Food service in dormitories changes hands

Dormitory students will have a new food service to gripe about for the next year.

The contract for the ARA food service was not renewed, according to Warren S. Myers, director of auxiliary services, and the contract was sent out for bids. Custom Food Service submitted the low bid and was awarded the contract, he said.

The food committee, made up of the dormitory presidents or their representatives, had been meeting throughout the year to discuss the food service and any problems that arose, Myers said. He said the final decisions was made by the administration.

Custom Food Service is no stranger to the Marshall dormitories. It had the contract for approximately two years, ending July 15, 1977, when ARA took over.

Myers said a survey was taken at the time of the dormitory elections to determine whether students preferred a breakfast and brunch on Sundays or a brunch and dinner. "The brunch and dinner option received an overwhelming victory," Myers stated.

However, the survey was taken after the new contract had been awarded. Therefore, no changes can be made in the financial agreements for one year, until the next contract is drawn up, Myers said.

"I feel confident that we will be able to reach a workable agreement with Custom on the meal plans for Sundays," Myers said. He added a decision would be reached before the beginning of fall classes.

Possible witness sought in killings

The parents of two Marshall students killed in Virginia in May have offered a reward for information in the case. In another development, police have released a drawing of a man sought as a possible witness.

Police are searching for a man believed to be a possible witness reportedly seen in the vicinity of the double slaying of Karen Nobel, 20, Bluefield junior, and Jeffery Scott, 21, of Bramwell. A composite sketch of the man believed to be a possible witness was sent to three or four states surrounding Virginia, according to Giles County Sheriff John Hopkins Jr.

The witness is described as a white male, about 37, 5-7 and weighing about 150 pounds with light brown hair.

Police indicated that they felt the man may not live in the Giles area. "I think if he did, then we would find him because this is not a very large county," Hopkins told reporters.

The sheriff said the possible witness apparently had physical problems with his left leg and arm, and he had trouble sitting.

Virginia State Police Sgt. T.B. Beasley said the man could be a Giles Countian who lived some distance from where he was seen.

The parents of the two students are offering a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspect or suspects, Hopkins said.

However, an exact dollar amount has not been established because donations are still being sent in, Hopkins said.

The bodies of the two students were found in a remote area near Va. Rt. 61 after a motorist discovered Scott's burning truck.

Scott's body was found in the bed of the truck with a gunshot wound in the side of the head, and Noble was found in a creek approximately 30 yards from the truck.

No motive for the slayings has been determined.

Regents approve expansion at MU

CHARLESTON (AP)—The Board of Regents has approved the expansion of Marshall's campus, authorized spending for a study on the utilization of science facilities, and delayed action on a proposal to establish a center for Regional Progress.

The board approved Tuesday the purchase of four lots belonging to the Emanuel United Methodist Church in Huntington at a cost of $208,000. The land will be used for campus expansion. According to C.T. Mitchell, director of informational services, this area lies between Fifth and Sixth avenues and Elm and 19th streets. He said these lots plus other land to be acquired will be used for parking lot and baseball field construction.

Spending up to $60,000 was authorized for a study on the utilization of science facilities. The study is being made by the firm of TAG-VVKKR. Mitchell said the "master space needs study" is to determine "what we have and what we need. Then they will recommend any additional construction or renovation. This is the first step in expansion of the science building."

The board also received a report but delayed action on a proposal to establish a Center for Regional Progress. The center would attempt to serve the business and industrial communities, and government, study health needs and coordinate cultural events in the Huntington area.

Pay hike pleases staff

By SANDRA WALLS
Staff Writer

Response to a non-scientific, random survey seems to indicate non-faculty personnel are pleased with their pay increase and elimination of the anniversary pay date system.

Following guidelines established by the West Virginia Board of Regents, employees making less than $9,000 will have their pay increased an average of seven and one half percent, while employees making more than $9,000 will receive an increase of an average six percent.

Before this policy was instituted, full-time non-faculty personnel were evaluated for pay increases one year from the day they began employment, their anniversary date.

That plan had not been in effect since Gov. John D. Rockefeller enforced a freeze on state pay raises Feb. 14. Some employees complained because they did not receive an increase on their anniversary date due to the freeze. However, Ray A. Nissen, director of personnel administration, said employees who had been employed over a year and were eligible for a raise were taken care of under the new plan.

"Their increase for this fiscal year was calculated on the basis that they had received that increase, unless their supervisor recommended differently."

The increases became effective July 1, and will be reflected in the July 15 paychecks. Although employees have not as yet actually received their raises, Nissen said employees were notified what their salaries would be for this fiscal year on June 26.

Most employees seem to like the new system.

Sharon Starkey, department of educational media secretary, does. "I lost out because of the anniversary system because mine wasn't until September. I would have gotten five percent, but this way I got seven and one half percent in July, so I'm pleased."

Starkey said the anniversary date system "wasn't fair to people who had been here a while.

Secretaries who had been here two years, four years and eight years were all lumped into one category and given the same amount of money."

Ruth Carter, registration clerk, said she thought it was a fair cost of living increase.

Georgia Childers, graphic services supervisor, said she was satisfied, and "I think everyone in this shop is satisfied. I'm glad it went back to the old way. You know what you're going to get before you get it."

Childers said she had no complaints at all, "They've always treated us fair down here."

Interchange

A space dedicated to the interchange of opinions within the university community

So Hal Greer has a street named after him? Ex-Huntington resident Peter Marshall, who is current host of TV's "Hollywood Squares," ought to have a nine-block area named in his honor. At least one Huntington landmark, Marshall University, is already named after the popular television personality.

Hal Greer, move over!

A little over a week ago, Huntington underwent a change which will be forever remembered in the annals of history alongside such earthshaking events as the conquests of Napoleon and Hitler, the rise of the Roman Empire, the development of cro-magnon man and the invention of Shake and Bake.

Here is one student's reaction to the anus-clenching event of a lifetime.

Juan Bowtie returned to his seamy apartment after attending a roundtable discussion on the sticky subject "Will Rubber Cement Ever Replace Saliva?". He was astounded to find that he no longer lived on Sixteenth Street... so astounded, in fact, that he called his mother.

"Hey, ma," said Juan. "I don't live on Sixteenth Street no more."

"Did you move?" his stunned mother asked.

"No, ma, it's Sixteenth Street... it's g-g-gawne," he sputtered.

"Juan, have you been eating those funny mushrooms again?"

No, Juan hadn't been eating "funny mushrooms". Sixteenth Street WAS gone. In its place was Hal Greer's basketball great for Marshall's basketball great.

But what has become of Sixteenth Street? Run down and tired, Sixteenth Street has retired to the Firestone Steel-Belted Radial Retirement Home for Old Roads. We telephoned the home long distance for an interview with Sixteenth Street. What follows is a literal transcript of our conversation.

PARTHENON: "Hello. Hello. Can you hear me? I'd like to ask some questions for the press..."

Eat the press

Humor by Tony Fitzgerald

SIXTEENTH STREET: (Silence)

PARTHENON: "(Hmmm. Must be a bad connection.) Anyway, our first question is "How does it feel to washed up in road biz?"

SIXTEENTH STREET: (Silence)

OPERATOR: "Your three minutes are up, sir. Please deposit 60 cents."

We learned two things from our interview with Sixteenth Street. First, we learned that streets seldom, if ever, talk. We also realized that Sixteenth Street was a colorful and important part of Marshall history.

So, why not name a street after it, too? How about "Sixteenth Street Street"? Kinda has a nice ring to it...

But, why stop there? There are lots of streets in this city and lots of famous people to name them after.

Soupy Sales Avenue would be a good idea. Instead of a ribbon cutting ceremony, Soupy could clip the mayors suspenders and lead the crowd in a wild pie-throwing melee.

In keeping with Soupy's wild sense of humor, the street signs along the road will contain hilarious signs like "NO PARKING except 5 p.m.- 2:30 a.m. Mon.,Wed.and Thurs. and 3:27 a.m. to 7:48 a.m. Sat." And the ever popular selection of ONE WAY signs and arrows painted on the road all pointing in various directions to cause havoc.

Come to think of it, it would be just like any other "well planned" Huntington street.

BOR:

Did Jay goof?

Gov. Jay Rockefeller's recent appointee to the Board of Regents has been the target of some heavy criticism from the state's press. John W. Saunders, president of Beckley College and Jay's recent appointee, received his doctorate degree from "an unaccredited university that was operating from a hotel," according to a United Press International news story.

However, Saunders' appointment came not on the basis of his formal education, but on his experience in the field of education.

There can be no denying that the BOR needs an experienced educator, and even though Saunders' formal education is being questioned, this should not be the major bone of contention. There is, instead, a much greater problem involved.

Beckley College is a privately owned and operated educational institution. So why has the president of a private school been appointed to a board that governs public colleges?

Public and private schools are both in competition with each other for students and their funds. But, public colleges are dependent on the BOR for much money. The appointment of someone from the private education sector to the BOR raises questions as to whether there may be an eventual conflict of interest involved.

There are undoubtedly members of West Virginia's state college system with sufficient credentials and educational experience who would jump at the chance to be a board member. Why not one of these, rather than an appointee from a private institution who's education is being questioned?

Scott Widmeyer, Rockefeller's press secretary, says that Saunders was appointed "strictly on the governor's personal knowledge" of the man. Sometimes, other considerations should be made.

Donating sensitive subject

Med school seeks 5 bodies

The Marshall School of Medicine needs five more cadavers for effective anatomical study, according to Dr. David L. Dawson, assistant professor of anatomy.

Dawson said the donation of the cadavers, or dead bodies, to the school is a "sensitive subject" because of the reaction to early human anatomical study.

He said laws on the study of the human body have changed from state by state. Around 1800, it was illegal for an anatomy student to dissect a cadaver unless the deceased was a criminal, he said.

Times have changed, though, Dawson said. People may now donate their bodies to a school of medicine to be used for research just as people donate their kidneys or eyes to science. He said each state now has a uniform anatomical donor act.

A person wishing to donate their body should talk about their decision with their families first, Dawson said. If a deceased person's family did not want to allow the body to be donated, he said, they would be able to stop the procedure.

Dawson said the three bodies presently being used in the lab were all donated specifically to Marshall after the school began taking will forms, which are filled out by the donor.

He said the school has filed about 70 of the forms since 1976, when they began accepting the forms after the receipt of a letter of reasonable assurance from the Leason Committee for Medical Education. The first body was received approximately one and a half years ago, he said.

The family of a deceased person may also donate the body to the medical school, he added. Dawson said the reaction to the cadavers by the first year medical school students has been good. "We haven't had any problems," he said. "Generally, if there were a prevailing attitude, it would be that it was a real privilege, and it is," he added.

Dawson said the cadavers are treated with the respect due to a human body while in the hands of Marshall students. "We try to impress upon the student that it is a distinct privilege to be able to dissect the cadavers," he said, adding that it is absolutely the best way to learn about dissection and the human anatomy.

Dawson said eight bodies are needed for maximum efficiency, or four students per body. He said 32 students, the 24 undergraduate medical students and eight graduate students, use the facilities and the cadavers.

Presently, the cadavers are being used by the first and second year medical students to teach gross anatomy and dissection, Dawson said. He said surgery techniques will be studied by the students in about two years.

Before the Marshall University School of Medicine and the West Virginia College of Osteopathic Medicine, Dawson said, unclaimed and donated bodies were sent to the West Virginia School of Medicine.

He said, with the advent of the two newer schools, a greater demand was made on the available cadavers, and the new schools brought them from the senior school, WVU.

He said the greatest care is taken of the bodies. They are kept in special laboratory tables which keep the proper humidity rate, and are periodically sprinkled with a substance to retard deterioration. He said each cadaver is in use for approximately a year.

Board delays action

In a report to the Regents, President Robert B. Hayes said he envisioned a three-year period of development for the center. He said it will be financed primarily from private sources and with grants from federal, state and local government agencies. Announcement of another, larger private grant is expected to be made soon, Hayes said.

He said administrative costs for the center initially are expected to run about $50,000 per year, including salaries of a director and a secretary and office expenses. For 1978-79, administrative responsibilities will be assigned to Peter M. File, grants officer, so additional allocation from the board will not be required.

Examples of ways in which the center could serve the region would be applied research into community problems and provision of technical assistance, using expertise of departmental specialists in the university; continuing education, both on and off campus, providing classes, seminars and workshops for professionals seeking to enhance their skills and knowledge; information and referral services regarding resources available in the region, especially for small businesses; and student involvement and experience in various professions through graduate assistantships and internship programs.

The director of the center will report directly to the Marshall president and community resources, such as agencies currently providing services and types working with various community organizations.

Hayes noted the center is in line with the board's 1972 "Plan for Progress" which envisioned eventual establishment of "an appropriate Center or Bureau of Community Services and Development" by Marshall.

The board was also told Tuesday it earned $7.1 million interest on investment of its various special funds for the fiscal year ending June 30. The board was told higher interest rates on short term investments in U.S. Treasury notes, plus having an extra $50,000 million to invest, accounted for the return. The 1977-78 proceeds exceeded returns from the previous fiscal year by more than $3 million.

The 1977 legislature authorized the sale of $50 million in bonds to underwrite the costs of building new athletic facilities at West Virginia and Marshall universities.

The bulk of those funds have been invested until they are actually needed.

Other funds invested include funds for capitol improvement projects and revenues from campus bookstores and the West Virginia University medical center.

In other board action, a mid-January date was set for opening bids on West Virginia University's $20 million football stadium. The 50,000-seat stadium is to be completed in time for the 1980 season and will be located adjacent to the WVU Medical Center.

Med school merger topic of subcommittee meetings

A second meeting is to be held sometime this month for discussion of a merger of the three state medical schools by a legislative subcommittee, according to Dr. Robert W. Coon, vice president and dean of the school.

The subcommittee consists of six legislators and six lay citizens, and met once in June. It is to meet again in August and September.

Coon said he was not sure what the committee would decide, but, he said, "we are interested in any approach to increase efficiency and reduce cost" of the school, and added the school supports the study.

He said the board is addressing the efficiency aspect of the merger. The state medical schools concerned other than Marshall are the West Virginia University School of Medicine and the West Virginia College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Coon said the Marshall School of Medicine plans to accept 24 students for each of the fall and spring semesters, but plan to take 36 students for the 1979 fall semester.

The $2.5 million recently approved for the school by the Veteran's Administration is the balance of monies previously approved for the school, Coon said. This money will complete the funds slated in the school's eight-year budget, he added.

Construction on the VA hospital will be underway in roughly one year, Coon said.

Student housing, tenant's rights are concern

By DIANE SLAUGHTER
Managing Editor

Locating a place to live and then finding out what rights a tenant has are major problems for most students. A student office and a new bill passed by the West Virginia Legislature should help students solve these problems.

The Off-Campus Housing Office in Memorial Student Center Room 2W29 is designed to help students find housing, according to Robert F. Lesh, Wheeling senior and director of the office.

Lesh says the office is looking for landlords to list with them, but so far few are willing to do so. Each apartment that is listed should offer information such as the address of the apartment, the number of rooms it contains and any options is offered such as air conditioning. However, the Off-Campus Housing Office is not able to check each listing to determine its condition. Lesh said this would be a physical impossibility.

Without the landlords listing their apartments, though, Lesh said the office might as well be closed. "About 20 people a day come into the office and it's discouraging not to be able to tell them anything," he said.

Various ways have been tried to encourage landlords to list with the Marshall office, according to Lesh. "We tried advertising, but received very little response. All the local radio and television stations have agreed to broadcast public service announcements for us," he said.

"What we're really hoping to do is to get students involved. We're here to help them, but we can't do it if they don't help us by letting us know of apartments that are available," he added.

"Everybody wants an apartment and they want it near campus, and of course that's just impossible. It's disgusting, we're treated as second-class citizens," Lesh added.

The new amendment recently passed by the West Virginia Legislature relates to "a landlord's duty to maintain leased premises in fit and habitable condition."

David Lockwood, attorney for students, said the new amendment will be hard to enforce because it is a landlord's bill.

"Due to the vagueness of the terminology, the tenant has no way to make the landlord do anything," Lockwood said. "You tell me what a 'fit and habitable condition' is. Maintaining 'appropriate conveniences for the removal of ashes, garbage, rubbish and other waste incidental to the occupancy of the dwelling unit' may just mean that the landlord must provide trash cans," he continued.

Lockwood said if a tenant complains about living conditions, the landlord can just evict him instead of dealing with the complaint.

Second summer registration set

Registration for Marshall University's second summer term will be conducted Monday, July 17 from 8 a.m. to noon in the Multi-purpose Room of Memorial Student Center.

Second term classes begin Tuesday, July 18, and continue through Aug. 18.

Entry into the registration area will be by alphabetical order, based on the student's last name, according to Registrar Robert H. Edkins. Students may register at their scheduled time or at any time thereafter, he said. All fees must be paid at the time of registration.

Registration materials may be obtained in the lobby of the student center 15 minutes prior to the scheduled registration time. In addition to registration materials, students will need ID cards to enter the Multi-Purpose Room.

The schedule will be: 8 to 8:14 a.m., J-K; 8:15 to 8:44 a.m., L-M; 8:45 to 8:59 a.m., N-O; 9 to 9:14 a.m., P-Q-R; 9:15 to 9:44 a.m., S;

Course listings containing the time schedule are available from the Registrar's Office in Old Main 1B weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. After hours, they may be obtained from the MU Security Office, located on the southwest corner of Old Main.

Students who have not previously attended Marshall should fill out an admission application prior to registering. These may be found in the Admissions Office, Old Main 125, which is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., or the Security Office. The Admissions Office will be open Saturday, July 15, from 9 a.m. to noon.

Late registration and schedule adjustment will be conducted Tuesday, July 18, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., in the Student Center.

Cards for discounts found impractical

By DIANE SLAUGHTER
Managing Editor

What ever happened to the Student Buying Power Cards?

The cards, which are supposed to give students discounts at area businesses, aren't being used much, according to Rick Ramell, former student body president.

The Student Buying Power Card representatives contacted Ramell while he was president and asked if he would be interested in receiving the cards. The company then contacted area merchants for participants in the service, Ramell said.

When Ramell found out which businesses had been willing to participate, he was not pleased, because the businesses were not the ones that students would frequent. However, he agreed to take the cards and pass them out to the students free of charge.

"I gave them out to students who requested them," Ramell said. "Other than that, the rest of the cards are still sitting in a box in Memorial Student Center 2W29."

According to Ramell the company then told him he would be receiving a second round of cards. Ramell said he never received the second round.

The cards, which came out in the summer of 1977, expire July 1, 1979. These are the companies and their discounts that are listed on the back of the card: Bobbie's University Lounge, none listed; Uptowner Inn, 10 per cent; General Tire Service, 10 per cent; Dutch Miller Chevrolet, new cars $150 over invoice; Marshall's Optical, none listed; East End Cycle Sales, Inc., five per cent on Kawasaki Motorcycles, service parts and accessories, and Huntington Trust & Savings Bank, free checking to all Marshall students.

Administrator announced for business

Marshall's College of Business has appointed a new associate dean, according to Dr. Sara E. Anderson, dean of the college.

Charles D. Webb, associate professor of accounting and departmental chairman, will fill a year-long vacancy left when Anderson, then associate dean, became acting dean and later accepted the appointment as dean.

Webb will be responsible for student recruitment and academic advising and records for both undergraduate and graduate students, according to Anderson.

New park opens at Beech Fork

Beech Fork "beach"

By ALYCE COOPER
Editor

Marshall students will not have to go as far to enjoy summer water activities now that Beech Fork Reservoir is open.

The facility opened in mid-April, two weeks ahead of the originally planned opening date, "because people were getting so anxious," said Mack Little, resource manager.

Existing facilities were completed about a year ago, he said, at the cost of $36 million dollars.

Currently the 12,600-acre area offers a boat launch for access to the 720 acre lake, about 30 minutes from Huntington on Route 52.

According to Merlyn D. Marten, park ranger, boat motors are limited to 10 horsepower capacity because a larger boat could cause soil erosion since the lake banks are not rocky.

He said water skiing is not feasible because "with a motor that small, the boat wouldn't be able to get going fast enough to pull a skier." He added that another factor which deters skiing on the lake is the lack of straight areas which further prohibits boat acceleration.

"We are not recommending swimming, but that hasn't stopped anyone," Marten said, adding there is no lifeguard.

"There are no restrictions on having beer, but there are state regulations on the consumption of other alcoholic beverages in public places," he said.

The park doesn't close at night, according to Marten who said it remains open for fishing.

The lake has been stocked with a variety of fish, but Marten stated because of restrictions on the size fish which may be taken from the lake it would be about two years before there is "good fishing."

Little said a 12-inch minimum limit exists for extraction of bass from the dam area upstream, and creel limit is eight. All other state fishing regulations are in effect.

According to Little, federal plans include a marina which has already been contracted and "should be in in September." The marina will offer boat and slip rentals, a restaurant and concession stand.

The Bowen camping area, 276-campsites with electricity to all sites, 49 of which also have water and sewage facilities, should open by August 1, he said.

Little also said the State Department of Natural Resources is planning day-use recreation areas for campers, such as game courts, a swimming pool and a country store.

Construction to rearrange lots

Fall to bring parking changes

By ELIZABETH HOLROYD
Staff Writer

The Marshall parking situation will be the same for the remainder of the summer semester, but fall will bring a lot of changes, according to Security Director Donald Salyers and Parking Coordinator Bonnie Lytle.

Salyers said the university will lose some 192 parking spaces in areas T, W and D to the new Multipurpose Center.

The development of parking areas on the corner of 18th Street and Third Avenue and immediately west of the Bonded Gasoline Station will provide approximately 250 spaces, he said.

For the fall semester only, Salyers said, areas T and W, located on the south side of Third Avenue between 18th and 19th Streets, will be designated Area T. Fall will be the final semester these unpaved parking lots will be used, he added.

Salyers said the university is not really gaining parking places with the new lots, only transferring them.

He said the new Area K lot will be used only for dormitory student parking, while newly acquired property on both sides of Maple Avenue in the 1800 block will be strictly for students when completed.

He said another proposed parking lot, located on the north side of Sixth Avenue in the 1800 block, will be specifically for the use of medical school students and doctors.

State law allows the Board of Regents to collect parking fees of $5 per summer semester and $15 per winter semester, Lytle said.

The law further maintains that the fees be placed in a special fund and primarily used for maintenance and operation of the parking facilities. She said the excess is slated for the acquisition and construction of further facilities.

Lytle said the $3 fee presently in effect for areas W and T is lower than the other fees because the area is unpaved.

Methods for controlling parking are also being finalized for use in the fall, Salyers said.

The control method of immobilizing automobiles by use of "front wheel vehicle immobilizers" will be initiated in the fall, he said.

The parking areas have already been posted in preparation for this, and each immobilized automobile will have a large sign on the windshield and another on the door informing the driver that he has the immobilizer on his car, Salyers said.

The "boots," as the immobilizers are informally called, will be used in addition to towing, and a service charge will cause the removal of the device to cost $10, the same as the present removal system, Lytle said.

Parking meters will be placed in the two-hour parking area adjacent to Memorial Student Center as soon as the lot is resurfaced, Salyers said.

The meters may cost 20 cents per hour, he said, but this might be changed to 25 cents for two hours.

The closed-circuit television cameras located on the Third Avenue lots, which will view the area from 16th Street to the Bonded Filling Station, will be in operating when electricity is supplied to them, Salyers said.

Proposed gate control is still being considered, he said, although the department has not yet received anything from the gate control companies contacted. Salyers said the department plans to use the control method on the Smith Hall parking area, Area H, first.

Marshall to host Elderhostel

Older residents will have the opportunity to participate in a retirement education program when Marshall sponsors Elderhostel July 23-29 and July 30-August 5.

Dr. Richard O. Comfort said the nationwide program is designed for several reasons.

"It encourages people to come back to school. It allows older people to mix with young people on campus and participate in campus activities.

"This is a time when we are beginning to think about life-long education and third careers. Retired persons have a lot of spare time on their hands.

"A fourth reason is, and President Hayes is big on this one, it introduces them to Marshall. It builds interest so they might come back to school here."

Comfort said eight persons are enrolled for the first session and five in the second. He said response is slow, but this follows trends of other Elderhostels in their first years.

Classes to be offered include "Living in the Appalachian Region" and "Preparation for Retirement."

Although the program is designed for those over 60, Comfort said no one would be refused.

Activities include field trips, recreation programs and a picnic as well as classroom work. Provisions have been made to accommodate the handicapped.

Comfort said formal education is not required and participants are not subject to tests, grades or required homework.

Total cost for the program including room, meals and organized activities will be $65. Those choosing to commute will be charged $15, including lunches.

Additional details are available by calling Comfort at 696-6700 or 522-9029. He said persons could also "show up" at 7:30 p.m. July 23 in the lobby of Twin Towers West.

Herd signs Kyger girl for two sports

A Kyger Creek High School girl has decided to continue her athletic career at Marshall University next year, according to Track Coach Arlene Stooke.

Vicki Stroud, who placed in three events in the Ohio State track meet and led her volleyball team to the Class A finals, will play volleyball for Coach Linda Holme's state championship team. Stroud will also run for the women's track team.

Stooke said Stroud would compete in the hurdles, long jump and any sprinting event the Herd might need help in next season. Stroud ran 14.8 in the 110-meter low hurdles, long jumped 16'-11.75 and ran 11.9 in the 100 yard dash.

Stooke said with Stroud running the high hurdles, Donna Nutter, Nitro sophomore may be able to compete on a two-mile relay team. If that doesn't work out Nutter could concentrate on her other races, the 400-hurdles, 800-meters and the mile relay.

Ashland Oil gives $13,600 to Marshall

A $13,600 contribution for four student-support programs during the 1978-79 fiscal year has been received from The Ashland Oil Foundation, according to Dr. Bernard Queen, Marshall development director.

Queen said $5,000 is to be used for scholarships for third and fourth-year nursing students. Another $3,100 has been designated for graduate fellowships in the chemistry department, and $500 was awarded for the high school student summer research program in chemistry.

The remaining $5,000 has been allocated to the National Direct Student Loan Program.

The federal government will match the loan contribution 9-1, the results of which will yield $50,000 in loan funds for students.

The Ashland Oil Foundation contribution is in addition to previous corporate gifts of $35,100 from Ashland Oil, Inc.

Pay hikes

Pat Garvin, assistant director of finance, said she thinks it is a more equitable plan. "I think the Legislature intends the pay raises to be given on the first of July."

Garvin said she would like to see merit increases given as well. "Good work and dependability should be compensated. If the Legislature doesn't allow for it, there's no way they can get it."

An administrative secretary who asked to remain anonymous said she thought the money that had been allocated was distributed about as fairly as it could be and she prefers this system.

bleary-eyed and less than bushy-tailed when they took their seats for class Saturday. One student was overheard to remark that his Saturday class "was hell after Friday night."

Another student, Sallye Runyon, Huntington senior, said she would rather have stayed home watching cartoons Saturday morning, than attend her classes.

Evidently, some students did stay home on Saturday morning. Alan D. Williams, Rainelle sophomore, said only about one-fourth of the students showed up for the physics class he had from Dr. Manakkil. "In my philosophy class, we had to write a paper instead of attending the Saturday class," he said.

Not all instructors wanted to spend their Saturday in class, either. Debbie Arbogast, Beckley sophomore, said one of her instructors let the class out an hour early.

Mark Skiles, Huntington senior, said he had never had a Saturday class before. "Friday night makes a Saturday class tough," he commented. "I'd go on Sunday if they would let us out on Friday," he added. However, he also said that he was willing to go one Saturday for a long weekend.

One unidentified student asked why classes just weren't let out both Monday and Saturday.
