Budget allocations unequal to growth needs — Peters

By ELIZABETH HOLROYD
Reporter

Marshall's budget is not equal to the needs of the growing university, according to one university official.

Joseph C. Peters, vice president of financial affairs, said if Marshall were allocated $1 million now for salary increases, then received 10 percent yearly increases in the budget, finances could be equal to the needs of the university.

But this is not likely to happen.

Reacting to recent statements made by Marshall President Robert B. Hayes and West Virginia Governor Jay Rockefeller, Peters said all state agencies will have a tougher time in the future justifying their monetary needs.

Rockefeller, following a Governor's Day Brunch held Saturday, told reporters higher education will have an unstable financial period during the next decade. He also said "enrollment is down and the assumption of growth is no longer there," basing his statements on the finish of the post-war "baby boom" cycle.

The governor suggested plans for steady growth in institutions. Peters agreed with Rockefeller that the large growth period has stabilized, but foretold "small but regular increases" in enrollment at Marshall.

He said he believed changes made in the structures of colleges and departments, citing the Community College and the College of Science as examples, have resulted in programs more suited to the university's clientele, causing the enrollment outlook at Marshall to be favorable.

Hayes, during a faculty meeting Sept. 20, said the percentage of the state budget allocated for higher education has decreased approximately 33 percent since 1970-71.

Peters said part of the reason for the present attitude by the legislature is the taxpayer's revolt, which gained prominence following the passage of California's Proposition 13.

Peters said he felt the governor and legislators "are concerned individuals and I believe they are going to definitely do what they can" to help higher education.

However, Marshall has a monetary problem because inflation coupled with poor funding in the past has caused the school to be financially strapped, even when given yearly increases, Peters said.

Explaining why inflation and the past funding has affected the present budget, Peters said three to four years ago, library books cost approximately $12 per book. Now, he said, a book cost about $19.22. "We will never catch up on books," he said, because funding was not available in the past and costs keep going up.

"It is like that in everything," he said, specifying salaries, educational equipment, and faculty research as three crucial areas which need more funding.

Too many blown fuses

Laidley to make electrical alterations

Visions of fiery infernos faded slightly after a meeting of six Laidley Hall residents and Warren S. Myers, director of auxiliary services.

"He told us that it wasn't faulty wiring, but the fact that in the hot weather we had, everyone used more electricity and left us with less than we usually have," said Katrina A. Johnston, Williamson, senior, one of the Laidley Hall residents. "When we used the amount of electricity we always do, fuses blew," she added.

Myers said the reason for blowing so many fuses is hard to pinpoint. "It might be the use of several appliances at once, especially heat-producing appliances such as hair dryers and hot plates which pull more wattage."

"This happens occasionally in the other dorms too," Myers said. Myers said one possible solution to the problem is installing a vanity-type structure with electrical outlets, mirrors, and more lighting in each bathroom of the residence hall.

Myers said an electrician has reviewed the situation and will give an estimate of the costs involved in installing such fixtures this week.

Plans are to take out one bathtub in each of the five bathrooms to install the vanities. There would be two on second and third floors and one on the first floor.

Myers said even after the facilities are established, there is no assurance that power outages will not happen again.

"I don't think this will eliminate the problem. The idea is to provide a facility to use the hair dryers that will alleviate the problem," Myers said.

There is nothing wrong with the building's wiring and a deputy fire marshal examined the building and found it safe, according to Myers.

Johnston said, "I think it will help, but it depends on whether people will be willing to use the facilities once they are installed." "It's the only thing I can see that they can do," she added.

Moore queries merger effects of med schools

By JACQUELINE LLEWELLYN
Reporter

Former Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. does not oppose the merging of West Virginia's three medical schools under one administration, but he raised a serious question about its effect on Marshall.

During an impromptu press conference at the Tuesday opening of his Cabell County campaign headquarters, Moore pointed to the Veterans Administration's funding for MU's medical school. Moore said, "I do think it is important to retain the relationship between Marshall University and the Veterans Administration. Any consolidation should be discussed first with the VA so as not to jeopardize their funding of the medical school."

Moore stressed the importance of not prejudicing Marshall's position with the VA. "If VA funding were revoked, Marshall would have to be funded by the state legislature 100 percent, and that would mean a constant battle because the legislature has other priorities to consider."

Moore also promised to bring "the same commitment to education" that he showed while governor if he is elected on Nov. 7 to the U.S. Senate. Moore added, "Education has suffered under the present administration of Gov. Jay Rockefeller."

Asked the position on the tuition credit amendment presently before Congress, Moore replied, "I support it." This amendment would give tax credit to parents of students attending college.

The polls show Moore running a close race with incumbent U.S. Senator Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va.

Moore cited the main election issue as Randolph's competence. "I don't think the job is being done adequately. I don't believe the job has been undertaken with a measure of dedication," he said.

Moore accused Randolph of taking credit for highways, airports and other projects that Moore's administration built.

Moore named big government a key issue in his campaign. "Government has eroded the value of the dollar. Government is no longer the help-mate it was in the '30s. It is causing problems with all its regulations on free enterprise," he said.

Pot accessories ad creates controversy

By CINDY MARTIN
Staff Writer

A Parthenon advertisement has caused controversy concerning the acceptance of ads which feature items that can be used for illegal purposes.

The ad, which ran in last Friday's edition, announced a sale of several items of paraphernalia at a local store. The items, generally associated with the use of marijuana, were pictured prominently in the advertisement. Included were such devices as pipes, clips for holding the cigarettes, rolling papers, and bongs, which are similar to water pipes.

President Robert B. Hayes said he received several complaints about the ad's content following its publication. "Most of the callers felt the university should not be advertising drug related items. I personally don't think we ought to be in the business of advertising things that are illegal or have an illegal base."

Dr. Deryl R. Leaming, director of the School of Journalism, said that after learning of the complaints from Hayes, he met with journalism faculty members and Parthenon advertising manager Tom Drummond. "We agreed that we didn't really want to run ads like that—ads that blatantly advertise paraphernalia used for illegal purposes," he said.

Faculty members and Drummond agreed not to accept similar advertisements until some type of ad content policy could be established by the Board of Student Publications, a student-faculty standing committee which oversees The Parthenon and Chief Justice yearbook.

The Parthenon advertising policy states that the paper "reserves the right to edit or reject any copy." However, there is no policy concerning specific items contained in ads, such as paraphernalia, according to Drummond.

Ads for paraphernalia have run before in The Parthenon, Drummond said, "but we've never really run an ad for paraphernalia that large, or one that contained pictures."

Drummond said he based his acceptance of the ad on whether the contents would be offensive to the majority of the paper's readership.

Leaming said The Parthenon has a "social responsibility to deal with such advertisements. The Board of Student Publications needs to try and draft a careful policy for accepting or rejecting ads of that character, and I hope the members come to grips with the subject soon."

Below the belt

A prankster hit Marshall's athletic department right where it hurts — in the sign. This illuminated portable message board and its offbeat declaration were

Two MU football fans to run 72 miles for fund

By VICKI DEAN
Reporter

Two Marshall football boosters plan to run 72 miles so that athletic officials can take a leisurely stroll to the bank to deposit as much as $5,000 to the Scholarship Fund.

Ed Canterbury and Gene Curtis are planning on running 72 miles each within a 24 hour period beginning at 1 p.m. on Oct. 13.

The two men will alternate running one mile each around Marshall's quarter-mile track for pledges on the number of miles each can run. Their projected financial goal is $4,000 to $5,000.

The marathon will feature a grand finale of a lap around Fairfield Stadium before the kick-off of MU's Homecoming game against Miami of Ohio.

"I'm going to make one lap around that stadium even if it kills me," said Ed Canterbury, owner of the Little Shirt House and mastering of the money-making scheme.

Canterbury, a 1962 Marshall graduate with an associate degree in accounting, said he has received a couple of thousand dollars in pledges so far from friends alone.

"If I had the money I would write them a check," Canterbury said. "This is just a way of making them some money."

Both men have marathon experience and are doing nothing unusual in preparation for the upcoming run.

Canterbury is a 37-year-old who started running six years ago under a physician's orders to lose weight.

"I lost 85 pounds in 14 months, going from 250 to 165. When I first started I couldn't run one lap around Marshall's intramural field which is one-sixth mile," Canterbury said.

Now Canterbury says he runs three to four miles each morning in the woods accompanied by his Irish setter, Kelly, and seven to ten miles unaccompanied near his home in Spring Valley Drive for an average of 70 miles a week.

Canterbury speculated that since he has run in eight marathons, which is more than 26 non-stop miles, then "I figure I can triple that with rest in between miles."

His partner, Gene Curtis is a 1967 graduate of W.Va Institute of Technology but declares himself a Marshall fan because he has been a Huntington resident for eight years.

Curtis has been running long distance as a hobby for six years and has completed two 26-mile marathons.

He is attempting the grueling day-long run for two reasons. One is "just to see if I can do it," and the other is strength training for a Nov. 5 Marine Corps Reserve Marathon in Washington, D.C.

Thirty-three-year-old Curtis is a systems engineer for the general systems division of IBM.

What do MU athletic officials think of Curtis and Canterbury's exploits?

Athletic Director Joe McMullen said, "We're excited anytime anyone decides to help our cause. We need that scholarship money."

"I think it's great," said Executive Director of the Big Green Scholarship Foundation Joe Feaganes. "We appreciate what they're doing and wish them all the success in the world."

Feaganes stressed that the Big Green Club is not sponsoring the event. "It's a personal endeavor on the part of these two men. They're doing it on their own."

Caucuses will stand...

Student government elections will not be different this year after all.

In a special election Wednesday, a referendum calling for a change in constituency was defeated by five votes.

The referendum would have abolished the present caucus system. Senators are currently elected from the constituency of their residence. The three caucuses are residence halls, transient, and off-campus.

The defeated referendum would have had senators from academic categories, such as the College of Liberal Arts, College of Science, or College of Business.

Although the referendum obviously had its positive points, the original system of constituency serves the purpose better.

Constituency by location gives the student senator the best opportunity possible to serve the people he represents. People with similar living conditions tend to have similar problems and concerns, which can be aired at Student Senate meetings.

On the other hand, organization by academic divisions would not serve this same purpose effectively. For instance, the College of Liberal Arts encompasses such diverse elements as journalism and music. There are fewer common problems to be solved.

So, when we vote on Oct. 5, we will not be faced with a confusing new system. And with the confusion inherent in elections, it will be a relief.

...but who cares?

An important decision affecting Marshall Student Government was made Wednesday. A referendum changing the caucus system of Student Senate failed by a mere five votes.

This may sound like a close margin, considering all Marshall students were allowed to vote. But the total turnout for the elections was 51 voters.

Think about that: 51 voters. Remember that this university has more than 10,000 students.

That is a disgustingly small percentage. Much of the blame must rest on the shoulders of the student body. Marshall students are disinterested in politics. Voter turnouts are often discouragingly small.

The voting was held in a special election. The polling place was in the Memorial Student Center, giving most students easy access to cast their vote. Literally hundreds of students pass through those doors on any given Wednesday, many of them lingering in the building for long periods of time.

The only possible reason for the disappointing turnout is that the election was not too well organized. The issues were poorly publicized also.

Marshall students, not being political animals, need a little extra prodding to take action. Some publicity for this election, as well as more extensive discussion of the issues, might have saved it from being the colossal dud it was.

Take note, Student Government. And better luck next time.

Despite lingering absenteeism

Senate cleans up

After languishing for years as vituperative vehicle for various vested interests, Student Senate finally may be maturing into the responsible legislature it was meant to be.

The indefatigable journalist by Ken Smith, Editor

Tuesday's apparent expulsion of five senators for unexcused absences represents a long-awaited positive move for the normally chronically comatose congress. And despite poor execution of absence rules, hard enforcement of the guidelines undoubtedly will strengthen the rebuilding senate.

A governmental body is not an organization for the socially elite, nor is it a haven for megalomaniacs who seek mere recognition and power. Student government must have a high sense of responsibility to its constituents. Those who would interfere with the inherent integrity of such an office do not deserve to represent any segment of society.

A primary responsibility of a representative would seem to be faithful attendance and voting at all legislative functions. Neglect of this duty, regardless of the excuse, should be subject to immediate review by some overseeing board or committee.

In this spirit, the Tuesday expulsion of student senators is perfectly acceptable and even commendable. But the apparently hasty, unorganized removal of the alleged no-shows could cast some doubt upon the already questionable stability of Marshall's student senate.

Before such drastic action even is considered, authorities must determine if the allegations have factual basis. In Tuesday's tribulation, the Senate Rules Committee still had not checked the validity of the absentee senator's excuses — excuses that possibly could mitigate punitive action.

Illness and work obligation have been cited by two of the involved senators. While continual employment-senate conflicts may inhibit the effectiveness of any legislator, such excuses should be examined fully before any final decision is reached.

But even more disturbing than the situation's shoddy handling was the appalling apathy displayed at this week's senate meeting. Only five of 14 senators bothered to fulfill the function for which they were elected and attend the session.

Thus, attendance fell short of the seven senators necessary for a quorum. And when there's no quorum...

Student government officials can't be blamed for this debacle of democracy. Only the individual senators can determine how they can best serve their obligations to the students.

And neither Student Body President Ed Hamrick nor Senate President Rex Johnson should shoulder total responsibility for the hasty dismissals. The rules are the rules. Senators should abide by them.

If they don't, kick 'em out. It won't help to sweep the rancid refuse of irresponsibility under the rug.

Carter orders end to strike

WASHINGTON — President Carter stepped in Thursday to end a crippling nationwide rail strike by ordering rail clerks back to their jobs for 60 days.

But the head of the striking union refused to commit himself immediately to obeying the order.

The president said he was using his emergency powers to halt the three-day walkout because "we have almost a complete shutdown of rail service in our country."

The 42-state strike has tied up shipments of autos, food, coal and other vital freight shipments, forced some worker layoffs due to parts shortages, and stranded thousands of daily rail commuters.

"This will take the railroad workers back to the job," Carter said. "If there is opposition to this action then I would not hesitate to go to federal court to enforce it."

Fred Kroll, president of the striking clerks union, said in a statement following the president's announcement that the union "will determine its course of future action on the basis of the nature of the government's guarantees of a variety of protection for all railroad workers on the Norfolk & Western."

Carter ordered an end to the walkout under emergency powers provided by the National Railway Labor Act.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall announced earlier that government intervention was expected, telling reporters that his efforts to have the parties negotiate an agreement had failed.

The Norfolk and Western Railway and the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks "have been unable to reach an agreement during the past 26 hours," said Marshall.

The secretary said that earlier in the day the federal agency that mediates railroad disputes had recommended that the president move to halt the strike under the labor act.

Marshall had ordered the two sides to negotiate around the clock for 24 hours in hopes of reaching an agreement before a noon deadline. But, sources said, the secretary extended that deadline for another 90 minutes to make a final personal effort to mediate a settlement.

As an alternative, Carter could have asked Congress for emergency legislation to end the crippling strike.

Tuition credit bill awaits final approval

WASHINGTON — Senate and House conferees agreed Thursday on a bill that would allow a tax credit of up to $250 per student each year to help offset college tuition costs.

If the college credit wins final approval of the House and Senate, it will go to President Carter, who on several occasions has emphasized he opposes the tax-credit approach to education. He views the plan as wasteful because the credit would go to rich and poor alike without regard to need.

The compromise approved by the conference would be retroactive to Aug. 1, 1978, with a maximum credit of $100, and rise to $150 next year and to $250 in 1980.

The credit would be for 35 percent of expenditures for tuition, fees and certain other costs of vocational and college education. Half-time students would become eligible for the credit starting in 1980.

When fully effective, the credit would cost the government about $1 billion a year in lost tax revenues. The bill would end the credit Dec. 31, 1981.

Israel, Egypt cite no obstacle to peace treaty

WASHINGTON — President Carter, holding his first nationally televised news conference since the conclusion of the historic Camp David summit, said Thursday he has been assured there are no remaining obstacles to a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt.

Carter announced that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, brought together on foreign soil for the marathon 13-day summit, advised him they will begin treaty talks in about two weeks, adding that the United States will be "a full partner."

The impetus for the latest Middle East peace development, Carter said, was the Israeli Knesset's "courageous" action in approving withdrawal of Jewish settlements from the Sinai in return for a treaty — a prime ingredient in the Camp David accord.

The president said the assurances came from Sadat and Begin following the action by the Israeli parliament.

30,000 miners idle; output cut in half

When President Carter moved Thursday to end the nationwide railroad strike, half of West Virginia's coal production had been halted and 30,000 of the state's coal miners were idle.

As the nation waited for the immediate effect of Carter's action, Dan Fields, spokesman for the West Virginia Coal Association, said in Charleston that fully half of the state's coal miners were idle.

The only mines operating Thursday were those with room to stockpile coal and those which rely on truck and barge to move their production.

"There are at least some 30,000 miners affected by the rail strike," Fields said. "The northern part of the state is being impacted, but to what extent I can't say. A large portion of the mines up there ship by barge or by truck."

Until Wednesday, many of the mines in northern West Virginia had escaped involvement in the strike, which was expanded Tuesday by clerks of the Norfolk & Western Railroad to other lines, including the massive Chessie System.

About 15,000 West Virginia miners had been idled for more than two months by the N&W strike, but the remainder of the state had stayed in full production. That began to change Tuesday, and the impact grew virtually statewide Wednesday.

"It's all closed down," said Willis Cook, a Chessie spokesman in Huntington. "No trains are moving. The C&O, the B&O and the Western Maryland all are inactive."

The miners' idleness, he said, dropped production by half, to 1.2 million tons a week.

Len Gross, a spokesman for Consolidation Coal, one of the biggest coal companies, said eight of the company's mines were idle — six in southern West Virginia and two in eastern Ohio.

He said two Consol mines between Fairmont and Clarksburg "are stockpiling today, but we don't know how long we'll be able to do so."

Circus

By MIKE RUBEN
Sports Bureau Chief

Marshall's defensive secondary will not take a whip, chair or whistle onto the field, but they will be faced with the task of harnessing Western Carolina's aerial circus. Quarterback Mike Pusey is the ringleader of the Catamounts pass-and-catch offense. The 6-1, 200 pound junior passed for 1,939 yards and 13 touchdowns last year while being named to first team Southern Conference.

Herd football coach Frank Ellwood is well aware of the Catamounts "Ringling Brothers" type offense.

"Western Carolina's passing game is well executed and deadly," Ellwood said. Our secondary is in for a busy day as are our pass rushers. We must be extremely alert," he added.

In 1977, Pusey was ranked 14th in the nation in total offense per game (180.5 yards) and 17th in total passing (12.7 completions per game).

Pusey is up to his old tricks again this year. In four games he has thrown for 708 yards and four touchdowns.

Catamount back Gerald Harp has been Pusey's main target this fall. Harp has collected 17 passes for 320 yards and five touchdowns. The air show doesn't stop there. Fred Meadows has caught 13 Pusey passes for 220 yards.

Herd travels to tackle Carolina aerial show

The Catamounts dropped consecutive losses to East Carolina (14-6), Tennessee Tech (22-20), and East Tennessee State (21-14) before topping Elon College 17-7 last Saturday.

Western Carolina rolled to five consecutive victories at the end of last season, giving them a 6-4-1 overall record and a 2-2-1 mark in the Southern Conference. The Catamounts routed the Herd 41-26 on a snowy afternoon at Fairfield Stadium in 1977.

In that game, Pusey passed 37 times for 17 completions and two touchdowns.

Despite giving conference powerhouse University-Tennessee at Chattanooga all they could handle in a 27-23 loss last Saturday, the Herd ranks at the bottom of the SC standings (0-2).

Pusey and Ellwood had praise for MU's play in the heartbreaking last minute loss to the Moccasins.

"I saw the game films of the Chattanooga game, I thought Marshall played well enough to win, it is always rough when you lose a game like that," Pusey said. "Marshall's defense really surprised me, they played a tough game."

"Our players must bounce back from a very disappointing loss. The effort was there," said Ellwood. "We hit, played together and played with enthusiasm against UT Chattanooga," he said.

I thought the script was written that it would take a freak play to win," Ellwood said. "That's what they got on that pass play (a 77-yard pass from Dennis Berkery to Joe Burke with 1:40 left in the game)," he said.

Individually for the Thundering Herd, Danny Wright leads in rushing with 196 yards on 60 carries. The sophomore from Greenup, Ky., has completed 16 of 34 passes for 242 yards.

C.W. Geiger has compiled 164 yards on 40 carries for a 4.1 yards per carry average.

Todd Ellwood continues to be Wright's top receiver. The victory in Southern Conference competition in the first of a two-game SC road trip. Marshall will travel to The Citadel in Charleston, S.C., next week.

A 7 p.m. kickoff is scheduled for the Western Carolina-Marshall game at E.J. Whitmire Stadium in Cullowhee, N.C.

Harriers' top runners to face tough competition

By SCOTT BARTON
Reporter

The first of three big weekends for the Marshall cross country team begins Saturday at the Malone Invitational, according to Coach Rod O'Donnell.

After Malone, Marshall travels to the Notre Dame Invitational and the Virginia Tech Invitational. The Herd expects to run against top competition in each meet, O'Donnell said.

The strongest teams at Malone are expected to be Marshall, Akron University, Mount Union College, Wright State University, and Malone College, according to Jack Hazen, head coach of Malone.

Defending champion Cleveland State withdrew from the meet Tuesday because of too many tickets during a seven day span, Hazen said.

Marshall finished second last year and O'Donnell said the key to winning this year's meet would depend on the time difference between the first and fifth finishers for Marshall.

O'Donnell said Kim Nutter, Parkersburg junior, should be rated as one of the favorites for the individual title. Nutter won last week's dual meet against Rio Grande, and was only 11 seconds off the Riviera Country Club five-mile course record.

Hazen said other favorites besides runners from Marshall will be Nate Ritchie of Akron and Jerry Marshall of Malone. Ritchie finished 20th in last year's meet, while Marshall finished 14th.

Marshall has been running without the services of at least two top runners each meet. This week six of the top seven will be running, with the seventh man being a possibility, O'Donnell said.

"John has improved a lot this week, and could run. Even if he's 99 percent ready, he won't run. I want him 100 percent ready for Notre Dame," O'Donnell said.

After 'easy' opponents

Netters to face 'tough' trio

The women's tennis team could be experiencing the calm before the storm in the next two weeks, according to tennis coach Joan Brisbin. This weekend will be the calm, as the netters face Northern Kentucky today and Morris Harvey on Saturday.

"We should beat both these teams," Brisbin said. "I am not expecting too much trouble this weekend."

The storm will come next week when the team faces West Virginia University, and Eastern Kentucky, Brisbin said. "All these teams will be tough," she said.

As for this weekend's opponents, both fell to Marshall last year; Northern Kentucky by 9-0, and Morris Harvey by scores of 8-1 and 7-0. Brisbin said these teams do have some capable players.

"Morris Harvey has a strong player in Lynn Fish," Brisbin

1,500 attend Bostock funeral

LOS ANGELES AP — Funeral services were held Thursday for California Angels baseball star Lyman Bostock.

Bostock, 27, was shot to death Saturday night while riding in a car in Gary, Ind. After three seasons with the Minnesota Twins, he had signed a five-year contract with the Angels calling for $2.7 million.

There was a standing room throng of about 1,000 for the services at the Vermont Square United Methodist Church and another 500 were outside.

Returning wrestlers bolster MU's hopes

By TOM GALVIN
Reporter

Eight lettermen return to Marshall's third-place Southern Conference wrestling team, according to Coach Bob Barnett.

Returning are Chap Fay, 118-pound Barboursville senior; Scott Sadler, 126-pound Charleston junior; Ralph Truitt, 142-pound Canton, Ohio, sophomore; Dan Coyle, 167-pound Sayreville, N.J., senior; David Coyle, 177-pound Sayreville, N.J., senior, and Ernie Sparks, heavyweight, Barboursville — sophomore. Also returning are Gary Palitto, 150-pound Iselin, N.J., senior and Jim Walters, 158-pound Barboursville senior.

"We should come out OK," Barnett said. "Right now it looks like we have 10 or 15 new wrestlers this year, including recruits and walk-ons."

"As of now we cannot have any organized practices until everyone has a physical by the doctor," Barnett added. "It is an athletic department rule."

Volleyball team hosts tri-match here Saturday

The women's volleyball team will host a triangular match Saturday in Gullickson Hall at 11 a.m.

The team will play University of Louisville and Xavier University.

Marshall has beaten the University of Louisville once at Louisville and Coach Linda Holmes said she looks for another victory. "Louisville is a good team with good personnel and we will have to play well to win," Holmes said.

Marshall has never played Xavier University. "Xavier is from around Cincinnati and that's an area that always has very strong volleyball teams," Holmes said.

The MU women's record is now 8-5.

Artists to conduct workshops

Gallery exhibit to open

David Shapiro and Christopher Wilmarth, nationally acclaimed visual artists, will open a joint exhibit of their works Sunday in the Marshall University Student Art Gallery.

The exhibit, "David Shapiro and Christopher Wilmarth: Works on Paper," will coincide with a Huntington Galleries exhibit, "Dialogue." The Galleries exhibit features eight paintings by Shapiro and seven steel/glass constructions by Wilmarth. When "Works on Paper" closes at Marshall, it will move to the Huntington Galleries as a companion exhibit to "Dialogue."

The Institute, in conjunction with the Marshall Art Department and the Galleries, is sponsoring the campus exhibit. The Galleries exhibit has been made possible through a grant from the West Virginia Arts and Humanities Commission.

The theme for the exhibitions, according to Fred Gros, Huntington Galleries education curator, is "dialogue between artists and the public, between other artists, and between Marshall University and the Huntington Galleries."

In addition to the exhibits, the artists will be conducting workshops at both Marshall and the Galleries. Monday Shapiro will speak on "Two and Three Dimensional Design," in Smith Hall Room 628. Both workshops begin at 10 a.m.

Public workshops are scheduled at the Galleries through the weekend. Information may be obtained by calling the Galleries at 529-7201.

A preview of the exhibit and a reception for the artists is scheduled from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Student Art Gallery, located on the first floor of Smith Hall.

Old Main VA office to relocate

The Veterans Administration office in Old Main Room 234 will be relocated beginning Monday, according to Bernard Gebhart, veterans representative.

The new office will be located at 502 Eighth St. Gebhart can be contacted there at 529-5008.

The Veterans Administration office was located on campus for four years, but is closing because of budget restrictions within the VA, Gebhart said.

"Since the regional office is so close to Marshall it seemed the logical thing to do," he said.

Science Building for rushees extended bids.

Prospective rushees will be extended bids in the auditorium by fraternity presidents and rush chairmen. Individuals receiving more than one bid must choose a fraternity at this time, according to Hager.

Upon collecting bids, a fee of two dollars is required, which goes to the council, Hager added.

After deciding what bid to accept, the rushees will follow the president of the fraternity they have chosen outside the Science Building.

Outside the building, all the fraternities will be grouped accordingly, waiting to greet their new "brothers."

To officially welcome the new members, they are thrown-up in the air by their "brothers" who are grouped around them.

Low graduate salaries concern student leader

By VICCI LAWRENCE Reporter

The newly elected president of the Graduate Student Association says he plans to check into the low salaries that graduate assistants receive.

Gregory McGlone, graduate assistant in speech, said he would also like to set up social activities in order for the organization to become more active and visible on campus.

Other officers elected last week include Don Patton, vice-president; Barbara L. Boyer, secretary, and Joe Iginosum, treasurer. Resident director of South Hall Nick Maddox was selected student representative of the organization.

The first meeting of the group will be Monday at 9:10 p.m. at Memorial Student Center Room 2E11. The purpose of the meeting will be to obtain ideas and suggestions that will upgrade the graduate program, according to Patton. All graduate students on campus are members of the organization, he added.

GRAFYX is dedicated TO PEOPLE WHO BELIEVE IN MUSIC.

Through the ages, man has developed rhythm and rhyme in his lifestyle. Before the use of stereo equipment, he had to hear most music live, or not at all.

Nowadays, we live in a recorded world of music except that sometimes we have to hear music through the noise and distortion of outdated or faulty equipment. Well, now GRAFYX — the makers of the Standard of Performance speakers have dedicated themselves to improve the quality of music brought to you by making quality speaker systems and by bringing them to you at a cost so low you might just think they made a mistake. No mistake. Just honest dedication to the cause . . . MUSIC. They recognize that there are a lot of people out there who love their music and deserve more for their money — like clean and accurate sound reproduction.

The GRAFYX-SP speaker is the most accurate speaker on the market for the money. No one beats it! That means that you hear every instrument, every voice, everything that was recorded. The only thing they left out was the noise, distortion, and the headaches.
