "Crumbling Rocks" appeared several years ago in "Scientific Monthly," and was reprinted in full two years ago in the book "Crust of the Earth." It was published by the New American Library.

Howard Hutchison Is Selected Recipient Of Engineering Award

Howard H. Hutchison, St. Albans senior, has been selected as the first recipient of the Machinery, Inc., Scholarship in Engineering here.

The Machinery, Inc., Scholarships were recently established by Machinery, Inc., of Charleston, which is a branch of the Associated General Contractors of West Virginia. The purpose of the awards is to stimulate interest in the fields of engineering and business administration by rendering aid to worthy students needing financial assistance in their senior year at various educational institutions in the state.

Three engineering scholarships are presented each year by the Charleston firm. These scholarship are presented to worthy students here, and at West Virginia University and West Virginia Institute of Technology. In addition to these three, a business administration award is given annually to Morris Harvey College.

In order to receive the award, the recipient must be recommended by his or her school, be in good academic standing, of good moral character, and one who expects to pursue the field of work in which the award is made. He also must be a resident of West Virginia.

Hutchison is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, national social fraternity, the Pershing Rifles and Scabbard and Blade, national military honoraries. He is also an active in all college ROTC activities.

SCA Features Work Projects For Summer

"Work Projects for the Summer" will be the theme of tomorrow's Student Christian Association meeting at 6:30 P.M. in the Science Hall auditorium, according to Sandra Spencer, Huntington sophomore, chairman.

The program will feature projects available this year for student summer employment. The session will highlight activities of students last summer and the types of work in which they were engaged.

Opportunities offered include employment as a chaplain at a National park such as Yosemite or Death Valley; student caravans specializing in drama, and those dealing with the general subject of Christianity; industrial seminar work at the twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis; YMCA and YWCA camps study seminars in Christian service; and several work camps and projects in every state and foreign country.

Some students who may report on their activities last summer are John Karickhoff, Spencer sophomore, who was selected as one of five college freshmen over the nation for a national Methodist caravan; Charles Turner, Huntington junior, who was elected president of Green Lake national camp; Barbara Kingsbury, Huntington junior, and Carol Hunt, Huntington senior, Ruth McCabe, St. Albans senior, who toured with youth caravans.

'Wind' Cast Is Revised

By JUDY O'DELL

A revised cast list has been announced for College Theatre's production of "Inherit the Wind," according to Clayton Page, associate professor of speech and director of College Theatre.

The cast includes Jim Harrelson, Huntington sophomore, as Matthew Harrison Brady; Ronald Lester, Kenova senior, as Henry Drummond; Joe Borradaile, Charleston senior, as E. K. Hornbeck, a rather cynical newspaperman; Charles Ricketts, Huntington junior, as the Reverend Jeremiah Brown; and Sterling Clarkson, Huntington freshman, as Tom Davenport, assistant prosecuting attorney.

Cates, the young professor on trial for his belief, will be portrayed by John Teel, Pineville freshman.

The mayor of Hillsboro, the community in which the trial takes place, will be played by Brian Bobes, Wheeling freshman. Meeker, the bailiff, will be portrayed by Vern Scandola, Weirton freshman. Ray Bane, Wheeling sophomore, will play the judge.

Jurymen are: Charles Cummings, Huntington sophomore; and Jack Walls, Mann junior. John Murphy, Clarksburg junior, will portray Esterbrook, a Chicago radioman. Marc Madsen, Huntington junior, will play a newspaperman from a London news agency and Charles Ralston, Weirton freshman, will play a photographer.

Howard Blair will be portrayed by Skip Olson, West Liberty junior. Rachel Brown will be played by Pat Blackburn, Belle junior. Carol Reynolds, Huntington sophomore, will play Mrs. Harrison Brady.

Townspeople are: Nancy Sparks, Charleston sophomore, as Mrs. Krebs; Diane Tincher, Huntington sophomore, as Melinda; Nancy Jett, Harrisville freshman, as Mrs. McLain; Lola Jean Roush, New Haven junior, as Mrs. Loomis; and Judith O'Dell, Parkersburg sophomore, as Mrs. Blair.

"Inherit the Wind" will open March 19 and run through the 21. Students will be admitted by activity cards.

MARSHALL COLLEGE STUDENT NEWSPAPER

Let's Have A Party

We understand the Newman Club's dance for the Catholic State High School Tournament crowd this past weekend was a rousing success, especially attendance-wise.

Another student "organization" can take a cue from this—and sponsor some more activities for high school students who will be in Huntington for conventions, festivities, and such.

Naturally, the most logical organization to do this is the Senate, since it is supposed to be the official legislative and executive segment of the student body. Also, the Senate has proven in the past that it can be a good host. It did creditable public relations work in sponsoring mixes, etc., for high school students during the 1955 and 1957 State Public High School Tournaments. Its work in these two events doubtless attracted here many graduating high school seniors.

Why can't the Senate expand a little in this area, especially with its heralded new public relations committee, and have more enticing activities for visiting prep schoolers?

We know the Senate is working on this "high school recruiting" program from another angle now—through the medium of high school visitation programs with the registrar's office.

That's good. Congratulations, Senate—your accomplishments are always as refreshing as they are rare.

So, to stimulate more accomplishment, we throw down this challenge:

If the Senate can find time to investigate the possibilities, here are some of the state and area high school events that will draw prep school students to Huntington this spring:

- (1) In early March, the Regional Science Fair.
- (2) In early April, the All-State Orchestra and Chorus Festival.
- (3) In early May, the Regional Band Festival.

We think the Senate missed the boat on the Catholic Tournament. Students were here from seven cities all over the state, including Wheeling, Parkersburg, Fairmont, Clarksburg, Charleston, Huttonsville (near Elkins), and Follansbee, besides Huntington. But there was no welcome mat laid down by the college to this group, many of whom might enroll here later if impressed.

So, Senate, see if you can impress future high school visitors to Huntington. Only start soon, your term of office won't last too much longer. And do plan ahead, for a change.

'My Room-mate Hates Clocks Moans Exhausted Senior Co-ed

By GAIL TABOR

My room-mate hates clocks.

During my four years at college I've had room-mates of varied temperaments, all with their pet peeves. I had one who hated music, one who detested men who wear hair oil—I even had one who hated me.

But this one hates clocks. The reason given for her dislike is this—she says the ticking makes her realize that time is passing and sooner or later (usually sooner) she's going to have to go to class.

However, I tolerated her idiosyncrasy, realizing that everyone has a different personality and to get along with society, one must make concessions. So at her suggestion, I folded up my little traveling clock in order to ruffle the ticking.

But that wasn't enough. She said, "I can still hear it. Would you put it in the drawer?"

The worst part about this is that next morning when the alarm goes off, I'm so used to having it on the dresser right beside me, that I forget where it is and attribute the far-off sound of the jangle to my fuzzy brain. Then, throwing out my arm to turn it off, I knock off the lamp, turn over the ashtrays, spill half-a-coke left over from the night before, make a general mess and put myself in a black mood before the day even starts.

Then I got a brainstorm, the clock radio! She couldn't possibly hide that in a drawer under ten pairs of socks.

Imagine my surprise when I heard a buzzing sound coming from the general direction of the closet. There it was, in a laundry bag under a cardboard box turned upside down with a mouton coat (mine) wrapped

4-H CLUB LEADER AT MONDAY MEETING

Mildred Fizer, West Virginia State 4-H Girls Club leader, met with the 4-H club downstairs in the college cafeteria, Monday evening at a supper meeting.

Miss Fizer is the director of Girls State Camp at Jackson's Mill and last year directed the National Vesper Service at the Washington Monument in Washington, D. C., for the National 4-H Clubmembers Conference.

On her visit here, she discussed with the club members, state activities, out-of-state trips to Chicago and Washington, D. C., and the possibility of serving as counselors at county and state 4-H camps during the summer.

snugly around it.

After a few more such incidents, we decided we must compromise. Now the clock stays folded and she sleeps with a pillow over her head. She's quite attractive with a blue face, too.

KNOW YOUR SENATE

Murphy Doubts MSP Competition

By DICK McHENRY

How do you think registration could be improved?

"If it were possible to run two lines, one for Arts and Sciences and one for Teachers College, I believe some of the stress would be relieved from both the administration and the students. Other than this suggestion, I like the present pre-registration system. However, this should be accelerated."

Do you have any suggestion for bettering the college cafeteria?

"From what I have heard from students from other schools, the quantity and quality of the food which we receive is far above average. Only the monotony of the little change in menu detracts from a very good rating. Waiting in line could be shortened somewhat by students refraining from "jumping" line because they are slowing themselves down in the long run."

What is your opinion of strengthening entrance requirements?

"The high school standards should be raised along with those of the colleges. In other words, the groundwork should be laid firmly before adding to the rest of the building. However, stiffening requirements here will raise the intellectual level and challenge more students' imagination."

Regarding the conducting of the elections, Murphy commented, "If the elections are conducted as they have been in the past, I doubt that there will be any competition from the Marshall Student's Party (MSP). I hope there will be changes in the method of selection of candidates this year."

Don't Be Discouraged If You Failed Freshman English

By LaDONNA CROCKETT

Don't be discouraged if you have decided you don't know anything about the English language after last semester's English courses.

It is still possible to learn, even if you don't know a word of English. Eric Paul Thorn, instructor in English, can prove that statement himself.

"When I arrived in the United States from Austria and France at the age of 12, I could not speak a word of English," Mr. Thorn said. Even during his junior high school life in America, one of his English teachers thought his grasp of the language was very poor. "She told me that I would never learn English," he said.

In spite of this depressing prediction, Mr. Thorn, who already spoke German and French, aimed at a high goal and decided to become an English professor. Why should he make such a choice?

"While in high school my English grades became better and I began to enjoy English more. I loved languages, I loved to read, and I believed that I had the ability to teach," Mr. Thorn said.

Although he has the required number of hours to teach French, he prefers to teach English. "I have become more proficient in English, I feel there is a wider need for English professors, and I like English literature better than literature of other lands," Mr. Thorn gave as his reasons for his preference of English.

Mr. Thorn was born in Vienna, Austria, and lived there until 1939 when, because of the political situation, his parents spirited him out of Vienna to Paris, France. He attended school in Central France and received the certificant d'etudes from the national government by passing a national examination.

In 1941 he came to the United States by way of Spain, Portugal and Casablanca. He attended junior high school in Cleveland and New York, working his own way through school after the age of 14.

Mr. Thorn attended Brooklyn College where he received his master's degree. He is now working on his Ph.D. degree in comparative literature at New York University. In addition to the three languages—French, German and English—he already speaks, Mr. Thorn is learning Spanish for his doctorate work requirement.

In working his way through school, Mr. Thorn demonstrated his versatility by working at over two dozen jobs ranging from administrative assistant to the president of a national firm to an usher for a theatre. "I had to switch jobs every time my class changed hours," he said. When asked how he found time to study after attending classes and working until 12 o'clock in the evening, he answered, "I had an hour and one-half subway ride to work and an hour and one-half ride back each day. Those subway rides gave me time to study regularly."

Mr. Thorn is now married to a woman he met in Paris when both were about ten years old and whom he later met again in New York after World War II. They have a four and one-half year old daughter who attends laboratory school.

Mr. Thorn must be a help around the house because his main hobbies are cooking and making furniture that he designs himself. Although he has had actual experience as a second cook in a restaurant, he is now known around the college for his candy making. Learning how to cook was a necessity for him, however. "When I was a bachelor and self-supporting, I could either eat in a cheap restaurant or provide my own food so I learned by the trial-and-error method to provide my own," he said.

He likes to make wooden furniture for his home and has completed a bookcase, is working on a combination bookcase-desk, and has plans to build a coffee table as his next venture in wood-working.

But those are only half of his hobbies. In his "spare time" he collects stamps and belongs to the local stamp collectors club where he serves as publicity director. And, of course, he likes to read and tries to read at least a book a day.

What kind of advice does Mr. Thorn offer to those who wish to succeed in the world? "No matter what occupation a student plans to enter, it is imperative that he be able to express his ideas well."

Guard—Jim Darrow, 5-11 Bowling Green sophomore.

Guard—Bob Anderson, 5-11 Ohio U. junior.

Although some people may disagree, I feel that this a good all-conference selection. Of course there is no argument about Greer, Byrd, Embry, Blair or Darrow, but picking the extra three was the hard part.

Greer and Embry were my co-captains, as for the second straight year they were present at the top of almost every conference offensive department in the game of basketball.

Both of course are All-American candidates, and both Marshall and Miami will be at a great loss next year without them.

Byrd couldn't be kept off the list as he was the loop's highest scorer and a close second to Embry in the conference race. His driving and his long jump shots really had the opponents and fans buzzing.

Blair of Western Michigan was the only bright spot the Broncoes could offer. He made his appearance near the top in scoring and rebounding all year long. With Greer, Embry and Byrd, Blair was the only MAC representative who averaged more than 20 points a game.

Bowling Green's Darrow was probably the biggest surprise of the season. Only a sophomore, the Bee Gee speedster started off hotter than a firecracker and scored at a steady pace the rest of the year. Next to Byrd, Darrow is probably the best driver in the loop.

As I stated before, the next three men were hard to choose.

I could've made it easy for myself and stuck to a five-man team, but most all-star basketball selections are made up of eight men, so I picked eight.

My last three selections are all guards—Kiefer, Thomas and Anderson. Other than Embry, Greer and Blair, the 1957-58 MAC season seemed like a year for the outside year.

Kiefer was Toledo's best scorer, averaging around the 17-point mark. His best shot was a quick, long one hander from about 20 or 25 feet out.

Kiefer also goes into the same category as the next two—take charge guys. These two, Thomas of Miami and Anderson of OU, didn't average more than 15 points a game, but their all around floor play and their clutch performances placed them on my all-conference team.

Anderson is a good ball handler and driver, and without him in the lineup the Bobcats usually folded up. Thomas was the big outside man for the champion Redskins. When the defense had the teammate Embry surrounded in the middle, Thomas brought them back out with his high arching set-shots. His long two-handed set was undoubtedly the best in the loop.

Another all-conference team should be released in the next two weeks if everything runs smoothly. A new association of the sports editors of the student newspapers in the Mid-American Conference is in process of being formed, and the first official act will be the all-tournament team.

This will not be the sports editor's team, however, but a team made up by the players themselves. The method of selecting the team is based on the same method that the major leagues will now use to pick their all-star squads. Each coach and player will be polled and asked to pick his all-conference selection, but he cannot vote for any player on his own team. The results should be very interesting, so watch for them.

Students Can See Series Film Today

Campus baseball fans will be in for a treat today as films of the 1957 World Series will be shown at the Science Hall auditorium, starting at 3:30 P.M.

Frank Smith, former pitcher of the Cincinnati Redlegs, is bringing the films on campus. Smith, who is now residing in Huntington, will make a brief speech before the showing of the films.

Baseball coach Bill Chambers made the arrangements in order to show the films to his baseball team, but Chambers said anyone interested in seeing them will be admitted free of charge.

TRACK MEETING CALLED TODAY BY COACHES

Riv would like to see all freshmen interested in track at this meeting which will start at 3 P.M.

A meeting for varsity track members has been called for tomorrow by head track coach Forrest Underwood. This meeting is also set for 3 P.M. and will also convene at the campus gym.

Braves defeated the New York Yankees in the Series, four games to three, thanks to the pitching of West Virginia's Lew Burdette.

Little Green Trounces Morehead, Ends Season With 16-1 Record

By WALT LEONHART

The Little Green, under the guidance of coach Mike Josephs, compiled one of its finest records in campus history when it completed its season, February 24, by trouncing Morehead's Yearlings, 90-62.

The victory gave Josephs' crew a final slate of 16 wins and only one defeat, the lone loss coming from the hands of Ohio University's freshman team in Athens.

Leading the attack against Morehead, a team which Marshall had defeated earlier in the season, 63-58, were Freddie Griffin and Bruce Moody with 25 and 24 points respectively. Vic Quinet also aided the Little Green by pitching in with 17 markers.

Only two nights before the Morehead contest the Yearlings traveled to Pikeville, Kentucky, to meet what was expected to be one of the toughest games of the season. However, the contest proved to be just the reverse and the Little Green came home with a 85-68 victory.

The Pikeville game was supposed to be a close one for the Little Green since Pikeville had come to town earlier in the season and furnished a scare before bowing, 82-73.

Mural Cagers Start Playoffs

The intramural basketball tourney started Monday with the defending champions, the Rinky Dinks, playing the Vet No 2 team. Pi Kappa Alpha placed four teams in this tourney to enter the most teams by far.

In round one play, the Sig Eps drew a bye, the Rascals meet the Pikes No. 1, and Cook's Hall plays Pike No. 3. The Nobodies have a bye, the Marcum Terrors meet KA No. 3, TKE No. 1 plays Pike No. 3, and the Pike No. 2 has a bye.

League play ended last week with the Sig Eps getting back on the winning side at the expense of the KA's. Alex Lawrence and Jim Maddox hit for 21 and 20 points respectively to spark the Sig Eps to a 79-55 win over the KA's. Al Ferguson was high with 10 for the losers.

Jim Harrick led a parade of scorers with 22 points to lead the Tekes over the SAE's, 79 to 47. Connie Kiser and Barry Myers had 19 each, and Bobby Cantrell had 18 to follow Harrick.

The ROTC failed to show and therefore gave the Dancers a 9-0 forfeit win.

Dempson Busby rimmed the nets for 20 points to lead the Rascals to a whopping 56-19 win over the Greenbriers. Tom Arthur aided with 10, and Wiley was high for the losers with 7.

Dick Parrett, who started the season as a regular, but has been used only sparingly since mid-season, came back into good form against Pikeville with a 29-point output. Moody and Griffin followed closely with 16 and 14 points respectively. Chuck Gordon, although not hitting in double figures, played his usual fine game and came through with many fine assists.

The Little Green ended the season with a 90.5 scoring average while holding its opponents to a 62.06 mark.

Ivan Mielke, although only playing during the first semester, led the frosh in scoring with a 15.06 average. Ivan was followed by Griffin, Parret and Moody with averages of 14.08, 14.06 and 14.02. Also hitting for averages in double figures were Gordon and Quinet with 13.03 and 10.8 marks.
