Where's the goal line?

Marshall's football field is looking more like a parking lot than gridiron these days as work is underway to install new artificial turf in time for the fall season. The old turf has been stripped away to expose a layer of asphalt— complete with potholes. The workers in the foreground are cleaning up following sandblasting of the stands in preparation for repainting.

Rate of payment for student fees will be altered

By DIANE SLAUGHTER
Staff writer

The rate of student fees paid by full-time and part-time students at Marshall University has been altered under guidelines approved May 2 by the West Virginia Board of Regents.

Under the new guidelines, full-time undergraduate students (12 or more credit hours) will still pay full institutional activity and athletic fees. Students enrolled for seven through 11 credit hours will also pay the full fees.

However, students carrying one through six credit hours will no longer pay pro-rated fees, nor will they have the option of paying only for services they desire, such as athletic events. Under the new guidelines, they will have the option of paying for a full package of services or none at all.

The system for graduate students is slightly different, since a graduate student carrying nine hours is considered full-time.

The student fees, divided into activity and athletic fees, are used to fund a wide range of programs such as the Parthenon, the Chief Justice, the Artists Series, intramural sports, intercollegiate athletics, University Theatre, student government and a number of other programs.

As a result of the guidelines, university officials are predicting a decrease in the allocations of money to most programs receiving monies from the activities fees.

Three of the areas most seriously affected by the guidelines are the Parthenon, WMUL radio and the student activities programming account. These areas received a temporary reprieve when the Board of Regents voted to exempt these areas from the guidelines for one year.

Areas where the income will be reduced beginning this fall are: Health Services, identification cards account, convocations and forums, intramurals, Human Relations Center, Student Legal Aid Office, University Theatre and Commencement account.

Carry over balances in those accounts will cover the deficits during the next year, according to Joseph C. Peters, vice president for financial affairs, but the carry over funds for the following year will be

MU arts committee to be chosen

By B. HOLROYD
Staff writer

Dr. Michael E. Cerveris, director of the new Marshall Institute for the Arts, a cultural project recently launched by the university, said he hoped to have his seven-member advisory committee named by the end of the month.

Although distinctly closed-mouthed about people he has in mind for his committee, Cerveris did say he wanted to choose people from the region, including at least one person each from the cities of Huntington, Point Pleasant, Ashland, Ky., and Ironton, Ohio. He said he did not know if any Marshall students would be named to the group.

Cerveris said the committee and his staff will use this first summer mainly for setting up the office and deciding what they want to do with the three-year $90,000 grant made available to the Marshall Foundation from private sources.

Cerveris said he felt the program is mainly for assisting the various foundations and programs concerned with what he termed the "universal arts," music, drama, dance and painting. "Providing programs as performances is not the main thrust of the group," he said, "we are not set up to produce events."

Cerveris, who is also a professor of music and chairman of the Marshall Music Department's piano division, said the committee would work with existing organizations to "establish a better liaison with the business community and emphasize the importance of the arts in their lives."

He said he had talked to the Huntington Galleries Director Roberta Emerson about ways for the school and the Galleries to work together on some projects. "The Galleries is the recognized leader of the arts in the region," Cerveris said. The MU Institute for the Arts will not be in competition with Tri-State cultural centers,

'Vanities' to open season

By B. HOLROYD
Staff writer

The stage is set. Three women are sitting before three dressing mirrors to the back, putting on make-up, cheerleading skirts, and characters appropriate to high school girls. Music from the early '60s echos over the heads of the audience, and "Vanities" begins.

The play, by Jack Heifner, is the first one of the summer season for the Marshall University Theater. The all-female cast is comprised of three Marshall students, all Huntington residents, who present glimpses into the lives of childhood chums from Texas — as popular cheerleaders in high school to popular sorority officers in college to a rather tense reunion in a New York apartment six years later.

The three actresses apparently learned their scripts well before the dress rehearsal attended by a Parthenon reporter earlier this week. A good quick speaking and response pace was in evidence, with only a few faltering lines noticeable during the two-hour long session. The third scene needed to be more spontaneous, but this problem should be ironed out by curtain time tonight. Mary Elizabeth Poindexter, junior, plays the character of Mary, the wild one of the trio. She portrays the fast blond with a flair, using her gestures well — a flick of the wrist while making a point with a cigarette, for example, keeps "Mary" from being just another high school cheerleader.

Marsha Wood Parks, senior, is Kathy, the quiet, serious brunette who plans everything. That is, everything but her own life. She is the quiet, unknown entity in the group, keeping many of her thoughts to herself.

Joanne, played by sophomore Katona Manissero, is a terrific role, and Manissero plays the red-head prude with a great deal of sensitivity. The character, who says "I've always found it better not to think," follows her philosophy — right to the very end of the play.

The play is scheduled to open tonight and run through Saturday at 8 p.m. nightly at the Old Main Auditorium on the MU campus.

Marshall students with valid identification cards will be admitted free. Reserve seat tickets for non-students are available for $2 each, in Old Main Room 107 and at the door.

Marshall gets 'raw deal'

Marshall students may be paying more for a little less next year.

The blame for this can be laid on the West Virginia State Legislature, which has allocated Marshall a sum of money which can best be described as "insufficient."

According to an article in the June 16 Huntington Advertiser, the University received less money than needed in its four main budget categories (current expenses, equipment, repairs and alterations and personal services).

Expenses over which the University has no control (called "fixed costs") will eat up a big portion of Marshall's money pie, as will inflation, which will reduce buying power.

Marshall asked the Legislature for a 16.9 percent raise in funding for current expenses, but did not receive it.

What this means, in short, is that Marshall is going to "tighten the belt." Unfortunately, that belt is already too tight.

Because of the paltry allocation, repairs and other needed maintenance will be slower, if they are even made at all.

Worse, some courses may have to be eliminated from the Marshall catalog. This hardly adds to the prestige of a University which badly needs to upgrade its academic reputation as Marshall does.

Marshall's science department has been suffering for a long time, and the lack of funds during the next year will surely sink the department deeper in its own problems. The elimination of other courses and services may deteriorate the quality of education at Marshall, and this institution cannot survive this.

Finally, as if to add insult to injury, full time student fees will be higher this year. Although this may help alleviate a few of the school's financial problems, students will still be paying more, but receiving less in terms of classes and other services.

So, as usual, the financial crisis will affect the "little people" first: the students, faculty and staff.

What the State Legislature seems to misunderstand is that education is West Virginia's only hope to compete with other states. You cannot cut corners and expect the same caliber of education as before.

There are only two universities in West Virginia, and to have at least one of them (or possibly both) running under a fiscal handicap like this is like entering a three-legged horse in the Kentucky Derby. Competition is fierce between schools in West Virginia and other states. If the quality of education declines and costs rise, what is to prevent the best minds in our state from seeking greener academic pastures elsewhere?

We do not know why Marshall did not receive a sufficient allocation. Perhaps the Legislature feels Marshall's priorities are wrong, or perhaps the money simply was not there to give. But, in any case, it seems that a terrible mistake has been made. The only way to do anything about it is to complain so that the legislators listen, and hopefully, respond.

Columnist reveals warped mail

Boy! Sometimes it ain't so easy to be as popular and wonderful as I am! I mean, I go home for two weeks and now you should see all the fan mail that just literally crams my payola-besmirched mail box. (It's a small metal receptacle in Smith Hall marked "PLACE LITTER HERE").

Anyway, since it's almost DEADLINE time, and I am having trouble writing a proper journalistic story in "inverted pyramid" form (my writing usually resembles an "inverted sphinx"), I would like to present some of these letters written by my fans (and my air conditioners and space heaters).

Eat the press
Humor by Tony Fitzgerald

Dear Mr. Fitzgerald,
BEGIN TRANSMISSION: I am a big fan of yours and would like to meet you someday, even though I am a computer. I would like to tell a joke. BEGIN JOKE: What did the Univox 4200-X say to the IBM Model A-413? ANSWER: "My prototype can lick your prototype." BEGIN AMUSED LAUGHTER: Ha Ha Ha. END TRANSMISSION.

The Sharp Electronic Model 700

Dear Mr. Fitzgerald:

I am a big fan of yours and I would like to meet you someday. But, I would like to complain about your constant and unfair comments about the cafeteria. In fact, your constant jabs at us make my blood boil! And, actually, the reason I want to meet you is so I can clear your clock. Really, your column sucks for air!

Frank L. Stein
Cafeteria Manager

Dear Mr. Fitzgerald,
I am a big fan of yours and would like to meet you someday. However, the real reason I have written you is to confess. Last semester, before their concert, I accidentally ran over the Pittsburgh Symphony with a steam roller.

No wonder they sounded a little flat.

Graham Rotten

INGREDIENTS: sugar, milk chocolate, vegetable shortening, almonds (OOPS! Sorry. Accidentally printed a candy wrapper).

Dear Tony,
I am a big fan of yours and would like to meet you someday. I'm no prude, but I have noticed how certain areas of the University are in a moral decline. For instance, the math department is using a shocking textbook entitled "Improper Fractions". As the title suggests, there is nothing proper or pure about these top-heavy little numbers!

This book must go, as well as many English texts for their lewd, wanton use of subordinate clauses. Thank you.

Anita "Citrushead" Bryant

Dear Mr. Fitzgerald,
I am a big fan of yours and would like to meet you someday. However, lately your humor column has been slipping. Let me make one thing perfectly clear: if you want to read something amusing, read my memoirs. Now, that's funny!

Summer in the city brings heat, classes, contaminated water

Commentary

By

ALYCE COOPER

Remember last April when you were saying, "I can't believe there are only three weeks left in this semester."

The second week of summer school is coming to an end and there are only three weeks left in this semester.

Summer school is well under way.

For many, this is a return engagement, while for others the summer of '78 is opening night.

But, there is more to summer school than Marshall University. There is also the city of Huntington to be reckoned with.

Summers in Huntington are a different animal. What can be said about a city positioned downstream from Pittsburgh?

Last summer this city was bombarded with warnings.

We were told not to drink the water unless it we boiled it. FMC had blessed our water supply with carbon tetrachloride.

We were warned not to eat fish from the Ohio River because the water contained vinyl chloride.

Already this semester we are told that our water supply contains more than average amounts of trihalomethanes, but West Virginia health officials aren't sure what that means.

Those with respiratory disorders were advised last summer to stay indoors due to high pollution indexes and air stagnation warnings.

On a brighter note, there was the lovely red sky at-dusk. It was not only seen in the west. The northern sky often had a rosy blush, courtesy of American Car and Foundry.

ACF was also responsible for the dinner music provided by their humming machinery.

Also not to be forgotten when conjuring up images of summertime in Huntington is the weather. There is one nice thing about the weather here from June to August. It is predictable. It is always hot.

Mountains have a way of trapping things between them such as heat, humidity and stale air. This has caused many newcomers to the valley who never before suffered from sinus problems to rush to their neighborhood drug stores in pursuit of one or more of the pills, capsules, spansules and tonics so graciously provided by the pharmaceutical companies for the relief of sneezing, coughing, watering eyes and runny nose.

Despite the problems involved in living in Huntington during the summer, summer school does have its redeeming qualities.

Due to the shortened semesters, many professors require less work than during regular terms.

The atmosphere is a trifle more relaxed. Fewer students crowd the campus and finding a parking space is not quite the hassle it is in the fall and spring.

But, one factor surfaces as the ultimate solace. There is a peace that comes from the knowledge that although much work is required in a short time, each semester is over in five weeks. Summer school terms are short. It helps, sometimes, to keep that in mind.

Do you have a question, an answer, a problem, a solution, a complaint, some praise or just something you want to say?

DONAHUE

Show promotes state

The week of DONAHUE was a time for solidifying and changing images.

Those who came to see Phil Donahue, believed he lived up to his reputation of being honest, straightforward and nice in person.

For the state of West Virginia, having DONAHUE in the state represented a chance to have some positive publicity for the state.

People came from all around the area to see Phil Donahue and the DONAHUE show. June Marzella came from Inkster, Mich., to see the show since she could not get tickets when the show was in Detroit. Her sister, Betsy Stanley, South Point, Ohio, also came to see the show because she wanted to see Donahue in person.

Myrtle and James Treadway, Willow Wood, Ohio, thought Phil Donahue put on a good show and "was a pretty nice guy." They both agreed that they came to the show just to see Donahue in person.

Judging from the audience reaction to Donahue both before and after the show, no one was disappointed with the Donahue they saw on stage. Especially the unidentified woman who got to touch his hair and kiss him before the show began.

Donahue was a very personable man and got a warm response from the audience in return. After the taping, he spent about an hour shaking hands and signing autographs.

Leo McCourtney, general manager of WOWK-TV station which sponsored the DONAHUE show, said he was "overwhelmed" by the public and press response to the project.

He said the reason for bringing the show to the area, besides station promotion was to promote the state nationwide. With the shows reaching 147 markets, McCourtney said the shows have the potential for reaching millions of people who have no idea of what West Virginia has to offer.

"The DONAHUE shows, with the one-minute commercials for West Virginia can provide very positive publicity for the state," he added.

Investigation continues into murder

Law enforcement authorities in two states are continuing investigation of the May shooting deaths of two Marshall University students in a rural section of Giles County, Va.

The bodies of 20-year-old Karen L. Noble, Bluefield junior, and 21-year-old Jeffrey L. Scott, were found May 29 on secondary Route 61 between Narrows and Rocky Gap, Va. Police said both had been shot in the head with a small caliber weapon, although Noble died of drowning. Her body was found face down in Wolf Creek, 30 yards from where Scott's body was discovered in the back of a burning pickup truck.

Virginia State Police, West Virginia State Police and the Giles County Sheriff's department have been investigating the double murder. However, officials have been unable to determine a motive for the slayings, and no arrests have been made.

A transfer student from West Virginia University, Noble was majoring in geology at MU. Scott, a business major was employed as a photographer by Marshall's University Relations office.

100 volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed to assist in a research project being done by Dr. Phillip O. Prey, assistant professor of adult education.

About 100 teachers, elementary or secondary, who have never taught in an adult basic education classroom are needed to complete a research inventory, according to Prey.

Student fees altered

greatly reduced or completely dissipated.

Some programs will show a slight rise in funding under the new guidelines, which raise the fees paid by students taking seven through 11 hours. These include athletics, the Chief Justice, student government, Artists Series, the student literary magazine, music organizations and debate programs account.

Local court's ruling upheld

The state Supreme Court has let stand a lower court decision in a Marshall condemnation suit appealed by the owners of Tic Toc Tire Co.

The high court split 2-2 Monday in refusing to review a Cabell County Circuit Court decision which awarded $168,000 compensation to the owners of the Third Avenue property. The tire firm, which leases the property, was excluded from sharing in the award.

The condemnation suit was filed by the Board of Regents to obtain property for Marshall's expansion.

Student Center bonding and operating fees will not be affected by the guidelines, which permit continuation of pro-rated fees for those accounts.

Also not affected by the guidelines are enrollment fees, which include tuition, registration and higher education resources fees. These too will remain pro-rated for undergraduate students carrying fewer than 12 hours and graduate students enrolled for fewer than nine hours.

"The administration and the Student Activity Fees Committee are going to have to study the situation carefully and come up with some significant recommendations during the next few months if we are going to maintain a number of programs at their present levels," Marshall University President Robert B. Hayes said.

The new guidelines probably will not affect other four-year schools as much as they have affected Marshall, according to Peters. Approximately 35 percent of the students enrolled at Marshall last fall were taking six hours or less. For fees purposes, and including summer terms, Marshall accounts for the past 12 months show 47.7 per cent of those enrolled paid fees for less than seven hours per term.

The full-time student fees will be increasing by $2.45 beginning in the fall. With this increase, the total cost for a West Virginia resident attending Marshall next fall as a full-time undergraduate student will be $184.65, not including room and board charges for those living on campus. A non-West Virginia resident attending as a full-time undergraduate student will pay $679.65.

Library hours

Regular hours at James E. Morrow Library have been announced as follows:

 Friday 7:45 a.m.-5 p.m.

 Sunday 5 p.m.-10 a.m.
 Hours for Monday, July 3, will be 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., and the library will be closed July 4, Independence Day.

Patient's artwork to be exhibited

An exhibit featuring over 200 works of art by patients from state hospitals will be presented in the MU Art Gallery from June 25 through July 7.

Former graduate art student Diane White of Huntington organized the show.

As part of an art therapy program, White works with patients on a variety of levels including the severely retarded.

The art therapy program is funded by state and federal Arts and Humanities programs, White said. The opening will be Sunday evening from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Gallery hours during weekdays are noon until 4 p.m.

. . . Kenova woman wills MU $38,000

A Kenova woman who spent much of her life working with students in the classroom has arranged to continue helping young people after her death.

Edna Marie Blair, who died March 9, 1976, in a Huntington nursing home at the age of 83, left $38,000 to Marshall University to provide scholarships for West Virginians.

Dr. Bernard Queen, director of development, said he was advised by the attorney for Blair's estate that two pieces of property she owned in Kenova were sold and that the proceeds were being turned over to the university as specified in her will. The funds are to be used to establish the J.W. and Emma Blair Memorial Scholarship Fund in honor of Miss Blair's parents.

Queen said the $38,000 will be invested through the Marshall Foundation and annual proceeds will provide perpetual scholarships.

Blair began her teaching career in 1914 and taught in West Virginia and Ohio.

. . . Local coal company gives Foundation $17,500

The Marshall University Foundation has received a contribution of $17,500 from the Island Creek Coal Co., according to Dr. Bernard Queen, executive director of the foundation.

The presentation, made by J.E. Katlic, executive vice president of administration, will give $15,000 to the Marshall School of Medicine and $2,500 to the Community College developmental fund.

"We are extremely appreciative of the continuing and increasing recognition that Island Creek Coal Co. is giving toward Marshall University and its programs to serve the people of the region," Queen said.

"The company made a substantial contribution last year, but it has increased the contribution several times over this year. That is the type of corporate support which will enable Marshall to significantly expand its efforts to meet regional needs," he added.

. . . $15,000

contributed to medical fund

The Rowland Burns Medical Education Fund has received more than $15,000 since late April, according to Dr. Bernard Queen, executive director of the Marshall University Foundation.

The fund was established in the memory of the Huntington physician who died April 28. The fund will be used to conduct seminars and workshops in critical care medicine for doctors and nurses. The arrangements will be made through the Marshall School of Medicine and the fund will be administered by the Marshall Foundation, according to Dr. Queen.

Dr. Burns was active in the development of the Marshall School of Medicine and served as chairman of its Medical Education Advisory Committee.

Terming the response "remarkable," Dr. Queen added, "It is a significant indication of the great esteem in which Dr. Burns was held by his patients, his colleagues and the total community."

Voice student to give concert Friday at 8 p.m.

A Marshall graduate student studying voice will present a free recital tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Smith Recital Hall.

Sue Cottrill DeJournett will present Baroque arias by Purcell and Handel, German lieder pieces by Brahms, an aria from Puccini's "Tosca," and French art songs by Debussy and Faure.

She will be accompanied on piano by Mrs. Jean Davidson.

Rick Barnhart, blacksmith from Friendly will be among more than 130 artists and craftsmen demonstrating their skills at the 1978 Mountain State Art and Craft Fair, June 30 through July 4, at Cedar Lakes, near Ripley.

THE fair—

Artists and craftsmen bring the past alive in five-day celebration of mountain heritage

By SANDRA WALLS
Staff writer

In West Virginia, 'the fair' is the Mountain State Art and Craft Fair, a five-day celebration, demonstration and preservation of mountain heritage.

More than 130 artists and craftsmen will make the past come alive as they demonstrate their skills in spinning, weaving, quilting and others, from June 30 through July 4 at Cedar Lakes, near Ripley, W. Va.

Located midway between Charleston and Parkersburg, Cedar Lakes is accessible from the Ripley or Fairplains exit off I-77. Those who don't arrive early can expect to wait as traffic inches along the winding roads leading to the festivities.

The fair is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. except July 4 when it will close at 6 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and 50 cents for children under 12. Parking is free and dress is casual. Many people end up taking off their shoes...one reason why fairgoers are asked to leave pets at home.

A special heritage tent will house singing, dancing and special craft demonstrations daily. Organized dance groups from around the state will demonstrate folk and square dancing and dancing lessons will be given as well. Each afternoon craftsmen will demonstrate various crafts such as blacksmithing, tole painting and shingle splitting. Following the demonstrations, they will answer questions and instruct those interested in learning the crafts.

West Virginia's finest native instrumentalists will come together for some old-time pickin' and grinnin'. Three groups of musicians will provide non-stop music as playing banjos, fiddles, guitars, harmonicas and plucked and hammered dulcimers.

Contemporary, as well as traditional arts and crafts will be exhibited. Painting, prints, sculpture and photographs turn the fairgrounds into an outdoor gallery. And for a small fee, some of the artists will do a likeness sketch.

Not only does the fair provide a chance to see the state's finest artists and craftsmen work; it also provides an opportunity to purchase the crafts—everything from furniture to intricately designed quilts and whimsical toys.

School of Medicine gains associate dean

A Kentucky physician has been named to Marshall's medical school faculty.

Dr. David K. Heydinger of Lexington, Ky., former president of Appalachian Regional Hospitals, Inc., will join the faculty this month as associate dean for academic and clinical affairs and chairman of the community medicine department, according to Dr. Robert W. Coon, dean of the medical school.

In announcing the appointment, Coon said, "As associate dean, Dr. Heydinger will be responsible for coordinating the school's medical education program both in the classroom and in the hospitals."

Coon said Heydinger's responsibility will be to "develop programs oriented to the economic and sociological aspects of health care."

Heydinger announced earlier this year his intent to step down after four years as president of the ARH system which operates 10 hospitals in West Virginia, Kentucky, and Virginia.

Baseball team needs field — Cook

By KEN SMITH

Jack Cook still isn't satisfied. Although the veteran Marshall baseball coach won two coach of the year honors as his team captured the Southern Conference crown and NCAA tournament bid, he's still aiming for another goal—a true home field for the Thundering Herd.

"The only way to have a good program is to get a baseball field of our own," said Cook, named SC and NCAA Atlantic Regional coach of the year after his team compiled a school record 27-13 mark this spring. "All the other teams we play have one on campus. It's the only way to have a top-notch program."

Even though a new athletic field is scheduled to be built on Fifth Avenue across from the Twin Towers residence halls, the Herd's present home is more than four miles west of campus at St. Clouds Commons. And Cook said this distance is an obstacle to his coaching efforts.

"It's about 35 to 40 minutes there and back," he pointed out. "So we don't have enough time to do what we need to do. We have so many things to do and only two-and-a-half hours to get it in."

Track classic set July 1st

The Hal Greer Classic 5,000-Meter Run will be held on the boulevard named for the former Marshall basketball great at noon July 1. The race, which will start in front of Old Main, will be conducted in conjunction with the ceremonies opening the new Hal Greer Memorial Boulevard.

Interested persons may pre-register at the Little Shirt House, No. 5 Huntington Arcade (529-6799), according to director Ed Canterbury. Entry fees are $5 in advance and $6 the day of the race.

Running shoes will be presented to the winners of the men's open class and the women's class. Each entrant will receive a T-shirt for the race and winners of the four classes will receive medals. The classes are 0-19, 20-29, 30-39, and 40 and over.

Transportation is also a problem, Cook said. "We can't get the kids out there on their own," he explained. "We have to go all together, and if someone has a late class it's hard for him to get a ride."

Although the university currently is acquiring property for the baseball facility, no timetable for construction can be projected, according to Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president for administration.

"It's part of the overall Multipurpose Facility project," he explained. "It's not the first phase of the project. We're still thinking in terms of our options. Nothing has jelled."

Egnatoff said construction on the field depends on how quickly Marshall can acquire the property between 18th and 19th streets and Fifth and Sixth avenues.

"If someone doesn't want to relocate, we have no legal right to force condemnation," he explained. "That's why we're looking at our options."

A baseball field with such proximity to the residence halls would help the Herd's fan support, Cook said. "If we had a field, we'd have a large following of students," he asserted. "But (with present circumstances), it's hard for the kids to get involved."

But even without its "dream home," Marshall managed to have its version of a "dream season." Ranked 17th nationally among NCAA Division I schools, the Herd swept to the conference crown with an 11-1 record and advanced to the finals of the NCAA Atlantic Regional tournament against three of the nation's top teams.

Hal Greer to be honored in re-naming of boulevard

The name of a section of 16th Street will be changed to Hal Greer Boulevard to honor the former Marshall University basketball star.

The change will take place next month. Greer, a Huntington native, went on to become an NBA star for 15 seasons.

In the NCAA competition in Miami, Fla., Marshall stunned then-17th-ranked Florida State 4-0 in the first game of the four team double-elimination tournament.

The Herd then defeated fifth-rated Atlantic Coast Conference kingpin Clemson 9-3 behind the pitching of Huntingtonian Greg Rowsey.

However, third-ranked Miami (Fla.) downed the Herd twice in the tourney finale to earn a berth in the College World Series in Omaha, Neb. The University of Southern California eventually captured the national title.

Herd outfielder Randy Rosiek, Oak Hill senior, was named to the all-SC team and finished third in the league batting race with a .395 regular season average. And pitcher Albie DeYoung, Paterson, N.J., senior, set school records by compiling 188 strikeouts and 18 wins over his Marshall career.

Despite the loss in the regional finals, Cook said his team's performance will be a great boost to recruiting. "It's gotta help," he explained. "Word gets around."

"In the regionals, it was three teams and us—we were 'Marshall who?' But when we beat Florida State, we got headlines. Now people know who we are. It has to help recruiting."

And Cook may need the recruiting boost. Both Rowsey and DeYoung have graduated, leaving two holes in the pitching rotation. And the hot-hitting Rosiek also has finished his college career.

"We need an outstanding catcher who can come in and help us as a freshman," Cook said. "It's our number one recruiting priority."

We lost two good pitchers and Rosiek and (Larry) Berkery in the outfield. But our infield is intact. We should have a fairly good team again next year."

Marshall will open its SC season next year on the road against Furman and The Citadel—two of the league's stronger teams. And because of the inhibiting West Virginia weather, Cook expects some problems in the early going.

"Some of the southern teams will be way ahead of us," he explained

"They can practice outside by February, while we'll probably be inside in March. We won't really catch up until we've played 15-20 games."

But Cook said he prefers the conference competition. "It's tough to get an NCAA bid," he pointed out. "If it weren't for the SC championship this year, we probably wouldn't have received one this time."

'New kid' third after first year of SC athletics

The "new kid on the block" held its own against the neighborhood bullies of the Southern Conference. Marshall's third place finish in the SC Commissioner's Cup standings will help bolster the university's athletic recruiting efforts, according to Assistant Athletic Director Linda Holmes.

The Commissioner's Cup is awarded each year to the SC team with the best overall athletic performance. Points are assigned according to the final league standing in each event.

In its first full year of SC eligibility in all sports, the Thundering Herd compiled 56 points to edge The Citadel for the third spot. Appalachian State won the Cup with 81 points, easily outdistancing runnerup Virginia Military Institute's 66 1/2.

Coach is pleased

"We're very happy to have done this well," Holmes said. "We're proud of the athletes who contributed to the effort. It's a definite boost to all the coaches and their recruiting efforts."

Holmes said the Herd's performance reflected well upon the Marshall athletic department. "It shows we're running a good athletic program," she said. "It will continue to get better and better."

Marshall teams captured championships in cross country, swimming and baseball. ASU won the Cup on the basis of its first place finishes in soccer, basketball, rifle and golf. The Mountaineers finished second in swimming, indoor track, wrestling, baseball and indoor track.

Herd proves best all around

Of the three conference teams in their first full seasons of eligibility, Marshall had the best Commissioner's Cup showing. University of Tennessee-Chattanooga finished sixth with 45 points, while Western Carolina finished last in the eight-team league with 31 points.

Other SC schools and their point totals are The Citadel, 51 points; Furman, 49 1/2 points, and Davidson, 36 points.

Appalachian State's margin of victory was the greatest in the nine-year history of the Commissioner's Cup.

Head under heels

Janice Nida, Hamlin High School, stands on her hands as Barbara Betts, Universal Cheerleaders Association representative, offers help. The association is conducting a clinic for 250 cheerleaders from West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio. The clinic, scheduled Tuesday through Friday, is a first on the Marshall campus.

Highlights in schedule

The West Virginia Classic, three new teams, 13 conference games, a new starting time and a return match with WVU highlight the 1978-79 Marshall Basketball schedule.

The new schedule opens with a home game against Morris Harvey at 7:30 p.m., that's right 7:30. This is Marshall's new starting time for all home games. The new time, according to Associate Head Coach Bob Zuffelato, will enable the scores to be on the wire, allowing the nation to see the Herd's results.

On Dec. 6, the Herd plays the big game of the year, West Virginia University. Zuffelato feels that since the Herd is basically a young team, eight freshmen and sophomores on the team, that they will not be looking ahead.

During a six game stretch, from Dec. 19 to Jan. 8, the Herd plays only one home game, and that is against Rio Grande. The away games include Detroit, the games from the West Virginia Classic, Morris Harvey and Louisville.

The final six regular season games are Southern Conference games, three at home and three on the road. Zuffelato says that finishing the conference season on the road hurts, but until Marshall has its own facility that's the way it will have to be. The reason Marshall cannot play at home during the final three games is due to the Golden Gloves being scheduled at this time.
