Aftermath

In the wake of the most disastrous flood that has ravaged the Ohio valley in recent history a flurry of excitement over the advisability of measures designed to prevent future catastrophies has occupied public attention. Proponents of either one of the two equally vociferous in their advocacy of their flood-preventives, some proposing to build enormous reservoir basins in the upper reaches of the Ohio tributaries and others advocating the construction of flood dikes similar to those in operation in the lower Mississippi valley.

It is not for use to delve into the respective merits of either of these plans or to go to the trouble of imposing upon our readers our opinions as to why either one or the other deserves more consideration. We are inclined to take a rather pessimistic attitude in the matter.

Regardless of the good intentions of all those at present interested in the flood control controversy it is safe to predict that probably gets monotonous for him erty owners, Handlin said. in less than twelve months the average Huntingtonian and Ohio valley residents will have forcontent to trust his life and property once more to the mercy of the surging water. Clothes closets in each room were swollen and distorted far out of their original shape. Constructed from floor to ceiling, the closets had been warped so much that the force of the expanding wood had exerted terrific pressure upon the ceiling plaster, cracking it and sending it crumbling to the floor.

Occasional patches of ceiling untouched by the water puzzled the observers for a time until the guides explained that air pockets thing. But do give to the Student had formed protecting a few spots from the water. These spots of white stood out boldly against the yellowed and oily background.

Buckeye Loop Trip Opens At Miami Tonight

Cincinnati Will Entertain Green Cagers Tomorrow Night At Queen City

The Big Green will point toward its fifth Buckeye hardwood victory tonight when the cage squad travels to the home floor of the Miami Redskins and attempts to burdle the quintet that all but gave the Green their first conference trouncing last Saturday night.

After the Redskin tilt the Herdsmen will shift over to Cincinnati tomorrow night and clash with the Bearcats for the second time this season.

The Green has the psychological advantage over both of their Buckeye foes in that they have scored victories over both Miami and Cincinnati. It was only last Saturday night that the Redskins and the Green locked horns, Marshall winning by the heart-failing score of 32-31.

Cincinnati lost to a fighting Green five January 9 in the last moments of a nerve-shattering game, 38-33.

The Green goes up against the Redskins in à tie with Ohio university's cagers for the conference top honors. Both have maintained their 1.000 percentage with four victories each.

Exhibiting uncanny sharp shooting in the tilt Saturday night the Redskins are considered a hundred-fold more dangerous now than before the last week game. Their chances to defeat the Herdsmen depend upon their sheer ability to get out in front and there. At one time in the clash they were 14 points of the Green.

Always considered tough the Cincinnati five will be doubly so tomorrow night as they will be on their home floor. Flood waters have seriously hampered their the waters long workouts have Dartmouth College been scheduled and Coach Tay Brown is bringing his mid-season form to top again.

Opening Monday night the Golden Gloves tournament will place the strength of the Green boxers against Southern West Virginia's best, including the Vass Vanquishers, of Richwood, the Twentieth Century club, of Charleston, and the Wilsondale CCC camp. Last year the Green emerged as team champions and went on to the Cincinnati regional meet and won a place with the light-heavyweight title.

The big field of contestants makes it practically certain that the meet will require five nights to complete. It is contingent. however, on whether it will be possible to get the consent of Marshall cage officials or the high school to switch one of the games they have scheduled for Vanity Fair next week, providing the floor is in condition for basket-hall by that time. If this is not arranged the bouts will be crowded closer together on a four instead of a five night schedule.

Green supporters will hinge their hopes on Underwood and Rowsey, along with Billy Bent, Bill Bryant, Fred Roop, Scott Donat, and Henry Morrison.

Bobcats Vanquish Ohio Wesleyan For Buckeye Win

Ohio University's Bobcats climbed to a one-game lead over the Big Green in the Buckeye conference cage race Wednesday night when they rolled over the effort to give Dartmouth College's Ohio Wesleyan quintet in easy fashion 43-23.

Steam-rolling a first-half lead of 25-5, the Athens five coasted through the second half, fighting off a desperate rally on the part of the Bishops. It was the Bobcats fifth win and the Bishops fifth loss of the conference season. Lalich, Ohio's high-scoring for-
