Credit/no credit decision delayed by committee

By BELINDA ANDERSON
Managing Editor

Right back where they started from. That's where the Academic Planning and Standards Committee is after an hour of deliberation Thursday that rescinded its Oct. 12 proposal requiring a minimum grade of "C" for passing courses taken credit/no credit.

The CR/NCR policy now stands as stated in the Marshall University undergraduate catalog, with which the committee first started its review after receiving complaints that the system was being abused.

And, after postponing action at three subsequent meetings, the committee still has not agreed on what should be done about CR/NCR. Members have decided to contemplate their discussion and data distributed at the meeting before hopefully making a final decision Feb. 13.

The CR/NCR system was initiated in April, 1973, to allow students to take classes outside their majors without affecting their grade point averages.

Complaints of students abusing the system to "slide by" in classes with a minimum of effort prompted the committee in October to consider such alternatives as eliminating CR/NCR, allowing students to use the option only on electives, or require a minimum grade of "C" for credit.

To keep the option from being completely abolished, proponents, including student representative Terri McNeer, voted for the latter measure, which passed 7-3.

However, following protest by both faculty members and students, the committee decided to review its decision but failed to take concrete action in November and December.

At Thursday's meeting, Dr. James E. Joy, associate professor of biological sciences, presented statistics that showed five percent of students enrolled for CR/NCR earned As and 16 percent Bs, while 19 percent of those enrolled for a letter grade earned As and 26 percent Bs. Nineteen percent taking CR/NCR classes received Ds while six percent of the other group received the same grade.

"It is evident that students that enrolled for CR/NCR are getting poorer grades than students enrolled for the more conventional grades," Joy reported. "Still, the information is of little value, because there is really nothing to indicate if good students are taking courses CR/NCR and relaxing through them, or poorer students are using the option to avoid receiving grades that would otherwise count on their grade point average."

"If they're using it to slide by, I'm not sure they are," Joy continued, pointing out that many don't receive credit from classes taken CR/NCR. He also suggested that many of the low grades may be due to students who are using the option to explore subjects they would normally avoid.

Confusion surrounds language policy

Delayed graduation?

By KIMA JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Mike Cherry has a problem. Cherry, a Turnersville, N.J., senior and Parthenon sports editor, had planned to graduate from Marshall next December. But now he thinks his graduation might have to wait.

Cherry has just realized that he has not fulfilled the foreign language requirements necessary for graduation, and it might be a while before he has a chance.

To fulfill their requirements for a foreign language, students in the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Science must complete 204, according to Emory W. Carr, chairman of the modern languages department.

"It's three to 12 hours, depending on previous high school experience," Carr explained. "If the student has not had any high school experience, he has to take 101 to 204 — 12 hours."

The full sequence for a foreign language consists of four classes numbered 101, 102, 203, and 204. Each year of high school experience in a foreign language is equivalent to one semester in college, Carr said.

If a student has had one year of high school foreign language, he may omit 101 from his sequence at MU. If he has had two years experience, he may take only 203 and 204. All students trying to fulfill the requirements must take 204.

Cherry took Spanish 101R, and 102R, last year and passed both classes. This semester he signed up for Spanish 204R, without having taken Spanish 203R.

Cherry said he learned of the requirement upon arrival in class Tuesday from his instructor.

"When I got into 204 on Tuesday, we were told to fill out these little cards giving our background," he said. "Then we were told there's a requirement of a previous three years of a high school language. I had two."

Cherry needs to take Spanish 203R and 204R to fulfill his requirements for a foreign language. However, he cannot take 204R until he has had 203R, and Spanish 203 in reading tract is not offered during the spring semester.

If he waits until fall to take 203R, Cherry cannot take 204R until the spring. He had planned to graduate in December.

"Financially I can't afford to hang around that long," said Cherry. "Right now it's a burden to me. If things don't work out, and I can't get a correspondence course (to fulfill the requirements), I'll drop out within a week. I don't intend to hang around Marshall an extra semester just to take Spanish."

Cherry said he has discussed his problem with Carr and Dr. Warren G. Lutz, assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Cherry is not alone. Lutz said a few other students preparing for graduation do not understand the necessary requirements for a foreign language until it is too late.

"These people become very vocal about it when it happens," he said, "because it's an emotional thing. They're up to their last semester."

Dr. E. S. Hanrahan, dean of the College of Science, noted that there were approximately the same percentage of high grades in both CR/NCR and regular classes.

Dr. George Harbold, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, commented, "I know some students abuse the system," but added that statistics did not show it to be extensive.

In a previous meeting, Dr. Paul D. Hines, vice president of the Community College, suggested the system might be improved by giving the letter grade A or B earned in a CR/NCR course, credit for a C or D, and no credit for an F. He explained it would encourage students to work for a higher grade if possible.

Students sometimes do not understand what is necessary to fulfill their foreign language requirements because it was only necessary to have credit for Spanish 204 with or without previous experience up until the 1975-76 term, according to Carr.

Until then prerequisites were only recommended for the Spanish sequence, he said.

"We have students who have come to Marshall under that catalog and can do it," he explained.

Carr said he did not know of any students who have graduated from MU under catalogs after that year without taking the necessary prerequisites for 204.

"If I had found out about such a situation, I would have tried to prevent it," he said. "I can't say that it's not happened because there are slip-ups. I've heard rumors, but I've not been given any names so I can't check it," he added.

Carr said the rumors of students graduating without having all the prerequisites necessary have led other students to believe that it is possible to do so.

Co-op

New funds may enlarge work experience program

By CHERYL BOYES
Wire Editor

Federal funds are being requested to establish a full-time cooperative work program which would help students gain on-the-job experience related to their major.

Corey Lock, assistant professor of curriculum and foundations, said $91,515 is needed to enable the program to become "full-blown." Lock has written a report explaining why the program would be beneficial and applied for the money the second week of January.

The co-op entails students leaving school for a semester to work at a job in their field of interest, he said. This would give the co-op worker exposure to the job, but it would also help the student decide if that field is one for which he is suited, according to the report. The program would be beneficial to students in other ways, such as allowing them to earn money to help finance their education, and providing a possible place of future employment, according to the report.

Lock said curriculum for the co-op student would have to be altered, so the student would have the necessary background before entering the job. As a result, the required courses would become more realistic and compatible with real job demands, thus giving the co-op student an extra advantage.

Marshall would also benefit from the program, Lock said. The faculty members would be able to see the newer trends which occur in the business sector and would have more interaction with those in the field, he said.

Enrollment would also be enhanced as a co-op work program would attract students who would otherwise enter the job market, the report said.

Further, the program would be advantageous to businesses in the area. Lock said business personnel would be able to see the people who are currently on the job market, and they would participate in the training process of potential employees. Businesses would also be able to employ labor at a lesser

Opinions vary on booze bill

By TAMMY TUPIS
Reporter

Two campus clergymen and the Huntington Police Chief agree that the legal drinking age in West Virginia should be raised to 21. Most students believe the 18-year-old drinking age should stay the same.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union is sponsoring a bill in the legislature which would change the drinking age from 18 back to 21.

Ottie Adkins, Huntington Police Chief, believes the age should be raised. "Statistics show that a larger part of serious crimes involve alcohol. Some 18-year-olds are mature enough to handle it, but most aren't. Percentage wise, 18-year-olds give more problems than 21-year-olds."

Dr. Frank L. Harrison, Jr., Campus Christian Center, is in favor of bringing the drinking age back to 21. "I respect the decision of each individual to choose whether to partake or not; however, when the use and abuse of this drug affects the lives of others then I am in favor of restrictions and heavy penalties for such irresponsibility, especially when it occurs behind the wheel of a car."

Zachariah C. (Jim) Fugate, Campus Christian Center, is in favor of raising the drinking age to 21. Fugate said that 18-year-olds "think they are mature enough" to drink.

Sharon C. Pleasant, 20, is against the bill and believes she is mature enough to drink. "If I wanted to drink I'm mature enough to."

"If I am old enough to take on responsibilities, then I am old enough to drink," Susan M. Sierer, 19, said.

George Walden, 25, is against the bill. "Seems contradictory to have the right to vote, but not the right of responsibility and drinking is a responsibility."

"If the drinking age is raised, people will sneak to do it," commented Debbie Hill, 17.

Sieve Simms, 19, believes it is wrong to get drunk and be destructive, but alright to drink. "People who fight for this country, should be able to do what they want."

Terry Deane Ley, 20, is against the bill. "If the drinking age is raised, then bars would have to give back memberships. It would cause problems for bars. Kids waiting to turn 18 will have to wait again. There will be a lot more face I.D.'s."

"If a person has responsibility of voting, they should be able to choose whether to drink or not," said Kathy Woodrum, 19.

Pro fine arts degree awaits BOR approval

By DIANE SLAUGHTER
Staff Writer

Marshall students wanting a non-teaching job in theater, music, or the visual arts may soon be able to earn a professional degree if the proposed Bachelor of Fine Arts degree program is approved by the West Virginia Board of Regents.

Dr. George Harbold, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said the proposal sent to the Board of Regents is the result of a long series of efforts by the music, art and theater departments. "These people have combined everything into one package with options and alternatives for the students," he said.

"The proposal had to go through the committee structure here and received unanimous support from the college curriculum committee and the Academic Planning and Standards Committee. It then went to President Hayes before being sent to the Board of Regents for their consideration," he said.

Dr. Dorothy R. Johnson, chairman of the speech department, said the proposed degree program could have a positive effect for those students interested in a non-teaching degree in theater. The Bachelor of Fine Arts degree can give students interested in theater a stronger concentration in theater classes, she said. She added that the program can also provide a better background for those students wishing to pursue a Master's degree.

"This could be a progressive step to attract students who have previously been going out of state because they felt they had no alternative," Johnson added.

June Kilgore, associate professor of art, said she thinks it is imperative for Marshall to get the proposed degree program because the present degree is inadequate. "Right now, the present degree does not offer enough hours in art and students cannot enter graduate school," she said. "The new Bachelor of Fine Arts degree will help students meet the requirements to enter graduate school."

Kilgore said she thinks the new program, if approved, will allow Marshall to compete with other schools, both in and out of state, that have a quality professional program.

Dr. Wendell Kumlien, chairman of the music department, said he thinks the proposed degree program will also have positive effects for the music department. "This degree could give students three options other than teaching," he said. "They can specialize in professional performance, music history and literature, or music theory and composition," Kumlien said.

Two proposed programs to be studied by Regents

By Staff, Associated Press

The feasibility of establishing a law school and re-establishing degree programs in engineering at Marshall will be studied during the next five years, but Board of Regents Chancellor Ben L. Morton doubts the state needs another law school.

Proposals for these studies were included in a five-year statement of role and scope for MU. The statement was presented to the BOR in Charleston Tuesday by university President Robert B. Hayes.

The report calls for a feasibility study of the re-establishment of associate and baccalaureate level degrees in engineering to be conducted. A study of the feasibility of offering a first professional level program in law is also proposed.

"It'll be my recommendation that either the regents, our staff or even an outside consultant make the study, if the five-year plan is approved," Morton said, adding he understood there is considerable pressure in the Huntington area for Marshall to start a new law school.

The only law school in the state is at West Virginia University.

Although Morton said he was not ruling out a second law school, "It's my personal view right now that judging by the number of lawyers we have in the pipeline, and going to a manpower-need basis, a second law school is highly questionable."

Marshall's engineering program, which was dropped, was never adequately funded and did not have proper facilities, resulting in a lack of student interest, according to Dr. E. S. Hanrahan, dean of the College of Science.

Hanrahan said he feels the lack of an engineering program causes many local students interested in engineering to attend other colleges or universities which do offer the courses.

Drinking proposal needs to be defeated

A bill currently in the West Virginia State Legislature would raise the legal drinking age back to 21.

That's right. The Women's Christian Temperance Union, the legislature is now considering the possibility of disallowing a 20 year old adult to consume alcohol. Any alcohol, even beer.

If that sounds like an absurd notion, it's because it is. To even think that the legislature could consider such a thought is beyond the logical realms of reason.

The idea of a legal age for drinking is only practical. Restrictions are necessary everywhere. But if a legal age for anything is to be established, 18 is the only practical possibility.

After the tragedies of Vietnam and Korea, it is amazing that any American institution can shamelessly ask 18 year olds to give up their rights and still fight and die for the country which took them away.

It would be equally outrageous to tell an 18, 19 or 20 year old who holds the right to vote in a democratic system of government, that he cannot drink 3.2 percent beer.

The reasoning behind the proposal given by the WTCU is simple rationalization of outdated, outrageous thinking.

For instance, the idea that raising the drinking age to 21 will keep the "minors" from drinking is a dream. One look at the disastrous prohibition movement of the '20's will serve as damning evidence to the cause of the women's union.

Prohibition, also a brainstrom of the union, showed clearly that once you give something to people that they enjoy, no laws can take it away.

Anyone who is the least bit familiar with human nature knows that when people want something badly enough, they find a way of getting it. If the women's union would care to debate that, let them try to convince someone other than themselves that there is no illegal drinking going on right now by persons below the 18 year age limit.

Another argument the union is using in it's futile effort to change human nature, is the claim that raising the drinking age will lower the number of highway fatalities related to drunk drivers.

Undoubtedly, it will. But to what, if any, significant extent? Surely no more than raising the legal driving age to 18.

The legislature will soon be forced to make a decision about the future of the bill. If justice is to be served, the proposal should be defeated soundly in the first round of voting.

Parthenon needs benefit from proposed fee hike

Thanks to a proposal by the Student Fees Committee, some of the heat may be taken off of The Parthenon budget next year.

The committee recommended in it's last meeting in December that four student fees would be increased starting in the fall of '79.

The Parthenon, which has not received a rate increase in 11 years, would receive an increase of one dollar, from $3 to $4 per semester. The increase will amount to approximately $11,000 of badly needed funds to keep up with rising production costs.

This year, with funds running short, The Parthenon staff has been restricted from almost all of the regular travel that is necessary for top quality coverage of athletic and other events.

Staffers have worked for nearly non-existent salaries, and the lack of money has caused the paper to go without the badly needed services of an adviser.

Also included in the proposal by the committee were fee increases for the aging University Theatre, Student Center Operations and an adjustment in the funds received by Health Services, which would require part time students to pay the same amount as full time students for health services.

The proposal is now in the hands of President Robert B. Hayes for approval before final approval by the Board of Regents.

Hopefully, Hayes will act quickly in approving the proposal and the BOR will follow suit.

But for now, it's hats off to the Student Fees Committee for bailing out The Parthenon and the other services which were in desperate need of fee increases.

Cambodians bombed

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnamese-piloted American and Soviet warplanes darted over the skies of Cambodia on Thursday, bombing and strafing remnants of the Cambodian army still resisting the huge Vietnamese invasion force, analysts reported. Units of the Cambodian army reportedly were engaged in ground battles in widespread areas of the country with the Vietnamese and their Cambodian rebel proteges.

name forces assaulted the Cambodian island bastion of Kong, launched heavy air strikes against two embattled coastal port areas and were faced with resistance in at least half a dozen areas in Cambodia. Vietnamese troops, supported by gunboats, reportedly made their attack from the seaward side of Kong, located just off the coast of southwestern Cambodia.

Bay to pound onshore resistance and brought reinforcements to the area along Highway 4, Phnom Penh's 125-mile route to the sea, the sources said.

Fighting also was reported at Kampot, further along the coast toward Vietnam from Kompong Som; Sisophon in the northwest; near the 11th-century Buddhist temple of Preah Vihear in the remote north; around the provincial capital of Monduliri in the northeast, and southeastern Takeo province.

The Vietnamese moved large gunboats into Kompong Som

Tanks used in Iran riot

TEHRAN, Iran — Armored troops ran down protesters' cars with their tanks, royalist gangs rampaged in the streets and guerrillas attacked from across the Iraqi border Thursday as Iran searched for a way out of its political limbo.

Between seven and 21 persons were reported killed and more than a dozen others wounded in bloody fighting across the country.

"Because of the chaos, the nation is headed for a new type of dictatorship," Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar declared in a nationwide broadcast address Thursday night.

Bakhtiar's shaky government, desperately trying to assert control, was dealt a new blow Thursday by Ayatollah Khomeini, moral leader of the movement that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country. Bakhtiar had sent an envoy to try to negotiate with the exiled Khomeini in France, but the Moslem holy man rejected any discussion of a reconciliation.

rebuff of President Carter's appeal to Khomeini Wednesday to give the new government "a chance to succeed."

The worst bloodshed Thursday was in the western oil-belt town of Dezful.

The enraged soldiers battered protesters' autos with their tanks, the sources said. They said six persons were killed and more than a dozen injured. Others said as many as 20 persons had died.

W.Va. coal to provide fuel abroad

CHARLESTON — Two major coal companies have signed contracts to provide 1.4 million tons of coal to an Algerian government steel mill, and much of the coal will come from West Virginia.

Consolidation Coal Co. has contracted to provide 600,000 tons of West Virginia Coal over the next three years.

A.T. Massey Coal Co. has signed contracts to deliver 880,000 tons, much of it from West Virginia, over the next three years. A company spokesman said the order would be made up "predominantly" of West Virginia coal.

'The Duke' presently not chemotherapy candidate

LOS ANGELES — John Wayne, who is battling cancer of the lymph nodes, will not be subjected to chemotherapy "at this time," a hospital spokesman said Thursday.

Bernard Strohm, administrator of the UCLA Medical Center, said no decision on further treatment has been made but "at this time chemotherapy is not planned, as I understand it."

Chemotherapy, or the use of drugs for treatment, often causes severe side effects, including nausea and loss of hair.

Strohm said Wayne, 71, is walking briefly and beginning to eat soft foods. Doctors still plan to release him from the hospital in about 10 days, Strohm said. Doctors announced Wednesday that Wayne, who has already lost part of his lung and his entire stomach to cancer, has cancer cells in lymph nodes near the stomach.

Strohm said doctors are consulting on whether more surgery is needed.

The new cancer was found by a pathological report on body tissues tested after last week's surgery, Strohm told a news conference.

Seagrams receives indictments against two former executives

CHARLESTON — A federal grand jury indicted Joseph E. Seagram & Sons Thursday on 12 felony charges alleging the company bribed former state liquor commissioner J. Richard Barber with cases of liquor.

Also indicted were two Ohio men, identified as Seagram vice presidents at the time the alleged bribery took place, from December 1972 to September 1976.

The indictment charged Seagram, an Indiana corporation that has offices in New York City, with 10 counts of mail fraud. The company also was charged with two counts of interstate transportation to promote unlawful activity.

The indictment charges that Seagram approved withdrawal forms sent to it by the state Alcohol Beverage Control Commission. The forms said Seagram had withdrawn a total of 161 cases of liquor worth $6,479 from the state warehouse for use by its salesmen.

Corrections

The movie The Cheap Detective will be shown at 7:30 in the Multi-purpose room of the Memorial Student Center instead of at 8 p.m. in Old Main Auditorium as was stated in the Strohm's calendar on page four of Thursday's Parthenon. William Windon will appear at 8 p.m. in Old Main.

Randle busy recruiting, filling coaching positions

By MIKE CHERRY
Sports Editor

In trying to catch up with new head football coach Sonny Randle, one can appreciate how the cartoon coyote feels in his futile pursuit of the roadrunner. Since assuming the head position after the Herd's final game Nov. 18, Randle has spent about as much time in his office each day as Woody Hayes did in press conferences following Ohio State losses. Much of Randle's time has been occupied in recruiting a new coaching staff and players to Huntington. Evidently, Randle's efforts have not been a waste of time. He said he has signed nine recruits, although he said he did not wish to name them until sometime next month. Randle has also filled five of the seven coaching positions under him.

While Randle is scouring east of the Mississippi River for players, thus far he has concentrated on two states in finding the five assistants hired. From Virginia he brought in defensive end coach Waverly Brooks, linebacker coach Jim Grobe, and offensive line coach Mark Hunter. From North Carolina State in Raleigh, N.C., Randle persuaded Jim Cavanaugh and Bruce Johnson to be his coordinators—Cavanaugh on offense, Johnson on defense. Both were members of the staff that coached the Wolfpack to a victory in this season's Tangerine Bowl. "This is as fine a group as can be put together," Randle said. "To get two off the North Carolina State staff we must be something right. We couldn't have gotten a better staff if we had spent three months searching." Brooks, 31, was the first coach hired. He worked with Randle two years at the University of Virginia. Cavanaugh and Johnson were hired Jan. 4. Prior to going to N. C. State, both had experience in the Southern Conference. Hunter, 24, served on the staff of conference rival VMI last season. He will also head the weight training program under Randle. Grobe, 26, was hired Jan. 11 and is the most recent addition to the staff. A former player for Huntington High and the University of Virginia, he served as a graduate assistant coach under Randle there. Like their bosses, all five assistant coaches have been out of town since Monday afternoon.

Herd hopes to gain SC wins on road

The Smoky Mountains are one of America's favorite vacation spots, but the basketball team is not counting on sight-seeing as criteria for a successful trip there. This weekend the Herd will travel to two conference foes in those famous hills. Saturday they will face Western Carolina in Cullowhee, N.C., and Monday finds them battling the Mocsians of the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. "These games are big ones," head coach Stu Aberdeen said. "Every conference game is big. We've got to repay the bank because we lost two conference games at home. We have a deficit of two to make up." Marshall is sixth in the conference standings while Western and UT-Chattanooga are tied for fourth with 1-2 records. Last season, the Herd suffered close losses on both opponents' home courts while winning in Huntington. "Both of these teams could easily finish in the top four of the conference," Aberdeen said. "They both play before good support at home." The Herd has enough trouble on the road without the good support. They are currently 0-7 away from Memorial Field House. Western Carolina enters the game 7-6, not including Thursday's game against Furman. They have already equaled last year's win total. "We've had an up and down year," said Western coach Steve Cottrell. "We are a young team. We are letting the players grow with the program." UT-Chattanooga owns a 7-1 home court record, its only loss coming from conference co-leader Furman.

NCAA decisions affect MU sports

By MIKE CHERRY
Sports Editor

There were some significant decisions made last week at the 73rd annual NCAA convention in San Francisco, Calif., that will affect the status or proposed status of several sports at Marshall, according to Athletic Director Joe McMullen. McMullen attended the convention on Jan. 8-10. Among the items on the agenda were decisions that concerned the Marshall rifle team, other "minor" sports and special treatment of the student/athlete. Another topic that received a lot of attention, but was only discussed informally, was the possibility of a post-bowl game playoff to determine a national football champion, McMullen said. As far as the Marshall rifle team, a motion was passed to have a 1979-80 NCAA national championship in that sport. One reason for McMullen's support of this item was that the newly-formed rifle team could now count as one of the 12 sports needed for Marshall to compete as a IA football team. McMullen said this way Marshall would not have to add a sport just to keep among the football elite. The first rifle championship will just be a pilot program with the convention to vote again next year. Marshall will begin its first season of rifle competition this year. Another plus for Marshall was the failure of an item to pass successfully through the balloting, according to McMullen. The convention defeated an amendment that would do away with the 12-sport option for a IA team. This would have meant that to maintain IA status, a school would either have to have a 30,000 seat stadium or average 17,000 in attendance. Marshall's Fairfield Stadium has a capacity for 18,000 and the largest single crowd ever was 16,724. Yet another important step for the smaller IA schools, such as Marshall, occurred when the convention agreed to allow a school to ask consideration from the NCAA Council that one sport in which the NCAA does not conduct a championship be one of the required 12. McMullen said.

Injury inspires Labanowski

For most people, a severe muscle strain would be enough to keep them from any strenuous exercise, especially the brutal body wars between major college basketball players. For most people, that would be enough. But for Ken Labanowski, it is only an incentive to play harder. At the end of last season, the East Norwich, N.Y., sophomore suffered a severe muscle strain in his right shoulder. Apparently, the shoulder was completely healed by the start of pre-season practice. However, the 6'-7" high postman re-injured his shoulder during a pre-season drill. Now Labanowski must wear a protective brace to prevent over-extension of the muscle. "The brace restricts me some when I am playing," Labanowski said. "I had to start using my left hand more than usual. I can't follow through my shots as much as I would like to, but I have to adjust to the situation by hustling more." The shoulder will probably not get any better without a sufficient period of rest, Labanowski said. However, getting some rest is the last thing Labanowski has in mind for the present. "No way am I going to take myself out and rest my shoulder. I would rather play hurt than not play at all."

Gals attempt to break streak

Coach Donna Lawson says she hopes the Green Gals will break their two-game losing streak this weekend when they play Miami of Ohio and Western Michigan. The women's basketball team, which is now 8-8, will play Miami at 7 p.m. tonight and Western Michigan at 7 p.m. Saturday in Gullickson Hall. Miami goes into tonight's game with a 4-4 record and will be greeted by what Lawson said she hopes is a faster paced offensive attack. "We are planning to move forward Paula Hatten (Catlettsburg, Ky. sophomore) out to the guard position more often to take advantage of her height and speed in getting the ball into the offensive end. I want to get the ball into the front-court before the defense has a chance to set up," Lawson said.

The tentative starting line-up for the weekend games is Mary Lopez, Parkersburg senior and team captain; Hatten; Tammie Green, Somerset, Ohio, freshman; Becky Williamson, Braeholm junior; and Sandra Fullen, Springfield, Ohio, freshman. Western Michigan, led by Pat Charity, a 6'0 junior from Kentwood, Mich., will come to Huntington with a 5-4 record. Marshall lost to Michigan 85-65 last year and Lawson said she expected a good game from that team again this season. Tonight's game will be followed by Western Michigan laying Morris Harvey at 9 p.m. and Saturday's game will be preceded by Miami playing Morris Harvey College at 5 p.m. in Gullickson.

Swimmers' winning record faces fight

The Marshall University swim team will have its undefeated record challenged today at WVU and again on Monday at MU in a meet with Ohio University. Marshall is 2-0 thus far with wins over Appalachian State, 80-35, and Youngstown State, 71-42. West Virginia University is also 2-0. Compared to the teams MU has competed against so far, WVU is quite awesome, according to Coach Bob Saunders. WVU is quite strong in the distance event with John Havlik and Ed Denny, he said, and Havlik is also good in the butterfly. Saunders said that WVU has double power.

"Where we have one good swimmer in an event, they have two good butterfly swimmers, two good breaststrokers, two good distance swimmers, and so on," said Saunders. The MU team, according to Saunders, will be counting on swimmers such as Tim Nelson, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., freshman; Steve Biron, Clearwater, Fla., senior; Brian Ihaen, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., sophomore; Randy Nutt, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., sophomore; and Mark Sheridan, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., junior. The meet with Ohio University will be 5 p.m. in Gullickson on Monday.

Timers needed for meet

Timers are needed for the swim meet Monday with Ohio University. Approximately 14 timers are needed. Persons wishing to assist should be at the pool in Gullickson by 4:45 p.m.

Softball team to organize Tuesday

Anyone interested in playing for the women's fast-pitch softball team should attend a meeting on Tuesday at 3 p.m. in Gullickson Hall Room 123. If unable to make this rendezvous, one should contact coach Linda Holmes in her office at Gullickson Hall Room 116B.

...but Iranian students recall shah's reign

By JEANETTE ROWSEY
Reporter

The shah's departure from Iran Tuesday was cause for celebration in Tehran and welcome news for at least four Iranians at Marshall, who also believe the shah will not return to his home country.

The concurring views of four members of Marshall's community reflected contempt for the shah, opposition to the U.S. government's support of Iran's leaders, concern for family and friends in Tehran, and uncertainty about the future of Iran's government.

All but one of those interviewed asked not to be identified for reasons ranging from harassment at school to fear of deportation from their home country. One student explained, "As little as five months ago I would have been afraid to say anything to anybody."

The Iranians said the shah has developed a corrupt government and has put his own interests before those of the Persian people. They oppose the imprisonment and torture of political prisoners and the lack of free speech because of SAVAK, the imperial secret police. One woman called the shah a "cruel dictator." Another student said that he supported the shah until he heard of neighbors who had been killed by the shah's army.

The students said they thought the new civilian government, to be headed by National Front leader Bakhtiar could not be good for the Iranian people because the shah approved it. A Tehran junior said that in the past the government had made so-called "reforms," but "has done no good for the country." The Iranians felt that the people should have a voice in selecting a government.

The Iranian students denounced President Carter and the U.S. government for continued support of the shah, and said they believed Carter's stand on human rights was hypocritical. One woman said that Carter's support for Iran's leader was "against the will of (millions of) Iranians. If that is not direct intervention, I don't see what is."

Now that Sha Mohammad Reza Pahlavi has left Iran, the interviewed Iranians do not think he will be able to return. The future of Iran's government is now questionable, and although the Islamic religion united the Iranian people in protesting the present rule, one student said that an Islamic republic ruling Iran was not probable. With Iran's future questionable now, one student commented that for now, "the power is in the street."

Proposal could save Cranberry area

The future of the Cranberry Backcountry has been on the mind of Marshall Student Body President Ed Hamrick and other members of the Pro-Cran group for a long time.

Pro-Cran, founded by Hamrick, is one of several organizations involved in the long, often bitter, struggle to protect the backcountry from mining, timbering and other activities which would destroy its wilderness characteristics. Part of the huge Monongahela National Forest in West Virginia, the backcountry is a favorite area of hikers and campers.

A proposal announced by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on Jan. 4 would set aside 15.1 million acres of public forest lands in 38 states and Puerto Rico to the nation's wilderness system.

If Congress approves the announced plans, it would mean a victory for Pro-Cran in its long fight to preserve the backcountry.

The 1978 session of the legislature put a two-year moratorium on mining in the backcountry which expires at the end of 1980. If the Congress does not pass the proposal, then action can still be taken by the state legislature, according to Hamrick.

Housing office has new chief

Director assumes duties

The housing office has a new chief. Raymond Welty officially assumed his new duties Tuesday as Marshall University's Director of Housing. Welty is filling a vacancy that was created when former director Robert Yeager resigned last summer.

Welty, of McKeesport, Pa., did his undergraduate work a few miles north of his hometown at Slippery Rock State College. It was at Slippery Rock that he first became interested in housing administration. Welty said. He worked for two years as a resident adviser and became a head resident adviser in his senior year (a position that is comparable to a dormitory resident director at Marshall).

Welty received a Masters of Education degree in 1975 from the University of Miami Coral Gables, Fla.

After obtaining his Master's, Welty said he stayed on at the University of Miami as an area co-ordinator in charge of living arrangements for about 1200 students. In 1977 he was promoted to assistant director of housing in charge of housing services.

Welty said when he came up for an interview he was impressed with the school and the friendliness of the people.

Welty is currently getting a first hand at the housing system at Marshall not only as director, but also from the students' viewpoints. Since arriving last Friday, Welty has been staying in Twin Towers and eats frequently in the cafeteria. When asked his opinion of the cafeteria food, Welty replied, "Not too bad. I went back for seconds at dinner yesterday."

Welty said before he considers adding any new procedures or changes, he plans to check out the current housing system thoroughly. Welty encourages students to present not only their gripes and problems to the housing staff, but also suggestions and possible answers.
