Marlboro stereotype outmoded

Author criticizes society's traditions

By PIA CUMMINGS

Men's liberation involves allowing men to become warm and open individuals, and sharing housework, child care and psychological support with their spouses, according to author and lecturer Dr. Warren Farrell.

Farrell, author of "The Liberated Man—Beyond Masculinity: Freeing Men and Their Relationships with Women," was on campus Thursday for a press conference and an evening presentation.

He said there wasn't a definition of men's liberation because the movement didn't want to create a new stereotype. "We want to free men from having to choose to be one thing or another," he said.

Farrell said men today feel they must live up to the "Marlboro image," of being successful and "conquering all kinds of territory." He said the media reinforces this image by suggesting (mainly through advertising) a man must have a woman to possess, and must achieve high status to get a woman more easily.

"A man is manipulated to feel he has to be successful to appeal to a woman and to be masculine in the eyes of other men," he said.

In his lectures, Farrell said he deals with families in which "men and women are trained to be opposite. The division of labor in most marriages leads to a division of interest, and many couples try to fill this gap by having children," he said.

He said he also suggests ways men can make a living while simultaneously producing social change. Some of these included working for a paternity leave system or having men staff a child care center.

But presently, Farrell said it is more difficult for men to change than women. "A woman can become more assertive, more aggressive, or more sports-minded and there are both positive and negative responses to her actions. But if a man takes off for paternity leave, he gets a negative response."

"A woman can put her doctorate degree down on a resume for a job, but a man can't very well put a two-year paternity leave," he said.

Farrell said greater pressure is on men to achieve power. "People assume men have all the power, but they only have external power—not power over their own lives." Because men are under such pressure and must conform to society's rules, he said they are "careful of trying new things and become boring human beings, thereby neglecting their wives and children."

Farrell said he gets response from older and younger men. "At first I thought younger men would be more open to the idea of liberation, but I've found that there are a greater number of older men (40-50 age group) who are receptive because they have had the life experience to see themselves caught in the trap."

"While the younger men were more intellectual, they had less gut. After they got out of college, many fell right into the traditional roles," he added.

Farrell said he felt progress has been made in the men's movement during the last five or 10 years. "I think there is more support today for a couple sharing in their marriage without making the man feel like he's a sissy," he said.

Farrell teaches the sociology of sex roles at Brooklyn College, and is presently working on another book. He is co-founder of the Men's Awareness Network, and the only male to have been elected three times to the National Organization for Women's Board of Directors.

'Free' beer

Students indicate support

By STEVE IGO

Many students apparently back a Senate-sponsored "Honor the Herd Celebration" disapproved by the administration that would have supplied 50 kegs of beer to students after the final football game of the season tomorrow, according to an unscientific poll conducted with five students.

Student Senate passed controversial Bill No. 26 allotting $1,600 in student government funds for the Saturday afternoon "beer blast." It took Senate until 3 a.m. Wednesday to pass the bill, overcoming a filibuster attempt by at least six senators who opposed the idea.

But it turned out the Senate Marathon session was all for naught. Dean of Students Dr. Richard G. Fisher announced Wednesday the administration would not approve of the celebration.

"I think if the students want one they should have it," said Cherri Hauer,

Hurricane freshman. "I personally don't drink but I think most student would've wanted to do this and this is a disappointment."

Jim Overbye, Huntington senior, said the beer blast sounded like a good idea to him.

"Apparently there is no cut and dried rule against a beer blast, so I've got to wonder why they've disapproved it," he said.

"They've been talking about doing something to support the football team and it sounds like this celebration is just the thing," said Overbye. "We often wonder just what the student government does for students and this is the first time I've heard of them doing anything positive like this."

S. Gilbert Stuart, Fla., junior, said the administration's decision has deeper meanings.

"I think President (Robert B.) Hayes and Dr. Fisher should listen to the voices of the students," he said. "It seems Student Government is rigged and does what the administration tells them to. I support this beer blast, although maybe the money could be spent in better ways."

According to Virginia Dickens, Lesage freshman, the blast would have given students a chance to "get together as a whole and have a good time for a change."

"I really think it would've been nice to have had the celebration—it'd show a university is a social exchange as well as an educational experience and show we're not just a bunch of stiff-necks. I would've gone to the blast and brought a bunch of my friends too," she said.

Cindy Miragliotta, Charleston junior, said the student body "deserved to get the party."

"I think they owe it to the student body, especially since there was no concert for homecoming," she said.

"This would have been good for all the students, and I'm just willing to bet more than 50 would've showed up."

Officials happy with turn-out

Bloodmobile falls short of unit goal

The Marshall bloodmobile fell short of its goal of 400 units, but Red Cross officials are happy with the turn-out, according to Rick Harrison, Chapter Recruitment Coordinator of the Tri-State Red Cross Blood Center.

The drive, which ended at 4 p.m., collected 330 units. Harrison attributed the failure to reach the goal to the swine flu shots being given at Marshall.

"Students didn't realize they cannot give blood for 48 hours after receiving a shot," he said.

Harrison added he hopes to achieve the 400 unit level at Marshall's next bloodmobile, tentatively scheduled for Feb. 8-9, 1977.

The Red Cross needs blood to offset an annual increased use and a local representative of the organization said he was hopeful that the MU bloodmobile visit would be the most successful since February 1974.

"We hope we can get across to the students the tremendous need for blood. We serve 92 hospitals and receive 250-300 requests for blood a week, all the blood we collect here will be gone within a week," said Mike Crist, regional recruitment coordinator of the Tri-State Red Cross Blood Center.

Crist said there was a 15 per cent increase in demand for blood annually.

He attributes this to increased population mobility and more elective and openheart surgery being performed. "For example, until February, Charleston was only performing heart surgery three times a week, now they do it at least five times a week and each operation may need 12 units of blood," he said.

Pamela Jo Clarkson, Ravenswood junior, said she had no particular reason for giving blood, "I just feel better when I do."

Bob Blauvelt, Williamstown senior, said, "I like giving and I feel I should." Blauvelt's remarks were echoed by seven-time giver Brenda Spinks, Clintonville sophomore, who had no particular reason for donating her blood.

Cheryl Boyes, Lavalette freshman, was giving for the first time and said, "I just thought I'd give, there's no particular reason."

Marcia Goodwin, Lewisburg junior, was giving for the sixth time and also working as a volunteer at the bloodmobile. She said she was the only one in her family who could give blood. "I like to keep our family's blood needs covered and I give because I like doing something for somebody."

Real fire 'alarms' residents

By DAWN SIMMONS

Although some residents say they can understand the reasons for disconnecting the automatic fire alarm system between the dormitories and the Huntington Fire Department, this doesn't lessen their fear of what might happen if a real fire occurred.

The alarms were disconnected because of frequent false alarms in the dormitories.

The automatic alarm system provides a direct connection between the fire alarm in the campus building and a receiving box at the fire department. Local fire systems sound only in the building in which the alarm is pulled.

"I think it has its good and bad aspects," said Margaret J. Fredericks, Marietta, Ohio junior and resident of Twin Towers West. "It's good because the Huntington Fire Department will no longer have to come at all hours of the night for false fire alarms," she said. "It's bad because if there was a real fire the Huntington Fire Department wouldn't know about it as quickly, therefore, residents would not be able to get out as quickly."

Debbie S. Smith, Huntington freshman and a resident of Twin Towers West said, "I get sick and tired of waking up at 2 a.m. for a false alarm. I think the alarm should be connected so the fire department could come quickly if there was a fire. The alarms should be enclosed so they are not so easy for people to set off."

Randy K. Titus, Paramus, N.J., sophomore and "resident advisor of South Hall said "Most of the problems arising from pulling the fire alarms can be handled locally and sufficient time to call the Huntington Fire Department for further aid is always available."

"It is not necessary to be directly connected to the Huntington Fire Department," said Don Emerson, Toms River, N.J., junior and resident of South Hall. "It goes off too many times to be of any concern to the Huntington Fire Department," he added.

Barbara A. Sutton, New Boston, Ohio senior and a resident of West Hall said, "I think the alarms should be connected to the Huntington Fire Department because if there was a fire, every minute counts. It would take longer for the fire department to find out there was a fire with the alarm system disconnected."

"There's too many people pulling the alarms for the fire department to come every time," said Mark Beverly, South Charleston freshman. "It's too bad because it's dangerous. You can't expect the fire department to come to the dormitories every time a false alarm occurs," he said.

Burffel bagging baffles bunches

By CONNIE REED

Ferd Burffel. Who is he? He is "everything the 'Loony Wing' stands for." But what is the "Loony Wing"?

Mystery prevails in the Special Notices of The Parthenon Mini Ads, where Butch Cassidy, The Sundance Kid and the Hole-in-the-Wall Gang (alias "Loony Wing") heretofore issued a ransom note: With the release of group of men, demand the release of Ferd Burffel from custody of the Home of the Criminally Ignorant. If our demand is not carried out by high noon, the 18th of November, 1976, we shall instigate the protective forces of this illustrious campus in simple demand terms, you got the ball, now mess up!

Efforts to discover the true identity of the "Loony Wing" revealed it is indeed the first, second, and third floors of the south wing of Hodges Hall. Further investigation also uncovered the true identity of those involved. Butch Cassidy is none other than Joe "Moose" McCarthy, South Amboy, N.J. sophomore; The Sundance Kid is Kim Mason, Statesville, N.C. sophomore. The Hole-in-the-Wall Gang consists of Pat Reed, Parkersburg freshman; Tim Beaty, Parkersburg sophomore; Rich "Foamy" Fulmer, St. Albans freshman and all the other "Loonys" on the south wing of Hodges Hall.

Sundance, the loonies' chief spokesman, reported that the "Loony Wing" is on the rampage due to the heartbreaking disappearance of their beloved representative Ferd Burffel.

The Sundance Kid also stated the general plan of attack of the "Loony Wing" follows that of the original Hole-in-the-Wall Gang, and the "Loony Wing" will direct their entire efforts to recover Ferd Burffel.

The latest caper of the "Loony Wing" was reported to be the kidnapping of Bill "Slick" Forbes on Tuesday night. Forbes, a New Martinsville senior, and President of the Armadillo Club, was forced to issue a plea for the return of Ferd Burffel back to Butch, Sundance and the Hole-in-the-Wall Gang.

Will the real Ferd Burffel please stand up?

Cheerleader Tim White

Athletic contribution made by spirited MU student

By LYNN SCAGGS

Tim White, Princeton sophomore, says his "contribution to athletics at Marshall is cheerleading."

White, second year cheerleader at MU, said he began his cheerleading career in his junior year at Princeton High School during basketball season. He also participated in football and track while in high school. During his junior year he won the Most Spirited Award at Princeton.

White said his cheerleading interest began while he was on the gymnastics teams at both Princeton junior and senior high schools.

White's sports activity began in fourth grade when he played football, basketball, and ran track. This interest was sparked by his father, a midget league football coach.

White played football at Princeton through his senior year as a quarterback and punter. "The biggest highlight of my football career was the homecoming game of my senior year, when I scored my first touchdown," White said. "We beat Gary that game 70-12."

In addition to football, White was on the track team at Princeton. He qualified for the West Virginia track meets in his sophomore year in pole vaulting competition. He went to the state meet again in his senior year, competing in low hurdles and placing fifth in the mile relay.

White walked on the MU football team in his freshman year, and played quarterback. However, a summer neck injury, forced him to drop in mid-season.

When White quit football, the MU cheerleaders approached him and asked him to cheer. He finished the 1975 MU football season as a cheerleader then cheered on the spring basketball squad. He is now a cheerleader on the MU football cheering squad.

White, a health and physical education major, is a member of the Tau Kappa Epsilon social fraternity, and is active in intramural sports. He is also an MU student officer.

In addition, White has sung for a Christian musical drama group, "Sounds," for five years. The group has done extensive traveling, and performs at Pipestem State Park every two weeks.

Viewing his role as a MU cheerleader, White said, "I felt I had to be indirectly around sports if I couldn't participate in them, and that's where cheerleading comes in. I get to meet more people and travel more than if I participated in football. I really enjoy cheerleading."

Preparation a must for job interviews

By JEANNIE FORTNER

If you have a job interview scheduled and you're not totally prepared for it, chances are you will just be wasting your time, according to Reginald A. Spencer, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center. He explains that just "drifting into an interview" can cost an applicant a good job opportunity.

"If you know a little of what is expected of you, you will not create an impression of indifference by acting too casual," Spencer said. "This way you will be able to avoid any nervous fright you may otherwise have."

As minimum preparation, Spencer said an applicant should give attention to the following:

- Be totally prepared.
- Be on time for the interview since being late is almost never considered excusable.
- Know the name of the interviewer and know how to pronounce it if it looks difficult.
- Be neat. Appearance plays a big role in whether or not an applicant gets the job.

Spencer said if an applicant does some research on the company that is interviewing, he will present a better picture of himself. Some tips, he added, are knowing how old the company is, what its products and services are, where its plants, offices or stores are located, and what its growth has been in the past.

Spencer said, "An applicant should think about questions he might want to ask before he goes to the interview."

Spencer added it might be helpful for later interviews if an applicant would take a few notes after he leaves the interview.

Spencer commented, "If you are friendly, honest and sincere you will always make a good impression."

Another tip offered by Spencer is for the applicant to relax and not appear too nervous.

"Remember that the interviewer is experienced. He isn't there to try and trip you up. He is interested in hiring you," Spencer said.

Spencer said an applicant should greet the interviewer by name as he or she enters the office, then take cues from the interviewer.

"It is important that you take a resume with you. It should be complete, listing all jobs you have had," Spencer said. He added, "If you worked your way through college, tell the interviewer that in your resume."

Spencer said the Career Planning and Placement Office will guide and help any student in preparing a resume. The office is located on the first floor of Prichard Hall.

Wassum to give senior recital

William Wassum, Huntington senior, will present a recital on the violin Monday at 8 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall.

Wassum, a former student of Alfred Lanegger, retired associate professor of music, and presently studying with Patricia Green, associate professor of music, will perform a variety of trio and duo works for violin and other instruments.

Opening the program will be Corelli's "La Follia" variations, a well-known Baroque composition for violin and continuo (harpisichord and cello). Assisting in this number on harpsichord will be Dr. Paul Balshaw, MU director of choirs and opera, and Valerie Perrine, cello student at Ohio University at Athens. Dr. James Taggart, professor of piano, and Perrine will also assist in Mozart's Trio in C Major.

Wassum and Taggart will perform Grieg's Sonata in F Major and contemporary composer Derek Healey's Six Epigrams, both works for violin and piano.

Wassum began his violin study in the Cabell County public schools under Jacquetta Shaw at the age of 12. He worked with Lanegger for four years before coming to Marshall.

Wassum has participated as a string player in the University Community Orchestra, the "Chief Justice" Orchestra, for various musical theater orchestras, and in small string ensembles. He was chosen concert-master of the MU Community Orchestra this season.

Coffee House features women this weekend

The Marshall's Women's Center will sponsor "Women's Weekend" tonight and Saturday in the Coffee House, according to Linda Darnall, Buckhannon sophomore and one of the coordinators for the project.

Activities involve women singing and performing instrumentals with male accompaniment. "The idea for a women's weekend in the Coffee House began with Elaine Baker, assistant professor of psychology," said Darnall.

"We want to get more people involved sharing their talents with the public, and we also want more female participation on the Coffee House circuit," Darnall said.

Scheduled to perform are Janice Banks, Huntington freshman, Ruia Wayne, performing songs by Linda Ronstadt, Katona Maynard performing English Ballads on flute, and others who are expected to also demonstrate their talents.

Speech papers win recognition

Randall R. Robey and Carol S. Spangler, former graduate students in speech pathology, will present papers at the American Speech and Hearing Association's national convention in Houston, Texas Saturday through Tuesday.

The papers, which were originally written in Speech 601 were recognized as having potential appeal for a national audience by Dr. Charles Woodford, instructor of the course.

Cinema Arts shows 'Smiles'

"Smiles" will be shown tonight in the Multipurpose Room of the Memorial Student Center at 7:30. The presentation is sponsored by the Cinema Arts Committee under the Office of Student Activities.

The film is built around a beauty contest called the "Young American Miss Pageant," and is light and funny, according to spokesmen.

TTE has just two on ballot

Ballots for dormitory government offices in Twin Towers East will contain only two names, unless more residents sign up before the election Tuesday, Twin Towers East Dormitory Director Jerry Ball said.

Ball said Frank Black, St. Albans freshman, from thirteenth floor and Jeff Sandy, St. Albans freshman, from seventh floor are the two residents who have submitted their names to run for election.

Ballots will be drawn up and distributed to the resident advisors on each floor Monday, Ball said. Residents will receive the ballots Monday evening, and should return them to Ball Tuesday.

Ball said he intends to talk to more residents to encourage more people to run.

Any Towers East resident who would like to serve as a dormitory officer should contact him immediately, Ball added.

Rev. Lyles to speak on WMUL

The Rev. Bud Lyles will be the guest speaker for the "Table Talk" broadcast to be presented by the WMUL-FM station Saturday at 11:30 a.m. Lyles was associated with Dr. John R. Rice in the radio ministry for 15 years and is presently the editor of a weekly column for youth in the "Sword of the Lord" magazine. He is currently conducting revival meetings at the Grace Gospel Church, Adams Avenue and Twelfth Street West.

Listeners are invited to call in questions and comments by dialing 696-6640 or Centre 6640 during the broadcast.

Hechler books important - Slack

The acquisition of Ken Hechler's scrapbooks, documenting his years in Congress, is of great importance to the James E. Morrow Library, according to Dr. Kenneth Slack, director of libraries.

"Six years ago, the then MU President Dr. (John G.) Barker, had James A. Servies, an eminent librarian from the University of Florida, conduct a study of our library," said Slack. "He wrote that the library was not known for its excellence in any one subject field, no matter how small. There was no area where we had exclusive material."

"To change this, (MU) President (Robert B.) Hayes has instructed the library to have the definitive collection of the Huntington, Tri-State and southern West Virginia area. To do this," Slack added, "we need the diaries and letters of people who have made the Tri-State region what it is."

Slack cited examples of the exclusive material the library has acquired. "We have the papers of the Huntington Publishing Company, we acquired the complete works of Irving Dugan, a cartoonist who worked in this area for 30 years. These cartoons provide an important insight to attitudes of the region."

"The oral history project, where we interviewed people of the region who contributed to its progress, is an important source of primary resource material. All these things make our library a distinguished one. Now we have areas where we have exclusive material," Slack added.

Slack feels the scrapbooks will be of importance to serious scholars and researchers, people who are writing for magazines and who are doing research papers.

"I do not think these works will appeal to undergraduates, as they do not usually have the need for works of this nature," said Slack.

There are 35 of the volumes in the special collections of the library, third floor, west wing. According to Slack, the other volumes will arrive shortly, "They are coming by mail and should be here soon. I see no reason for delay."

Winning: Success in Herd's final depends on nailing tailback

By ROCKY STANLEY

A winning season means a lot to Coach Frank Ellwood and his Thundering Herd football team. But the victory to push Marshall's record to the win column and a 6-5 finish may very well depend on the rushing success of Southern Illinois tailback Andre Herrera.

The Salukis' talented senior is averaging more than 140 yards per game this year and his 12 touchdowns have helped them to their first winning season since 1971. A win Saturday by Southern Illinois would boost Rey Dempsey's team to 7-4 and the best finish in 15 years.

With Herrera carrying the ball on the average of more than 30 times per game, the Salukis' have accounted for an average of 213 yards each contest.

"Our offensive line is only an average one, but Herrera is the kind of kid who can break the big one with just a little opening," Dempsey said.

Currently fourth among national rushing leaders, Herrera has 1,432 yards and the distinction of scoring six touchdowns in Southern's 43-0 route of Northern Illinois.

"Andre has great instinct and awareness," Dempsey said. "We demand toughness and he's shown great persistence. He's just a good talent. Andre has eliminated a lot of the fundamental mistakes he was making earlier. We expect a great deal from him and he's done a great job."

Hampered by minor injuries the last few weeks, the Salukis' standout was tagged with his lowest output of the season when Bowling Green stopped him with 26 yards on 18 carries. The Falcons jumped to an early 21-point and went on to end Southern's three-game winning streak, snapping a string in which the Salukis had yielded no touchdowns in the three wins.

In his first season as head coach, Dempsey said the stress on sound football and patient improvement has been the key in turning around the program.

"I have a lot of respect for Dempsey, he stepped in and has things rolling for him," Ellwood said.

"We took a lot of the kids that were here last year and have been able to motivate them," Dempsey noted. "The program will take a while to build, but there has been a constant stress on improvement and the team is responding."

When the Salukis do put the ball in the air, quarterbacks Reggie Evans and Bob Collins employ predominantly flair control-type passing.

"They pass at times when it's pretty much expected," Ellwood noted. "They depend on the power sweep with Herrera and pound it out, hoping to give him a little daylight."

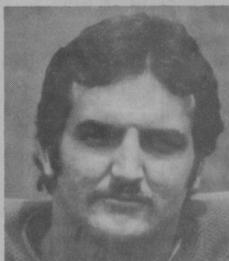

However Dempsey is concerned that the Salukis' rushing will have its work cut out against a Thundering Herd defense which has displayed a stinginess toward giving up points at home.

"We probably won't be able to run the ball with the success that we would like to because Marshall has played some strong defensive football at times this year," Dempsey said. "Herrera will have to do a good job inside as well as on the outside plays if we are to have a good rushing game."

As for defending the Herd, Dempsey indicated that his club will be hoping to shut down quarterback Bud Nelson, especially on broken plays.

"Our defense has been suspect all year, but they have been battling and scratching," Dempsey said. "Marshall is known for playing good football at home."

11 seniors leave, but...jerseys stay

By CONNIE REED

86, 64, 27, 33, 16, 43, 61, 53, 69, 32, and 88. These numbers on Herd football jerseys will return next season, but the 11 seniors who wore them for four years will be playing their last game for Marshall University Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Fairfield Stadium.

The senior players were referred to by head coach Frank Ellwood as a "group of young men who's greatest contributions have been their efforts in the turning around of the Marshall University football program."

Ellwood commented about each of his 11 senior players who will see their last Herd action on Saturday.

Bob "Walnut" Birch. (Wheeling; 6-2, 235 pounds; defensive tackle; business major)--"In the past two years he's been a fine football player. His contribution to the change-around has been positive, and we've been very happy with him."

Shawn "Doc" Burke (Clarksville, Ind.; 6-3, 219; center; geology major)--"Shawn has started every game except one. He's done a great job as center and he has been a good influence on the freshman starters that are on either side of him on the line."

John "Fuzzy" Filliez (New Martinsville; 5-11, 181; split end; recreation major)--"Fuzzy is one of our co-captains. He's provided us with the leadership that we have had to have in order to make us competitive." He also holds the NCAA record for passes caught in consecutive games.

Joe Fox (Ravenswood; 6-0, 198; quarterback; marketing major)--"Joe's been our alternate quarterback and alternate place kicker this year. He's made a positive contribution to our program. He has also run our scout team and this was an extremely important and valuable job in order to get our defense ready."

Bill "Slick" Forbes (New Martinsville; 6-0, 201; inside linebacker; social studies major)--"In the last two years, Forbes has been an on and off player but he has great attitude. He was on our speciality team which shows we have confidence in him as far as our kicking game is concerned. We think he's done a good job."

Wayne Sparks (West Portsmouth, Ohio; 6-3, 243; defensive tackle; civil engineering major)--"Wayne has played his very best football this year. I think he is the best defensive tackle in the county. We've played against no one any better than Wayne Sparks. He's very aggressive and looked up to by his team. I'm hopeful that he will get some kind of pro offer."

Jim Wulf (Williamsville, NY; 6-1, 208; defensive tackle; physical education major)--"He's the granddaddy of our football team. He's a senior plus in that he has been here an extra year. He's done one more year's work than anyone else and that takes more dedication, but it's typical of his character. Regardless of what he does in life, he's going to be successful."

Bill "Yano" Yanosy (Bradenville, Pa.; 6-0, 219; inside linebacker; math major)--"Another one of our co-captains. He was a leading tackler for two years. He leads our team by example. He's a good worker and leads a good lifestyle. He's made a very positive effort to lead this ball club."

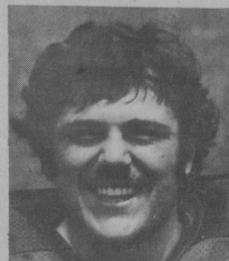

Doug "Sarge" Sargent (New Kensington, Pa.; 5-11, 173; defensive back, physical education major)

Lew Shields (Huntington; 5-11, 215; offensive guard)

Bob "Turk" Tranquill (Wellsburg; 6-1, 219; center; broadcast major)--"Everyone of these are fine young men who have given our squad stability in the ups and downs of morale. They have worked just as hard as the starters."

Junior varsity basketball may be dropped

By BOB RUNYON

Marshall University may not have a junior varsity basketball program this season, according to basketball coach Bob Daniels. It would be the first time in recent history that the school did not have such a team.

The reason, according to Daniels, is the lack of good basketball players at Marshall on scholarship.

"Right now we are leaning towards not having a JV team," Daniels said. "We have about 10-12 guys who are still trying out for the team, but not any of the walk-ons will probably be potential varsity players."

The roster presently contains three freshmen who, according to Daniels, "will probably see quite a bit of action on the varsity this year. And I don't think it would be fair to take the three guys from the varsity and put them on the JV team. That would be the majority of the lineup right there."

According to Woollum and Daniels, no one has been cut from the team. "There are about 17 guys in practice now. But we can't even tell them anything yet," Woollum said.

"I'll meet with (Athletic Director Joseph H.) McMullen sometime next week and go over the good and bad points and make a decision on the team."

Financing of the team also has to be taken into consideration. "About the only expense we have for the home games is the $50 for the referees, Daniels said. "But then you also have travel expenses and we always feed the team when they are on the road," he added.

McMullen said he was more concerned with the income aspect of the program. "We have to take careful consideration of the money part of the team. With the increasing costs, especially with women's varsity sports on the rise, you have to be a little tighter with the money."

"The main thing we'll weigh will be the recommendations from the coaches themselves," added McMullen. "We'll just get together and decide if they are worthy of varsity status."

With freshmen now able to play on varsity, colleges are dropping or taking a lighter look at the junior varsity program, according to McMullen.

"Last year we had a couple of teams drop their teams after we had already had them scheduled," said Daniels.

What will Woollum do if the program is deleted? "He'll help me with the varsity team when Robinette and Simmons (assistant varsity coaches, Bill Robinette and Jim Simmons) are out of town recruiting or scouting teams. He (Woollum) may scout local high school teams when we are working with the varsity."

A tentative 10-game schedule has been made out, according to McMullen. The call will go out to teams on the schedule next week if the decision is made to drop the JV squad.

Bowling meet uses professional format

The Marshall bowling team will host the West Virginia Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament Saturday and Sunday in the Memorial Student Center Recreation Area.

Six schools will participate in the tournament, according to Recreation Director, John David Short. The six entries include West Virginia University, Parkersburg Community College, West Virginia State, Concord College, and Glenville State College. The field will consist of ten men's teams and four women's teams, Short said.

"I have expanded the tournament this year to include a doubles competition as well as the team event and singles competition," Short said. The tournament will consist of 11 games compared to the six games of last year, he said.

Another addition to the tournament will be an all-events team trophy given to the team that has the highest 11 game total, Short said. "This will be the most meaningful trophy because it will include all three events," he added.

The MU women's team is the defending tournament champion. They defeated Glenville State College last year by a 40 pin total.

The men's defending champion is West Virginia University, while the MU men finished only 5th last year.

"We are the only tournament in the state to use a professional format with a five-game team event," Short said.

Short added that the names and scores of the tournament winners will be sent to the National Bowling Conference in hopes they will receive a berth in the sectionals of the National Bowling Spectacular.

"I think we have some fine individual performers on our bowling team, and I want to prove in this tournament that we are the best," Short said.

Wrestlers in tourney Saturday

The wrestling team opens its season Saturday with the Ohio Open Tournament at Wright State University in Dayton Ohio, according to Coach C. Robert Barnett.

Over 400 wrestlers competed last year, representing over 40 schools with either full or partial teams, Barnett said. Fifteen wrestlers will be traveling to Dayton for the Herd, although 10 comprise a full team.

Barnett said he is taking the extra five so they can gain experience for the upcoming dual season. It begins Dec. 4 with a double dual at Appalachian State with Western Carolina University also attending.

Flute recital tonight

Deborah Matthews, Huntington senior, will present a recital at 8 p.m. today in Smith Recital Hall. The program is open to the public.

Matthews, a student of Tana Roquemore, MU instructor of flute, will perform works by the contemporary composers Ingolf Dahl and Edgard Varese and by the Baroque composers J.J. Quantz and George Phillip Telemann.

Wayne Spurlock, Huntington graduate student in piano performance, will accompany Matthews at the Harpsichord and piano. Theodore Heger, MU assistant professor of oboe, will join the two performers in the Quantz, a trio for flute, oboe and harpsichord. Gary Marks, sophomore flute major, will perform with Matthews in the Telemann, a sonata for two flutes.

Matthews has performed in ensembles both as a student and a professional player. At Marshall she participated in the University Wind Symphony, the MU Community Orchestra, the Flute Ensemble and the special orchestra organized for the performance of Paul Whear's "Chief Justice" in Washington, D.C. last May. She has also sung in the A Cappella Choir.

Professionally, Matthews plays with both the Charleston Symphony and the Huntington Chamber Orchestra. In addition she performs with the newly organized West Virginia Wind Symphony, directed by J.D. Folsom.

Sheriff killed by 'cave-man'

GRANTSVILLE, W. Va. — Calhoun County Sheriff Park Richards was killed Thursday while trying to serve a mental illness warrant on a cave-dwelling man, state police said.

The man, also killed in gunfire from the sheriff and an accompanying state trooper, was identified as John Fitzgerald.

Richards, 62, of Big Springs and Trooper C.W. McDonald went to Rush Run, about nine miles east of here, where the man was living in a cave, officials said.

"They approached the subject, who was outside cooking over an open fire," said Cpl. W.A. Burns of the Grantsville state police detachment.

"He heard or saw them and pointed a rifle at the trooper. The trooper advised him of the warrant. He apparently turned and started walking away, then turned and shot the sheriff."

"The sheriff had his revolver drawn and returned the fire and the trooper also returned the fire," Burns said. McDonald was not hurt.

Burns said it was unknown which officer's shot killed Fitzgerald, who was hit at least twice.

County Coroner Dr. Odilon Olivais said the sheriff was shot with a high-powered rifle from two or three feet.

Fitzgerald, who appeared to have been in his late 20s, had been living in a cave in a remote hollow "quite some time," Burns said. He was believed to have been originally from Washington, D.C. The warrant was to have him examined by doctors to determine if he should be committed, Burns said.

Legionnaire hotel 'dies'

Philadelphia — The lobby swarmed with old friends and seating was by reservation only in the dining rooms. But no one registered Thursday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. It was the final day for the hotel, the last known victim of legionnaires' disease.

"It was always this way before the rumor got out and killed us," Anna Taggart, head of elevator services at the Bellevue for 43 years. "We never knew we had so many friends. Some of our close friends are coming in and giving us our Christmas presents early."

For 72 years, the stately hotel on Broad Street hosted princes and presidents, politicians and movie stars and the socially elite. Then, in July of this year, it hosted a state American Legion convention.

Twenty-nine persons who had contact with that convention died within a few weeks of a mysterious ailment and 151 others were hospitalized.

Hearst's bail posted

LOS ANGELES — Patricia Hearst's father posted $500,000 bail Thursday and a state judge said he assumed that a federal jurist in San Francisco would release the young heiress from custody.

Superior Court Judge William Ritz said he would notify the Metropolitan Correctional Center at San Diego that Miss Hearst can be released if the federal judge agrees.

England deports ex-CIA agent

LONDON — In a rare move, the British government said Wednesday it plans to deport Philip Agee, a former U.S. Central Intelligence Agency operative who became a vehement critic of the CIA after quitting the agency.

A government spokesman said Home Secretary Merlyn Rees had moved for deportation of Agee after considering information indicating that the nine-year CIA veteran has "maintained regular contacts harmful to the security of the United Kingdom with foreign intelligence officers."

The spokesman also said Agee "has been and continues to be involved in disseminating information harmful to the security of the United Kingdom," as well as helping others to obtain such information for publication.

Agee, 41, responded that "the allegations are totally false." He contended the move was prompted by the United States and aimed to block him from publishing a second book revealing CIA secrets.

The rarity of the deportation step was believed to reflect the seriousness with which the government views the cases of Agee and Mark Hosenball, an American reporter for the London Evening Standard. The move to oust Hosenball on similar grounds was disclosed Tuesday.

Gilmore returns to state prison

SALT LAKE CITY—Condemned killer Gary Gilmore, pale but defiant, returned to state prison and was cheered by fellow inmates Thursday after two days at a hospital following his suicide attempt.

His girlfriend, Nicole Barrett, regained consciousness for the first time since they took sleeping pills Tuesday in an apparent suicide pact. Her condition was upgraded from critical to serious. She walked with assistance and was visited by relatives.

Mrs. Barrett, 20, was described as disoriented and confused. Dr. Richard A. Call, medical director at the Utah Valley Hospital in Provo, said there was no evidence of brain damage "but in her state you can't do a thorough, complete exam."

Gilmore had been sentenced to die before a firing squad at 8 a.m. last Monday for the murder of a motel clerk in a robbery attempt four months ago, but Gov. Calvin Rampton delayed the execution pending a review of the sentence by the state Parole Board.

Gilmore has repeatedly asked the courts to allow him to face the firing squad as soon as possible because he does not want to spend the rest of his life in prison.

East Germans dissent

BERLIN—Open dissidence has broken out in Communist East Germany at a level not seen since the tumult of the 1950s.

For the first time ever, a group of East German intellectuals has formally called on the government to reverse a hardline position in expelling popular balladeer Wolf Biermann and revoking his East German citizenship.

The satirical ballads of Biermann, an avowed if unorthodox Communist, have long irked East German leaders.

Some Western observers speculated the East German authorities were launching a new wave of repression against individual expression.

Biermann's clergyman's burning himself to death in political protest last August and official actions against two writers in recent weeks. One was expelled from the country and the other from the East German Writers' Association.

CCTV quits taping games

All taping of Marshall's football games by closed circuit television (CCTV) has ceased, according to Karl F. Hill, Jr., producer-director for CCTV.

However, WEJS Cablevision will continue to air Herd games, with Ellis Johnson and Charles Foster.

The Herd games will be shown on cablevision channels in Point Pleasant, Ceredo-Kenova, Milton, St. Albans, Cedar Grove, Montgomery, and Ashland and Catlettsburg, Kentucky.

The reasons for the stoppage are numerous, Hill said, citing "no cooperation from the athletic department," lack of funds in the budget and the poor condition of the equipment.

Hill said Joseph H. McMullen, director of athletics, would not give CCTV the needed space to tape the games because he felt that CCTV was not giving Marshall football enough publicity to justify that space.

McMullen, in a telephone interview, said the games that had been taped had not been shown at all. Closed Circuit Broadcasts are done on a delayed basis, like CCTV had done with last season's basketball games.

"I assumed the games were being shown," McMullen said. "It was a little bit of a shame. We need coverage if we're providing space."

None of the games had been shown, Hill said, because they were not good enough to be shown. "The students who did the taping had never worked a camera before, so we were using the football games as a learning lab for them," he said. "We had no commitment to show them."

"We want to take care of our own first," McMullen said. "We provided a box for WMUL radio and they only used it to sit in out of the rain. We squeezed three radio announcers into one box in order to make room. We have demands for more space than we have," McMullen concluded.

"We were given two booths in the pressbox, one of which was intended for WMUL radio, but was not being used," Hill said. "We need that much space to do what we have to do right."
