'Favoritism' hurts placement efforts

By ELIZABETH HOLROYD
Managing Editor

The Marshall University Placement Center would be more viable if individual members of department faculty and staff would report job opportunities, according to the center's assistant director, Terry L. Myers.

Myers said he has received complaints from students who say they have not been able to vie for certain jobs due to favoritism shown particular students.

He said some non-student members of the academic community apparently have not been releasing job opportunities to the entire student body, only telling one or two about these open jobs.

Myers said some departments and schools handle their own placements through faculty who have contacts with people in their field.

Myers said some departments have great success placing their own students, and do so in such a manner that each student has the same opportunity.

However, he said, some need to improve their methods.

"Anything we get goes public, anything they get should be too," Myers said, criticizing the tendency of some individuals in some departments to release job information to a few.

Myers said nothing could be done by the center to stop this type of favoritism.

He said all departments and schools at MU receive a weekly publication, also sent to about 725 alumni, which includes a listing of companies who have informed the center they need employees.

The publication, put together by center personnel, is sent to the alumni for at least six months following their graduation, and longer upon the request of an alumnus.

Myers said the center stays in close contact with various business concerns through affiliation with organizations such as the Tri-State Personnel Organization and the American Society of Personnel Administrators.

He said some students seem to be reluctant to relocate, which limits their job opportunities.

Center officials also sponsor seminars in which the marketability of different skills is the topic of discussion, Myers said.

He said one of the departments the center does the least with is liberal arts, "and yet, it is probably the one we should do the most with," he added.

Mail policy changed

By ALYCE COOPER
Editor

A system to determine how much money is being spent for postage has been instituted by Marshall officials to ascertain areas of possible future money savings.

Effective July 1, each piece of out-going mail handled by the university mailroom must have a three-digit department code below the return address, according to Harry E. Long, director of administrative services.

Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president for administration, said in the past three or four years the total expense budget has suffered due to high costs in the current expenses category. This includes travel, utilities, telephone and postage.

Because of severe winters and rising utility costs, he said he is attempting to find if savings are possible in the postage area of that category to compensate for increasing expenditures.

Egnatoff said he isn't sure when, if ever, each department will become responsible for its own mailing expenses.

"We are attempting to find where we are spending our postage dollar. If we can save in a particular area we will take advantage of that. We may find this to be an exercise in futility," he said.

As an example, Egnatoff said the bulk of mail leaving the university goes to Charleston. It could be cheaper to send a car from the university to Charleston than to utilize the U.S. Postal Service.

Another example already in effect is sending mail to the medical school by university messenger. He said this costs less than sending it through the postal service.

The codes will be monitored by the mailroom staff, he said. Machinery which can scan envelopes for the codes may be purchased later. He said if savings are possible by monitoring mail, the machinery would be purchased. "It's still early," Egnatoff said. "We won't know anything for about three months."

Multi-purpose facility work to begin this fall

By ALYCE COOPER
Editor

Groundbreaking for Marshall's multi-purpose facility should take place in November, immediately after a contract for construction is awarded, according to a university official.

Bids are expected to begin in September of this year with contracts awarded in November, according to Karl J. Egnatoff, vice president for administration.

Groundbreaking should occur immediately after the contract award with site work to begin before next winter, he said.

Currently architects are in the process of completing construction documents, detailed drawings locating utilities and mechanical systems.

Egnatoff said a narrative will be written describing the construction documents which will be submitted as a package for bids.

Egnatoff said he doesn't foresee any problems caused by beginning construction just before winter. He said the building will be located six feet below the basement level of Gullickson Hall. "If they get that hole dug they can protect it from the cold. It depends on the first real cold spell," he said, pointing out that in the past two years the most severe cold has not come until after Christmas.

"We could get lucky again," he added.

In the area of property acquisition, Egnatoff said university officials are "in various stages of acquiring both sides of Maple Avenue and final acquisition should be complete by the end of the summer term."

One-half of needed property on the north side of Sixth Avenue has been obtained, he said, adding that the south side of that avenue is not included in the facility plans.

Property for the baseball field is slated as the area between 18th and 19th Streets and Fifth and Sixth Avenues, Egnatoff said the university has acquired the building and property for what used to be the Horny Toad, and is still in need of the Exxon and Phillips 66 service stations in that block.

Egnatoff said Third Avenue property for the actual building site is already in university hands, but said negotiations continue for the south side of Fifth Avenue and Tanner's University Pharmacy on Sixth Avenue.

As property is acquired, it will be used for parking until all needed property is owned by the university.

Paraquat

Campus testing is possibility

By DIANE SLAUGHTER
Staff Writer

A paraquat testing station may be set up by the Marshall University Student Consumer Agency, according to Robert F. Lesh, agency director.

"Right now, the testing station is just in the planning stages," he said. "We have a lot of red tape to go through before we will see any results."

If the station is set up, Lesh said, the consumer will be able to send in a quantity of marijuana to be tested, along with a five-digit number for identification. After the test, the consumer can either call the agency and ask for the test results on the number or check a list which will be posted outside the Memorial Student Center Room 2W29, Lesh said.

If the paraquat station can be set up, Lesh said he will need volunteers to answer the telephones between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. He said that anyone interested in volunteering should contact him at 696-6435.

This is a consumer problem that will touch upon the lives of many Marshall students, Lesh said. "Right now this is one of our major concerns and one of our major projects in the consumer area," he added.

"Whether a person agrees with the use of pot, I feel they can see that the use of paraquat is a form of genocide against marijuana smokers," Lesh said.

"It's like taking one segment of society and saying what you're doing is wrong, so you will either change your ways or we will wipe you out."

The agency is also coming out with a booklet on how the consumer can be protected against rip-offs. Lesh said the booklet will be going to the printer's office soon.

He also said his office is still working with individual consumer complaints, acting as a mediator between the consumer and the company they're complaining against.

Maybe you CAN fight City Hall after all...

Whether or not one agrees with the aims of the recent attempts of the group calling itself Save Our City (SOC) to oust four members of Huntington City Council, one must at least admire the movement's perseverance in the face of many setbacks. They just keep on fighting.

The group seeks to unseat Mayor George Malott, Assistant Mayor Dean Sturm as well as Councilmen Harold Frankel and Robert Bailey. Their recent petition was recently ruled invalid by the auditor's office on a technicality involving the petition's signatures. The group is presently contesting the decision in court, hoping to get the signatures validated.

Even in a "free society", it is hard for the voice of the people to be heard. Very few organized groups of concerned citizens come forward to strongly take radical action. Even fewer of these groups escape the stranglehold of the bureaucratic red tape octopus our government has become.

But this dedicated group has withstood blows which would have splintered and destroyed other groups. We hope the SOC has the dedication and strength to see these setbacks through. It could mean renewed interest and participation in city government as well as an end to the unapproachable and unresponsive system of the present.

New deans . . .

. . . Rusche named to education

Philip Rusche has been selected as the new dean of the College of Education.

Rusche, former associate dean of the College of Education at Northeastern University in Boston, Mass., began at Marshall this week.

He replaces Dr. Jack Jervis.

Rusche explained that he applied for the MU position because he wanted to be affiliated with a smaller state school. Northeastern University is a private institution with an enrollment of 50,000.

Marshall provides an environment where students, faculty and administrators can relate on a personal level, Rusche said.

If one theme dominates in conversations with the new dean, it is his goal of reaching out.

Rusche foresees broader involvement between the community and MU's College of Education.

He explained that the trend is for more cooperation with educational related agencies such as the YMCA and mental health facilities.

Rusche stresses that an emphasis should be placed on field experiences.

Despite the fact that many schools of education are cutting back, Rusche said that he finds the College of Education "quite stable."

. . . Allen appointed to nursing post

The new Marshall School of Nursing dean began work Monday.

Dr. Virginia O. Allen said she felt the new organization of the school of nursing is a challenge, and said she hopes to help faculty and students work together to meet the needs of the area.

The former Head of the University of Vermont School of Nursing's two-year associate degree program said her primary goal is high quality in the Marshall undergraduate program.

Allen, who has her doctorate in education, said she has worked as a nurse and more recently in the field of nursing education and as a nursing education consultant.

The school came into existence July 1, she said, after having been instituted in December, 1977.

Formerly, it was a department consisting of two programs, with separate programs for the baccalaureate and associate degrees.

Allen said she was very interested in the baccalaureate, or upper division, program.

One of her first jobs will be to re-examine the criteria for accreditation cited by the National League of Nursing, according to Bonnie Douglas, associate professor of nursing. Allen said they hope to complete the criteria called for by the NLN in time to be ready for another visit from them in the fall of 1979.

Man fined in library incident

A Barbourville man was apprehended and charged with indecent exposure following an incident in the stacks of the Marshall University Library, according to security director Donald Salyers.

Magistrate court clerk Steve Carson said Robert A. Hanson, 31, of Main Street, a Barbourville minister, pled guilty to the July 10 incident involving a part-time female student from Ohio who was in the library doing graduate work.

Carson said Hanson was fined $5 and court costs by Magistrate John Miller.

In other security action, Salyers reported a total of $220 worth of goods and cash have been stolen from the medical school and the student center cafeteria since July 10.

He said a tool box worth $175 was taken from a storage closet in the medical school between July 10 and 12, and $45 in cash was taken from a locked file drawer in the student center cafeteria office between July 14 and 17, with no forced entry noticed at either site.

For more information, call Frank Hunter at 736-5261 or John McGarrity at 529-0604.

Director appointed

A Marshall professor of educational foundations has been appointed director of the School of Medicine's Medical Education Office, and will assume his new post immediately.

Dr. Robert W. Coon, Marshall medical school vice president and dean, announced the appointment of Joseph M. Lichtenstein to the position.

Coon said Lichtenstein "will be very valuable in helping us evaluate various program areas, including curriculum and student performances."

"He will develop instruments for the evaluation of our residency and continuing education programs, while helping faculty members with curriculum design."

Lichtenstein, a New York City native, began working for Marshall in the psychology department in 1946, and joined the College of Education faculty in 1959.

Camp draws 520 Converse-clad kids

By KEN SMITH
For The Parthenon

The pitter-patter of little feet is resounding through Gullickson Hall. And the owners of those Converse-clad appendages can be traced to the Stu Aberdeen Basketball camp, which is being conducted by the Marshall head roundball mentor this week through July 29.

Open to aspiring basketball enthusiasts aged 10 through 18, the boys' session will conclude Saturday. A week-long girls' camp will begin Sunday.

Approximately 520 campers are enrolled for both sessions, according to Sue Stone, Aberdeen's secretary. The children reside in Twin Towers and Hodges residence halls.

Cost for a week's stay at the camp is $135, which includes tuition, room, board, insurance and awards. The enterprise is independent of the university and makes "very little" profit, Stone said.

"The fees just go for the camp, housing meals, T-shirts, counselors and other expenses," she explained. "It's basically a non-profit venture."

According to the camp brochure, each student plays three games daily. The routine also includes five hours of instruction each day. Ball-handling and foul shooting contests also are on the agenda.

The coaching staff includes Aberdeen, who in his first season at Marshall led the Thundering Herd to a second-place finish in the Southern Conference Basketball tournament. According to the brochure, the former University of Tennessee assistant has had nearly 20 years experience in conducting basketball camps.

Herd associate head coach Bob Zuffelato, and assistant coaches C.J. Woollum and Carr McCalla round out the Marshall instructors.
