'I didn't intend to lose'—Carter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The President-elect looked out over the 300 fellow townsmen who had waited the long shivery night and, in fact, the last two implausible years to welcome him home. Plains, Ga., population 684, had itself a president of the United States.

"I told you I didn't intend to lose," Jimmy Carter said. He paused, looking at the faces of his neighbors. The celebrated man of steel was having difficulty.

"I came all the way through 22 months and I didn't get choked up until I..." Jimmy Carter looked at Rosalynn Carter. She burst into tears and they hugged and they hugged. Now everybody on the platform was in tears. Jimmy Carter looked out over the heads of the crowd to the east. "I see the sun rising on a beautiful new day," he said. "a country, a beautiful new commitment to the future. And I feel good about it. I love every one of you."

In a "Dear Jimmy" telegram read to a television audience, President Ford pledged his "complete and whole-hearted support" Tuesday to the man who kept him from serving a full term in office.

At an emotional news conference with his family, Ford's wife, Betty, read the telegram because his voice was hoarse from campaigning.

"It is apparent now that you have won our long and intense struggle for the presidency," Ford wrote. "I congratulate you on your victory..."

"Although there will continue to be disagreements over the best means to use in pursuing our goals, I want to assure you that you will have my complete and whole-hearted support as you take the oath of office this January," he wrote.

Carter will begin quickly with his designs to reshape government and fill a cabinet mostly with "people you've probably never heard of," aides say.

An extensive pre-election transition operation has done the groundwork to enable Carter to begin even before he takes office to press his budget ideas on Congress. And the framework for major legislative programs already has been drafted.

The other immediate task in staffing his new administration. "I'd say there'll be a lot of new faces," said Hamilton Jordan, Carter's campaign manager, who is likely to be a key member of the new administration himself.

"Probably some people that are experienced and whose names are well known," Jordan said in an interview. "But I'd say most of them will be people you've probably never heard of before."

Jordan predicted there would be a high percentage of young persons in top jobs, and Watson anticipates a heavy weighting toward women and minorities.

"I think it's very likely that President Carter's White House staff will be smaller than the staffs that we have seen under both President Nixon and President Ford," said Jack Watson, the young Atlanta lawyer who had headed Carter's transition office.

Campaign posters like the one above were apparently not in vain with Tuesday's Carter-Mondale victory in the presidential election. Carter posted a convincing win in West Virginia, but the former Georgia governor had a tougher time edging Gerald Ford on the national scene.

Jay is jubilant

CHARLESTON AP—John D. Rockefeller IV, relishing a record gubernatorial victory margin, promised Wednesday to spread "a new spirit" around the state.

Democrats around West Virginia were jubilant after Tuesday's general elections as they swept all statewide offices and increased their substantial majorities in the legislature.

Rockefeller did even better than Carter. His final tally was 489,214, or 66 per cent, to 251,552, or 34 per cent, for Republican Cecil Underwood.

Rockefeller and his wife, Sharon, said early Wednesday after the victory was apparent, that they hope to bring a feeling of prosperity to the Mountain State.

"There's a new spirit overtaking the state," Rockefeller said. "People around the country are looking to West Virginia because renewed importance of coal has made it the centerpiece of the energy picture."

"In Beckley there's a marvelous feeling that the people can accomplish anything, they want. You can sense it when you walk the streets. I want to see that spirit spread all over the state," he said.

Tuesday's election returned to the Democrats all five statehouse positions, including three now held by Republicans.

The closest race was for treasurer. Incumbent Ronald Pearson lost to Larrie Bailey of Fairmont. The total, with 99 per cent of the vote in, were 344,043, or 50 per cent, for Bailey and 336,232, or 49 per cent for Pearson.

Elected secretary of state was A. James Manchin of Farmington. He defeated appointed Republican incumbent James McCartney by polling 380,809 votes, or 55 per cent, to 303,131, or 44 per cent, for McCartney.

Manchin celebrated his first election victory since 1952 when he was chosen a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. The former REAP director said he plans to make every school student a deputy secretary of state.

Glen Gainer of Parkersburg easily won the auditor's race over incumbent John Gates. Gainer gathered 408,198 votes, or 61 per cent, to Gates' 259,362, or 38 per cent.

Victories by all three Democratic state Supreme Court candidates means the five court members will be Democrats beginning in January.

Hechler's hopes still persistent

"We're not giving up. It's not over by a long shot," says Ned Helme, campaign manager for Ken Hechler, write-in candidate for the Fourth Congressional seat.

Helme's response came on the heels of Tuesday's election results which posted Democrat Nick Joe Rahall at the winner over Hechler and Republican candidate Steve Goodman.

With nearly half the votes tallied, Rahall led with 55 per cent, followed by Hechler with 30 per cent and Goodman with 15 per cent.

Tuesday night, when the early returns started coming in revealing a Hechler lead, workers at the campaign headquarters in Huntington were excited and jubilant.

Judy Roach, campaign worker, said "We're going to kill 'em."

Wednesday morning the mood at the headquarters was more subdued, according to a campaign worker.

Helme said the headquarters was waiting for the totals to come in from all the districts before deciding to contest the ballot.

The apparent problem in determining the final victor in the race is the controversy that involves rubber stamps and stickers used to write in Hechler.

Several counties did not tabulate the stickers and stamps in their night returns.

In the three voting machine counties of Wayne, Mercer and Cabell, the write-in votes will not be canvassed until next week.

From jewels to boots

ROTC-for women

By BECKY YOHO

The earth is flat. It never rains in Huntington. Women in the armed forces can't wear jewelry.

What makes each of these statements alike is they are all false. Especially the last one, according to Capt. Lance Hickel, of Marshall's Department of Military Science.

Approximately 27 women are involved in Marshall's Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program and according to Hickel, they are allowed to wear jewelry as long as it does not detract from their uniform. "The Army has taken a great deal of care to keep women feminine," he said. "An example is women's uniforms which are constantly being redesigned."

Women's activities in ROTC program consist of "everything men do" which includes participation in the color guard, field training exercises, tactical exercises, rappelling, first aid classes, communications training and participation on the rifle team. "In fact," Hickel added, "some of our best shots are women."

As far as medical benefits are concerned, the main difference in the ROTC program for men and women is women are allowed maternity leaves of absence. Another difference he cited is a congressional restriction which states women cannot be assigned to the combat arms branches of the army such as the infantry, armor, field artillery and air defense artillery.

"We don't make any distinction, but the role for women in the ROTC is different than the one which they are used to playing. When women join ROTC, they find themselves in a different situation and they must assume leadership qualities which are unfamiliar to them."

Hickel said he thought the need to achieve was stronger in the female than in the male because females are less afraid of failure. "Males feel a great deal of pressure which I think makes them hole back sometimes," he said.

According to Hickel, the first real male reaction to female leadership comes during advanced camp which is five to six weeks during the summer. "This is where the true test comes. We are placed in a military environment and everyone is rated and assigned a leadership position which they hold for approximately 24 hours. The women are placed in positions of leadership, the men usually accept it fairly well."

It's a different environment for a woman and according to Hickel it usually takes a couple of weeks for a woman to forget values they have about their traditional role and to adjust to their new role.

Comments from three women involved in Marshall's program were favorable. "I like the opportunities ROTC offers for careers," said Dawn Ray, Huntington freshman. Ray added she enjoyed rappelling.

"I thought of going right into the army when I finished high school, but ROTC seemed to be better for me," said Debbie Jazwinski, Shenorock, N.Y., junior. Jazwinski said she planned to enter the ROTC's medical branch after graduation from college.

Jayne Crabtree, Huntington sophomore, said she was first interested in ROTC through the field activities. "I only went to learn to rappell, but I've really become involved," she said.

Marshall's ROTC program is divided into two two-year courses: a basic course freshman and sophomore year.

Marshall's ROTC programs divided into two two-year courses: a basic course (freshman and sophomore years) which can be satisfied by taking ROTC courses of instruction and meeting other general requirements. The basic course requirements may also be met if the cadet is a veteran with one year active duty if the cadet attends a six-week long summer camp at Ft. Knox, Ky.

Upon completion of the basic course, Hickel said cadets sign a contract with the United States Government wherein the government agrees to pay $100 per month subsistence fee for up to 10 months each school year for two years. In addition the cadets are paid $345 for the training at ROTC advanced camp.

In turn the student agrees to complete his bachelor's degree and complete a military service obligation. This varies with the individual but is usually three years of active duty in a branch of the army.

Hit-run drivers elusive

"It's like looking for a needle in a hay stack," is how Donald L. Salyers, director of security, describes looking for hit and run drivers.

"It's a most difficult thing to do," Salyers said. "Unless there is physical evidence or a witness than can give some kind of description of the vehicle, Security has nothing to go on."

When one vehicle strikes another causing damages and then leaves the scene of the accident without reporting it to the victim, it constitutes a hit and run accident, Salyers said.

If paint from the hit and run vehicle is present on the victim's vehicle Security can look for "a damaged vehicle with the same color of paint as that on the victim's vehicle," Salyers said.

The cars have "got to tie together physically," Salyers said. "The damages must match."

If Security finds the hit and run vehicle they notify the victim, Salyers said. It is then up to the victim to obtain a hit and run warrant, if he or she desires to do so, he added.

Hit and run accidents per se do not occur that frequently, Salyers said. Since the fall term

Management major offers career of variety, challenge

The management field is not just a "generalists'" field, it is a field which is an important element in different enterprises, according to Reginald A. Spencer, coordinator of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

Possible areas of employment, Spencer said, include personnel and labor relations, utilities management, city, food service, sales, and hospital management. Spencer said. He said managing production or coordinating office management are also possible areas to consider.

Other related fields may include working as a statistician, analyst, or consultant for a firm or agency, Spencer said.

"Management is a necessary part of any operation in which one person directs the efforts of another," he said.

Spencer said he thought people in management must be able to coordinate all operations as well as being constantly aware of positions, both current and changing.

According to Spencer, "Management is an area which demands challenge."

"A management major should take a hard look at what he is doing. Students majoring in management must specify what they want out of a management job," Spencer said.

Most college graduates want to start at the top, Spencer said. "Most companies start a management major at the bottom and they must then work themselves up the ladder."

Spencer said he felt a few years of on the job training is necessary before management majors are really management material.

"It's training from the ground up," Spencer said.

Equal employment conference topic

Marshall University, in cooperation with West Virginia University, will conduct an Equal Employment Opportunity Conference Thursday and Friday in the Memorial Student Center, according to Marvin E. Billups, Marshall affirmative action officer.

He said the purpose of the conference is to provide representatives from both public and private sectors with an understanding of laws relating to job discrimination.

"The conference is designed for persons responsible for employment practices and affirmative action plans in the community," he said.

Billups said representatives of the Federal Equal Opportunity Commission and the U.S. Department of Labor will be present at the conference. "They will discuss the legal, social and economic implications of Equal Employment Opportunity legislation and implementation of the laws, regulations and guidelines," he said.

"The main idea of the Equal Employment Opportunity Conference is to acquaint area businesses and organizations with new and rapidly changing discrimination laws," Billups said.

Billups said topics to be discussed will include "Equal Employment Opportunity Investigations," "How to Conduct a Lawful Employment Interview," "Equal Pay for Equal Work," and "Age Discrimination and Reverse Discrimination."

Missionary couple to share views

A husband and wife missionary team from Ghana will speak at a covered dish dinner Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Campus Christian Center (CC), according to Dr. Hugh B. Springer, Presbyterian campus minister.

Harry "Pete" Peterson and his wife Martha Jane will share their perspective on the Christian church in the third world today, Springer said.

Everyone is invited to the dinner, but reservations must be made by calling the CCC (529-3086) by 4 p.m. Friday, he said.

The Petersons have served as missionaries near Accra, Ghana, in western Africa, for the past five years, Springer said. They also served as missionaries in Taiwan from 1962-1965, he added. Pete teaches the New Testament part-time in Ghana's interdenominational seminary, Trinity College, and is pastor of an interdenominational church in a suburban community near Accra, according to Springer.

In addition to serving in Taiwan, Pete served as campus pastor for the University of South Carolina from 1960-62 and as assistant pastor the First Presbyterian Church in Huntington for two years.

Springer said. While in Huntington, Pete started the first international house which provided foreign students in the United States with homes in Huntington in which they spent their Christmas vacations, he said.

Martha Jane, a South Carolina native, leads Bible studies, edits materials for Christian publications in Ghana and does free-lance writing for U.S. periodicals, Springer said.

She received her bachelor's degree in biology from Agnes Scott College and a nursing degree from the Cornell University school of nursing, he said.

UNITED STATES READING LAB OFFERS SPEED READING COURSE IN HUNTINGTON

United States Reading Lab will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in Huntington.

This recently developed method of instruction is the most innovative and effective program available in the United States.

Not only does this famous course reduce your time in the classroom to just one class per week for 4 short weeks but it also includes an advanced speed reading course on cassette tape so that you can continue to improve for the rest of your life. In just 4 weeks the average student should be reading 4-5 times faster. In a few months some students are reading 20-30 times faster attaining speeds that approach 6000 words per minute. In rare instances speeds of up to 13,000 wpm have been documented.

Our average graduate should read 7-10 times faster upon completion of the course with marked improvement in comprehension and concentration.

For those who would like additional information, a series of free, one hour, orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction method, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-half the cost of similar courses. You must attend any of the free meetings for information about Huntington classes.

These orientations are open to the public, above age 14 (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible).

If you have always wanted to be a speed reader but found the cost prohibitive or the course too time consuming...now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7-10 times faster, concentrate better and comprehend more.

If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world then this course is an absolute necessity.

THE FUZZ

'I like the challenge'

By ROCKY STANLEY

Being the nation's leading active career receiver isn't all roses. Double and multiple coverages and designed to take away the receptions that were easier to come by in his early college career.

But Marshall's split end and All-America candidate John "Fuzzy" Filliez has stressed team wins over his individual marks and this year he is trying to help the Herd to its first winning season since 1964.

Defensive backs are making it tough on Fuzzy, who invariably represents the key to Marshall's scoring potential. His name is well known among opponents and the reputation is what secondaries are gunning at when they try to ruffle him with "cheap shots and small talk."

Akron's Cheo Akili was the most recent of those defensive backs who jolted Filliez unnecessarily, he said.

"I told him there was no need for cheap stuff, and later in the game I caught the touchdown pass and flipped the ball back at him and told him about it."

"It's the name I guess," Fuzzy said. "But I like the challenge," he explains with a glint in his eyes and a small smile. "It makes catching it that much better."

And catching the ball is just what the red-haired New Martinsville native has done. Against Central Michigan earlier this season, Filliez broke an NCAA mark by catching a pass in 35 consecutive games, a record previously owned by former Nebraska All-American Johnny Rodgers. Filliez has added to the record since then and has now grabbed a pass in 39 straight games.

The records by no means end there, however. Filliez has also shattered Marshall career receiving marks in receptions (Jim Cure) and yardage (Jim Swierczek, 1,610) and has tacked on to the record with every subsequent catch.

Fuzzy now has 159 career catches, and this season ascended NCAA's all-time top 20 in career catches. Tied for 14th going into Saturday's 13-0 win over Akron, he pulled in three more passes to move into a tie for 11th on the list, passing Mike Kelly of Davidson, Tom Gatewood of Notre Dame, and Walker Gillette of Richmond, and into a tie with Illinois' John Wright.

At 5-11 and 181, Fuzzy is not blessed with the size of most premiere receivers, nor does he have exceptional speed. But he is noted for a pair of excellent, sticky hands, determination and the knack of running excellent pass routes. He has been compared to professional receivers of the same stature, such as Howard Twilley of the Miami Dolphins and Oakland's Fred Biletnikoff, but, he says he doesn't pattern himself after anyone in particular.

Filliez also takes a lot of pride in his blocking.

"I can show you time and time again where Fuzzy has thrown a key block on a productive running play," Coach Frank Ellwood said.

"I just love to play football," said the MU co-captain. And winning football is what Filliez enjoys this year. "Defense has been one of the big factors this season, and when we can get some points on the board, the team really gets fired up."

Filliez has 31 receptions this season to lead the team, and his yardage in now more than 400. Filliez says team members are aware of the records but they don't talk about them much.

"We're concerned with building a winner. Individual achievements are great, but they don't mean much if the team is losing." That's why Filliez says he is happy about this season and is optimistic about Marshall football's future in the Southern Conference next year.

"There has been great recruiting here, and the program is just now starting to build the winning tradition that was the goal after the crash. I think it's coming this year."

"The team's respect for Fuzzy runs deep and the emotion that flowed after his touchdown reception Saturday was indicative of our feelings toward him," said tightend Steve Williams. "He's been a tremendous help to me. He's taught me a lot about receiving and we consider his success as ours and he really dedicates himself to the team effort." Filliez was mobbed by his teammates in the corner of the end zone under a banner on the concrete wall which read "Beware of the Fuzz."

"Yeah, it was great catching the pass down there in the corner under the sign and having everybody going crazy," he said. "It's a big factor playing at home; we just play better. The student support has been unbelievable."

"Everyone has been great. I'd just like to have two good games at home this year to go out with."

Marshall's standout receiver, like so many members of this year's squad, has not managed to play without injury. Filliez suffered a deeply bruised shoulder in the Herd's opening game and spent weeks of practice between games without being tackled so he could get ready for Saturday's games.

But even after returning to form, he continued to face the compound coverage in passing situations that reflect opponents' respect for him.

"A lot of teams drop off an end or a linebacker and try to take away my short turn-ins," Fuzzy points out. "We have a good group of receivers though. When Ray Crisp and I line up on the same side, it takes some of the heat off and makes it a little easier."

Fairfield Stadium banner forewarns Akron before Marshall's 13-0 win Sat.

Filliez, like linebacker Ed McTaggart, is one of the Herd's big motivators and provides the leadership which Ellwood said has been outstanding from his seniors.

Through his final season though, the media coverage was thorough at the beginning but because Ellwood is striving for a healthy balance with the run, Fuzzy has not had the big day every Saturday and press coverage dipped until recently.

Filliez, who noted that he has been getting some national attention for his impressive college credentials, was visited Oct. 25 by Dave Diles, co-host of ABC's College Football Scoreboard Show. He filmed interviews with Filliez, as well as with Ellwood, President Robert B. Hayes, and Director of Athletics Joe McMullen. The feature is expected to be shown over the Thanksgiving holidays.

"It's tremendous exposure not only for myself but for the university," Fuzzy said. "It's the whole story of building a winning program."

Meanwhile, Fuzzy is preparing for Villanova, against whom he had the best single game performance of his career. Last year he pulled in 11 passes for 112 yards for career bests, while the Herd dropped a 21-14 decision to the Wildcats.

Quarterback Bud Nelson said he hopes to get the ball to Filliez as much as he can in the remaining games.

"Nearly all our passes are off the sprint-out series, and Bud has the option of running or throwing," Filliez said. "He reads the defenses well, and because he has been under pass-rushing pressure he has the first option of running." Fuzzy said of the basically few times that passes are directed his way, when his abilities are taken into consideration.

Filliez, who now has 1,867 yards receiving in his career, noted that he would like to finish up with more than 2,000, but points to winning the games as the prime objective.

At the conclusion of his collegiate career, Filliez has more football in mind.

"I'm definitely interested in playing pro ball. I have questionnaires from three or four teams, and the scouts have the whole book on me. I'll just have to wait and see how things develop."

As for the rest of this season, Filliez is sure of one thing: "If we play like we did Saturday (beating highly-regarded Akron 13-0), there is no question that we can go out 8-3." After weathering the team through some of its most trying times, he would like nothing more than to go out a winner.

Voter turnout heavy despite predictions

The experts predicted that Americans were too apathetic to vote this year. But the experts reckoned without the determination of the U.S. public.

"There was so much darn talk about apathy, that people decided not to be apathetic," said one politician in Kentucky, explaining the heavy turnout in his state.

On a nationwide basis, the turnout was above the level predicted by the experts, although it was below the record 62.8 per cent of the voting age population who balloted in the 1960 race between Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy.

As of midday, the News Election Service reported 78,919,663 votes cast for President Ford, Jimmy Carter, independent Eugene McCarthy and American Independent party candidate Lester Maddox. Totals for other minor party candidates were not immediately available.

The figure, based on nearly complete voting reports in most areas, represented 52.6 per cent of the voting age population, estimated at 150 million persons. And the number was certain to grow as complete returns were tallied.

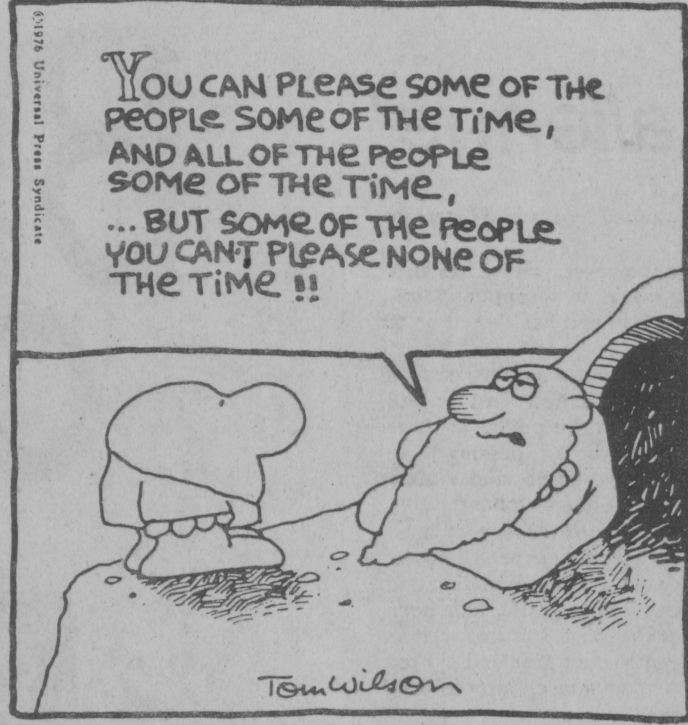

Early this summer, the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate said its poll showed that voter turnout might be less than 50 per cent of those eligible. The record low turnout since 1920 - when universal suffrage went into effect - was 51.1 per cent of the voting population in 1948. The 1972 turnout was 55.4 per cent.

Political analysts - and the candidates themselves - talked about apathy this year and worried about the turnout, despite a later Gallup poll showing that the closeness of the race and the presidential debates might send people to the voting booth.

The Gallup poll apparently was right. "Everybody read that voters were apathetic and most people probably said, 'I don't want to be the apathy guy,'" said Jack McDermott, an election commissioner in Boston. "People resolved to get out and vote. Also, they read it was close and they figured their vote might make a difference."

Gambling, guns, energy receive voter support

Voters in two states say you can have guns and bettors.

In six others they say that you cannot limit the growth of nuclear power plants. In two states they say you can require returnable bottles and in two others that you cannot.

These are the results of dozens of initiatives on various state ballots around the country in Tuesday's election.

The measure to suffer the most resounding defeat was that to limit the growth of nuclear power plants by imposing strict safety standards. Such a proposal was turned down handily in Arizona, Colorado, Montana, Ohio, Oregon and Washington.

A measure to ban the sale of handguns fared little better. It was defeated by a more than 2-to-1 margin in Massachusetts, which was believed to be the first state with a referendum on such a measure.

New Jersey citizens voted, meanwhile, to allow legal casino gambling in the state's best-known resort, Atlantic City, known mostly in recent years as the home of the Miss America pageant. Some supporters of the measure say it will turn the decaying resort into a "Las Vegas of the East."

And in Maine and Michigan, voters accepted proposals to require deposit beverage bottles. Similar measures met defeat in Colorado and Massachusetts.

The nuclear measures were mostly patterned on a California plan that was defeated by the voters in June. While differing in detail, they generally would have required that nuclear facilities be proved safe by equipment testing before they may be built or operated.

The nuclear and electric utility industries spent heavily to defeat the six measures on the ballot Tuesday. In Ohio alone, their budget was $1 billion--25 times the funds available to supporters, who were largely from environmental or consumer groups.

Opponents had said the measures would, in effect, ban further nuclear power development and could lead to electricity shortages.

The returnable bottle measures were based on an Oregon law adopted four years ago that bans sale of no-deposit bottles and pull-top cans. It too met heavy opposition from industry and labor groups who maintained it would do little to solve the problem it was intended for--litter--and would raise prices on soft drinks and beer.

The Massachusetts measure on handguns would have required owners to turn in handguns for reimbursement by the state, with the total cost estimated at $50 million to $125 million.

Murder trial concludes with cellmate testimony

MORGANTOWN—A man who shared a jail cell with Eugene Paul Clawson told a jury today Clawson would awake from nightmares screaming "I'm sorry, I'm sorry" and had asked him his opinion of someone who would cut another person's head off.

The testimony from Felton Harpe Jr., 35, concluded testimony in the Clawson's murder trial in Monongalia County Circuit Court. Closing statements are expected Thursday with the case possibly going to the jury before the day's end.

Clawson is charged with murder in the 1970 decapitation slayings of West Virginia University coeds Mared Malarik of Kinnelon, N.J. and Karen Ferrell of Quinwood.

Harpe told the seven-man, five woman jury that in July 1975, while confined to the Camden County Jail in New Jersey, Clawson told him he had done a terrible thing and wanted to commit suicide. He said Clawson then told him about picking two girls up who were hitchhiking and later killing them.

He "appeared to derive some pleasure" from telling the story, Harpe told the jury.

Under cross-examination, Harpe denied his testimony was concocted to get both he and Clawson out of jail. Clawson testified Monday that his 73-page confession in the coeds slayings was given to avoid serving possible jail terms of 143 years in New Jersey on various sex offense charges.

He was put back on the stand Wednesday and said he believed Harpe was testifying to get some pending charges dropped or to get his prison time shortened.

Clawson said he let Harpe read a detective magazine story about the coeds murder.

Dow Jones volume drops in reaction to Carter win

NEW YORK—The stock market's first-blush reaction to the voters' choice of Jimmy Carter for president was a sharp drop in fairly active trading today.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average for 30 industrial stocks was down 13.05 at 953.04. Losers held a lopsided 6-1 edge on gainers in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume came to 14.66 million shares at mid-afternoon.

Analysts said the market was hit with a wave of selling by traders favoring President Ford who had bought stocks last week in the hope that he might pull an upset in the election.

Most observers said it would take at least several days for the market to register any broad-based response to the election's outcome.

Oil stocks were particularly weak, evidently reflecting investors' belief that the combination of Carter in the White House and a Democratic Congress would make for a less favorable political climate for the industry.

Series to present lecture, concert

A film-lecture and concert will be presented Monday and Tuesday by the Forum and Baxter Series, according to James Martin, Marshall Artist Series coordinator.

Ed Lark, native of California, will present a film-lecture on Norway Monday at 8 p.m. in Old Main Auditorium.

The first part of the film will highlight Oslo, the capital, and show examples of the country's beauty.

Merrill and Russell will sing duets from "La Traviata" and "The Barber of Seville."

Tickets are available at the Keith-Albee box office, the Kenney Music Company in Huntington, and the Department of Music office in Smith Music Hall.

Admission is by season membership or by student activity card, Martin said.

The second part of the film will deal with the folklore of the country as well as the life of the people there, Martin said.

Admission is by activity card.

The Baxter Series will present Robert Merrill, leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Association, and Louise Russell, coloratura soprano, Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Keith-Albee Theatre.

Russell will sing arias from "Romeo et Juliette," "Linda di Chamounix" and "La Traviata." Other selections include "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess," "L'Amour, toujours L'Amour" and "Adele's Laughing Song," Martin said.

Merrill will sing arias from "The Marriage of Figaro," and selections from "Fiddler on the Roof," Martin said.
