Final TKE decision made; status in limbo until 1980

Staff Writer

The Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity charter has been suspended with the chapter being placed on affiliate status, according to Dr. Richard G. Fisher, vice president for student

The plan of action to maintain the fraternity on Marshall's campus is based on a proposal made to Marshall's administration by the TKE International organization, Fisher said.

This means that MU's TKE chapter will still be a recognized student organization, but the undergraduate operations will be placed on affiliate status. The affiliate, under the proposal, will develop programs and establish short-term and long-range goals.

During this period of affiliation, according to both Fisher and T. J. Schmitz, executive vice president of TKE International Fraternity, the group can develop a petition, based on plans and programs in operation, to be submitted to Marshall's administration and TKE International prior to May 1, 1980. Acceptance of this petition would grant full undergraduate chapter status to TKE at Marshall.

Under a six-phase program presented to Fisher by Schmitz, an advisory committee, or board of trustees, would be set up to act as a liaison between the affiliate, the Marshall administration, and TKE International headquarters.

The first phase of the program involves the organization of a core group of affiliate members. These members would be presently active TKE members. They would be chosen on an interview basis, being questioned by a representative from Tau Kappa Epsilon International, a member of the alumni board of trustees, and a member of the administration/staff of Marshall.

Each man selected will be asked to sign a letter agreeing to follow certain rules and regulations, to exemplify the ideals of Tau Kappa Epsilon, and to do his very best to assist the affiliate in all phases of operations so that full chapter status may be renewed, according to a letter from Schmitz. Those not willing to sign the letter will be placed on

The second phase of the program will be carried out simultaneously with the first phase. This phase involves the formation of an advisory committee, or board of trustees. Under the program, the committee will be composed of five to seven members, with one

This group would act as liaison between all groups involved and would have decisionmaking authority over all phases of the affiliate operation. The major intent of the board, however, is to act in an advisory

A representative from Tau Kappa Epsilon International will conduct an intensive membership drive as part of phase three, essentially controlling rush. A representative of the international fraternity will also visit the local affiliate on a regular basis.

The fourth phase of the program requires that the affiliate develop specific goals and objectives for the remainder of this year and the next academic year, a written associate member program, and an alumni program to keep the membership informed of progress

The phase also requires specific plans and methods for cooperation and involvement with the IFC in an effort to strengthen the entire Greek system. The affiliate also needs to develop a community and university service program as well as a means to insure a knowledge and understanding of the fraternity rituals.

A social calendar, a budget plan, and a review of all phases of fraternity management are also included in the fourth phase of

The fifth phase of the program requires that the affiliate report certain information to the university, the alumni board of trustees, and the International headquarters. These include a list of goals and objectives and progress being made on each, a copy of the minutes from each affiliate meeting, a budget, a copy of newsletters sent to alumni, and monthly reports required by the Tau Kappa Epsilon International.

The final phase of the program comes after the chapter has regained full chapter status. Representatives of the International will continue to work with the chapter to make sure that advances made during the affiliate stage are continually implemented.

In announcing the plan, Fisher commented, "It represents a constructive approach which will emphasize the potential for the local TKE chapter to fulfill the organization's responsibilities to represent the ideals and purposes of the fraternity and

A legislative committee leaning toward recommending passage of a bill that would reinstate the death penalty in West Virginia heard dramatic testimony pro and con Thursday.

Speaking in favor of reinstatement were seven non-legislators and three House members, two of them sponsors of bills providing death sentences for some crimes of first-degree murder. Fifteen persons spoke against reviving capital punishment, which the state abolished in 1965.

There are indications that sentiment for reinstatement of the death penalty is stronger this year, especially in the House,

"We feel it will have a positive effect on the fraternity, and as I said, the guys are very pleased with the decision. We're glad we're still here and we hope to be here for a long time," Crawford added.

Mary-Ann Thomas, associate dean for student life, said she thought Thursday's decision was a good thing for the TKE fraternity and for the Greek system.

"It demonstrates a great deal of constructive reflection upon the concerns at hand, and if there is committment to the implementation of the TKE plan it ought to work," Thomas commented.

She added that she hopes people will look forward from today and "make a go of the

Those involved in Thursday's decision seemed very positive about the outcome. The final decision on the TKE charter was reached through input from Tau Kappa Epsilon International, the Interfraternity Council recommendation, the student Life staff, Fisher, and other members of the administration.

Don Robertson, coordinator of student activities and organizations, had favorable feelings about the decision. "The final decision was carefully thought out, after considering input from many sources. We feel it is a fair and equitable decision.

"This gives TKE a chance to move on to bigger and better things," he continued. "It is a very positive decision and fair for all concerned. This was done in the best interest of the TKE chapter and the whole Greek system, because the program is an outstanding example for all Greeeks to follow."

Rhonda Egidio, adviser for student activities and organizations, said, "This is a firm decision, but a hopeful one for TKE. This could provide a foothold for the fraternity to strengthen the chapter with support from the alumni, TKE International, other fraternities, and the ad-

Assault charges dropped

By CINDY MARTIN Staff Writer

Charges have been dropped against two men accused of forcing a 20-year-old Marshall coed to submit to a prolonged sexual assault Jan. 21 at the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity house.

Charges of second-degree sexual assault were dropped against Jeffrey Plants, a Marshall graduate from Seth, and Philip Morrison, Charleston junior, Thursday, according to sources at magistrate Alvie Qualls office. A preliminary hearing, scheduled for Thursday, was not held.

Cabell County Prosecuting Attorney John C. Cummings was quoted by the Associated Press as saying, "the woman (coed) has declined further prosecution. She doesn't want to go through the harassment."

Plants said he "had expected it (the charges being dropped) to happen all along. I am not guilty and was not guilty, but the whole thing really reflected back badly on

The woman had told police she was taken to the fraternity house by a young man who escorted her to an upstairs room and then left the room. After that, police said she told them two men entered the room and forced her, using threats of violence, to have sexual intercourse and to perform unnatural acts. They said she told them although the room was dark she thought she could see other men observing the episode.

Police said they entered the case when a resident saw the coed flee, partially clad, into Seventeen witnesses had been subpoenaed by defense attorneys to testify at Thursday's hearing. The purpose of the hearing was to determine whether or not there was probable cause to hold the defendants under bond for a grand jury hearing.

Colleges may see age of lawsuits

By CATHY COOPER Reporter

The 1980s will be an age of legalism in higher education, an increasing probability of lawsuits, and more literal interpretation of rules, a West Virginia University professor of administration told Marshall faculty members Thursday.

John Andes spoke in Smith Hall on the rights and responsibilities of teachers and Andes said a faculty member is protected by the Constitution if he goes to court. He suggested that every faculty member keep a copy of the Constitution and read it oc-

A teacher's responsibilities are to give full professional effort, to know and follow written policies, to uphold the image of the institution, and to participate in the development of MU, he said. Full professional effort includes availability to students along with professional growth.

Policies, rules or regulations should be available to faculty members, Andes added. He said he "prayed" the Board of Regents' policies were available to faculty in every department chairperson's office.

Referring to Marshall's current language requirement problem, Andes said that even if students believe they were misadvised, they are responsible for knowing and reading the academic catalog and must meet its requirements before graduating. But he also added that a faculty adviser could be sued for civil damages under the Consumer Protection Act on grounds that the student lost six months salary or had to pay an extra semester's tuition.

Hearings on dismissals of teachers must be requested by the person dismissed, according to the BOR policy bulletin 36. The teacher has the right to present evidence, to cull and cross examine witnesses, the right to council and the right to have a record of the hearing, according to Andes. Teachers also have the right to appeal to the BOR and then could go to court if they are not satisfied.

A new law concerning tenure was decided in December by the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals. According to Andes, this is the only such law in the United States. It states that a faculty member in the sixth year of employment and who is denied a recommendation for tenure by the institution is entitled to know reasons for the

To uphold the image of the institution is another responsibility of a teacher. "Everywhere you go, consciously or not, people identify you with the university," Andes said. "The university has the right to expect that you conduct yourself in a manner that does not bring ridicule or disgrace upon the institution."

Student rights include the same constitutional rights as faculty members. Students also have rights to see all files on them used for educational purposes, according to the Family Rights and Privacy Act, Andes said.

Hello, fools!

Dr. Demento hosts 'hour of madness' on WMUL Clearin' up

By CHRISTY PERRY Reporter

"Hello, fools" is the greeting one hears on WMUL radio Saturday nights at 10 p.m.

Satirists and devotees of Dr. Demento are the audiences WMUL's new comedy show "Off The Wall" caters to, according to its creators. As one of the show's co-creators describes it, it is "one hour of zany madness."

The show is comprised of original comedy sketches performed by a group of Marshall students connected with the radio station. Though the debut show, which aired last Sunday, included bits from regular comedy albums, 99 percent of "Off The Wall" is original student-written

"Off The Wall" is the brainchild of Mike Hauser, White Sulphur Springs freshman, and Scott Paulsen, selfproclaimed "citizen of earth" and Chester sophomore. Hauser and Paulsen play host to the show, under the guises of the Ferncliff Brothers. "Marvin and Melvin Ferncliff are identical twins, except for their faces and bodies," Hauser

Paulsen and Hauser (Melvin and Marvin, respectively) create nearly all the show's sketches, commercials and news stories. They also want "Off The Wall" to be a forum for other creative comedians on campus. The first show included commercials and sketches contributed by non-

"There are a lot of crazy people at the radio station and around Marshall," explained Hauser. "There are a lot of people who like 'Saturday Night Live', National Lampoon,

'Animal House' . . . and that's the kind of thing we do on 'Off The Wall'." Hauser said they are always in need of fresh material because of the difficulties in writing an entire hour of funny sketches each week. The rest of the comedy troupe includes several WMUL announcers. James Perry, WMUL sports announcer, does the voice of Howard Klosterman for "Off The Wall Sports." His first assignment was to announce for a nude hockey match. Disc jockeys Ron Garten, Paul Clay and Bridget Fortney also contribute background and narrator

Continuing weekly sketches will reappear on each show. Besides "Juan Galvez" (Hauser) singing the trademark "Off De Wall" theme each week, features such as "Off The Wall News and Sports (with Huntley Brinkley and Walter Crankcase)," "Ron Daily, Secret Agent," "Drink of the Week," "MU Security Officer," and "How It was (with Raymond Masterson)," will be fresh episodes.

"Sponsors" for the first show included such products as Filler and Redneck Beer, the Amazing Grace record offer ("Bob Dylan Mocks an Orangutan") and a public service announcement from "the Rev. Sun Yung Zoon."

"We're shooting for the 'Dr. Demento' crowd," said Paulsen. The syndicated comedy/ music radio show was broadcast on WKEE Sunday nights earlier last year. Since the show has been dropped from WKEE's schedule, there is a void at that time for the show's audience, Paulsen explained.

Paulsen said the sketches are collaborative efforts, but that he and Hauser don't write scripts together. He said he writes ideas down, while Hauser often sits down with a tape recorder and creates dialogue. The show's other contributors, including Perry and Garten, add their ideas and eventually the taped show takes shape.

Paulsen said in preparation for the show, he and Hauser sit down during the week and decide on sketches to do. By Thursday or Friday, they have a good idea of what material they will use. On Saturday, they "jam," as Paulsen described it. They put the show tape together and iron out its technical problems.

"This show is students," Hauser said. "That's why we have it. We really need students' material to bring the thing off." Hauser and Paulsen stressed that "Off The Wall" welcomes students' comedy contributions.

Hauser said that anyone wanting to contribute material can leave either he or Paulsen a note in the WMUL newsroom, located in the Communications Building of Smith Hall. Hauser can also be reached at 696-4913.

"I think if you can be an off-key type of comedian, if you can cut 'the administration' down enough, people will listen and laugh," Paulsen said. He went on to say that this sort of show has been suggested before at WMUL radio, but that different management rejected it because the humor was

Pineville man charged with kidnap, murder

By the Associated Press PINEVILLE - Freddie Church was arraigned Thursday on murder and kidnapping charges in connection with an eighthour siege at a Pineville restaurant in which one man was shot to death and two others were injured.

Church, 36, was charged with one count of murder, five counts of kidnapping and two counts of malicious wounding in an appearance before Wyoming County Magistrate W.H. Blankenship. Church's wife, Nancy, 19, was arraigned on the same charges Wednesday.

Church and his wife were being held in Wyoming County Jail at $100,000 bond

They were apprehended at the Mountaineer restaurant early Wednesday after an incident in which five men were taken hostage. One, Robert Steckler, 22, of Summersville died in an area hospital.

Police said he was shot about an hour before two other hostages subdued Church, who was armed with a .22-caliber pistol.

Church was described by state police as a former mental patient. His mother, Irene Church, said he had sought help at a Huntington hospital.

Rebellion hero returns to Iran

Khomeini, the voice from afar who rocked Iran into ousting the shah, came home truimphantly from 14 years of exile Thursday. He challenged the shaky government and warned Americans and others he will cut the hands" of foreign influence over this nation.

Pandemonium welcomed the frail, white-bearded hero of the anti-shah revolution back to his homeland.

More than a million ecstatic Iranians, chanting "Alah Akhbare" "God is great", cheered the 78 year-old Moslem patriarch as he rode into Tehran after flying from France, ending his 14-year exile and climaxing a year-long protest that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi out of the country.

Khomeini immediately set the stage for a showdown with the government of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, and possibly

Public smoking may be banned

CHARLESTON - Smoking in most enclosed public places would be prohibited under the bill introduced in the Legislature

The proposed legislation declares tobacco smoke to be a nuisance and a substantial health hazard, and provides a fine of up to $100 for anyone caught smoking in proscribed places. The bill was sponsored by Del. Martha Wherle and Sens. John Boettner and Si Galperin, all D-Kanawha.

Places in which smoking whould be prohibited would include elevators, theaters, concert halls, museums, auditoriums, gymnasiums, restaurants, hospitals, public transportation, and college lecture halls.

Farmers prepare troops

A mechanized army of defiant farmers bivouaced near the Bull Run battlefield Thursday, awaiting the arrival of a 26-mile long convoy of reinforecements from West Virginia to mount another assault on Washington.

Two caravans totaling more than 600 tractors and other farm vehicles, which started out from central Texas two weeks ago, rolled into campgrounds on the outskirts of the nation's capital Wednesday night. They were flying the flags of the American Agriculture movement and protesting the plight of the farmers.

Meanwhile, another "tractorcade" which had started out in Colorado in early January and become mired in violent snowstorms as it snaked across the vast Midwest, had grown to a convoy of about 800 tractors stretching 26 miles as it reached West Virginia on Thursday.

That caravan was scheduled to stay overnight about six miles east of Morgantown. The 1,600 farmers in that caravan camped Wednesday night at St. Clairsville, Ohio, where a rally was held with members of the United Mine Workers, according to a spokesman for the American Agricultural Movement.

"The rapport that's been established with the United Mine Workers has been justremendous," he said.

Leaders of the farmers' movement were predicting that by the weekend as many as 2,000 tractors would be assembled at three campgrounds about 25 miles south of Washington, ready to roll into the streets of the capital on Monday in a demonstration twice as large alast year's protest.

Death penalty needs killed

With emotions running high due to the recent Pineville murder, it looks as if the state lawmakers are ready to reinstate capital punishment.

An upset West Virginia public is grasping the idea of a death penalty to curb the evergrowing crop of violent crimes that is becoming increasingly common in the state. And, Gov. Rockefeller has said that he would sign a death penalty bill containing "the right restrictions," if the legislation is moved to the House floor as expected.

Few would argue with the belief that crime prevention is presently ineffectual; however, cooler heads need to prevail before a decision is made to reinstate a punishment the U. S. Supreme Court long ago decided was not feasible.

The proposed bill authorizes the death penalty for first degree murder of police officers acting in the line of duty, for murder by contract, for murder of victims held for ransom, and for murder in "other aggravated circumstances," whatever that is.

Then, there is the consideration that many who murder in "aggravated circumstances," such as David Berkowitz, are declared insane and confined to a mental institution. The death penalty would not apply in these cases, so reinstatement of capital punishment would do nothing at all as a preventative measure. And, it could be argued that anyone who commits a murder could not have full control of his mental facilities. So, even if the death penalty is made mandatory for certain crimes, who's to say which criminals will be sent to mental institutions and which to their deaths?

It would seem more realistic to impose stricter, though not inhumane, punishment for certain crimes. Life imprisonment without parole is not the ideal answer, but it would certainly be better than the one being considered by the legislature. At any rate, the decision should not be made at a time like this, when feelings are running so intensely, and not necessarily rationally.

execution costly

CHARLESTON — The cost of reinstating the death penalty in West Virginia could exceed $180,000 in the first year. But Corrections Commissioner Joseph McCoy says an executioner's salary will not be among the expenses.

Death penalty

In a cost estimate prepared for public hearings before the House Judiciary Committee Thursday, McCoy said either he or the pentitentiary superintendent would be the executioner.

The committee conducted hearings on three bills to reinstate the death penalty submitted in the House of Delegates this session. A fourth bill has been introduced in the Senate.

Asked about the possibility that he would act as executioner, Superintendent Dick Mohn of the West Virginia Penitentiary at Moundsville said, "In certain cases I am not objecting to capital punishment.

Legislative leaders say the chances are good this session that a death penalty bill will be passed. Gov. Jay Rockefeller said Wednesday that he may sign such legislation.

McCoy said a new death house at the penitentiary with cells for up to 10 men as well as visitation, medical examination, witness and execution areas would cost about $125,000. He said the cost could be kept down because inmate labor could be used.

But this weekend's plunge could be considerably cooler.

Marshall's swim team defeated Wright State University, 72-40, Wednesday, and will finish the week with a dual meet against Virginia Tech Saturday at 2 p.m. in Gullickson Hall.

Coach Bob Saunders described the Virginia Tech team as the toughest competition MU has had to face since its match with West Virginia University, its only loss of the year. He said the Gobblers have a very balanced team, and MU will have to use its strongest lineup against them.

Dave Kowalski, Huntington freshman, won the individual medly event, ending up with his best personal time.

Graduate students convene

Only tour members attended a meeting of the Graduate Student Association Wednesday night.

Dorothy Harding, Huntington graduate student and secretary of the association, said that the low turn-out was due in part to the foul weather. Harding said that since adequate notice of the meeting had been posted some business was conducted. The 30-minute meeting consisted of voting on amendments to the association constitution and a proposal for a group ski trip. Harding said that the trip will cost about $20 per member.

Every graduate student on campus is a member of the organization, but Harding said she doubts if every graduate realizes this. Out of the 2,000 graduate students on campus, about 10 normally attend meetings.

The next meeting of the association is scheduled for Tuesday. Feb. 6, at 9:10 p.m. Harding said that the proposed trip and more notice hopefully will increase attendance.
